SUIT CASE GIRL KNOWN, HER FIANCE ARRESTED

Boston Mystery Victim Was a Cambridge Chorus Girl.

SANG IN "SHEPHERD KING"

Rings Identified by Her Mother—Prisoner Secretary of Theatrical Company's Manager.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 29.—The victim of the suit case tragedy has been identified as Susannah Geary of Cambridge, a chorus girl in the "Shepherd King" company. Her stage name was Ethel Durrell.

The identification was made to-day by the girl's mother and sister, who called at Police Headquarters, and positively declared that the three rings which were found on the hand of the body were Susannah's.

It was felt on Friday when the second suit case, containing the girl's arms and legs, came to the surface of the harbor and was found by some lightermen, that the mystery would soon be solved, even without the head, which doubtless lies in a third suit case at the bottom.

It was on Sept. 21 that the first suit cass with its contents, the trunk of a body, was found in the water off Winthrop. There was no mark of identification whatever, and had it not been for the blunder of the person who dismembered the body in leaving the rings upon the fingers the mystery might never have been solved.

Miss Geary was 20 years old, the daughter of John D. Geary, and had been on the stage only a few months. When "The Shepherd King" was at the Majestic Theatre last Spring Miss Geary joined the chorus. Morris Nathan, a Boston youth, secretary to the manager of the company, formed an attachment for her which she evidently reciprocated, for he declares in an interview telegraphed from Pittsburg, where "The Shepherd King" is now playing, that he was to have married her in the Autumn. Last July, however, something clouded the girl's life. Her mother says she appeared nervous and began to exhibit sadness. On Sept. 9 Miss Geary failed to appear at the theatre. Neither her parents nor her friends in the company knew her whereabouts.

When the manager of the company received by mail what purported to be a physician's certificate stating that the girl was ill, Mr. Nathan traced it, only to find that there was no such physician. Since then he has frequently visited the Geary home, consulting as to the means of tracing the girl.

When they became convinced that the girl whose dismembered body had been in Boston Harbor six weeks was their Susannah, the family telegraphed Mr. Nathan to come East. He replied that he saw no need of it. The father then wired: "Come, or I will come after you." Nathan, Pittsburg advices say, has engaged counsel there to protect his rights.

There is thus far no clue to the person who performed the operation which caused the girl's death, nor the place where her body was cut up.

Mrs. Catherine Geary, the girl's mother, said to-night:

"My daughter complained of pains in her side just before she went away, and I think she might have been operated upon for appendicitis, and the doctor having made an unsuccessful operation cut her up."

Mrs. Geary said that when on one occasion a girl friend of her daughter disappeared Susie said: "Mother, don't say anything to any reporter about me if I should go away any time, because if you do I shall never come back."

Mrs. Geary says she thought the remark a strange one, but considering that Susie was nervous she attached little weight to it at the time.

On Sept. 29, the day before the first suitcase containing the torso was found, Mrs. Geary received a note from her daughter, postmarked in Salem. It was a brief note, saying that she had been ill and asking that any letters that might come for her be held until her return home.

"Don't write to me here," she said.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Monday, Oct. 30.—Morris Nathan, secretary to the manager of "The Shepherd King" company, and fiancé of Susannah Geary, the Boston suit case victim, was taken into custody at midnight at the telegraphed request of Police Inspector Adams of Boston.

Manager B. A. Reinold of the company is in conference with Thomas McQuade, Superintendent of detectives.

Nathan had a soiled piece of paper purporting to be a doctor's certificate. It is signed F. M. Smith, M. D. The letterhead, for such it is, has the top torn off, and there is nothing to indicate whence it came or the residence of the person who signed it.

This alleged certificate was known to be in his possession, because on Saturday Nathan received a telegram, signed Miss Evelyn Geary, Boston, requesting him to return to Boston immediately and to bring the doctor's certificate with him. Nathan was prevented from doing this by Manager Reinold, and instead forwarded a telegram to Miss Geary, asking her what was wanted of him. He has not received any reply to this message.

Nathan declared to the police that he knew nothing of Miss Durrell's whereabouts after she left him on the night of Sept. 9 at a Boston suhway station. She was bound for home, and he went in another direction with Josie Barren, another member of "The Shepherd King" company.

REAL ESTATE MAN A SUICIDE.

Invited Friends to Dinner, but Was Dead When They Arrived.

Daniel Dermody, 62 years old, a well-to-do retired real estate dealer, living at 19 East 127th Street, was found dead in his room at 1:45 o'clock this morning with a bullet wound under his ear. It is believed that he committed suicide. Mr. Dermody lived with his son-in-law, James McLaughlin, and had invited several members of the family and relatives to have dinner with him yesterday.

At the dinner hour the host did not appear, and Mr. McLaughlin said he supposed that he had gone out on business and would return. As the hours went by and he did not return a search was made of the neighborhood without result. One of the members of the household found that the door to Mr. Dermody's room was locked from the inside, and it was broken open. His body was on the bed.

Mr. McLaughlin said his father-in-law had never fully recovered from the shock of the death of his wife seven years ago.

LOCKWOOD IN CHARGE AT THE VON HOFFMAN

But Mrs. Howe Still Holds Mrs. Todd's Rooms.

FUNERAL TO BE HELD TO-DAY

All the Factions Will Meet and the Lawyer May Be Asked to Show His Papers.

All was quiet yesterday and last night in the Von Hoffman apartment house, 29 West Twenty-sixth Street, the property of Mrs. Margaret Todd, who was killed on the Reading Railroad near Fairmount Park, Philadelphia, on Friday night. The relatives and friends and attorneys, among whom there seemed to be a bitter fight Saturday as to who was to take charge of the place, were not fighting yesterday. Ingersoll Lockwood, who was Mrs. Todd's lawyer until last Summer, seemed to be in charge of affairs.

"Boys," said Mr. Lockwood to the reporters, "there was no trouble at all Saturday, as the papers indicated. You see, George Hastings is the personal attorney of Mrs. Frank Tousey, only daughter of the deceased and chief beneficiary of her will, which I have. So he just came around Saturday to see how things were going on.

"Mrs. George B. Howe, stepdaughter of Mrs. Todd, rushed down here Saturday and took possession of her three rooms and all that is in them, including papers of the deceased, refused to see me, and employed two detectives to guard her.

"Now, I am named in the will as a sort of trustee or overseer of this place upon the death of Mrs. Todd, and I took charge at once. I shall not fight with Mrs. Howe. She is hysterical, and so I shall allow her to remain in the rooms until this matter is settled. Mrs. Tousey will return from Vienna in a couple of weeks, and then everything will be settled up.

"Mr. Sinclair Tousey is a brother of Mrs. Tousey, so that his appearance Saturday was not significant. And I assure you there is no misunderstanding among us. I have had several conferences with Mrs. Howe, Mr. Hastings, and Mr. Tousey. I am to take charge of this place; I am in charge."

Mr. Lockwood looked around at George Amory, who has said that he was Mrs. Todd's business manager, and gave him an order. Mr. Amory quickly executed it. On Saturday Mr. Hastings was in the house giving orders at times, sometimes Mr. Tousey, and sometimes Mr. Lockwood.

Mrs. Howe is still in possession of Mrs. Todd's rooms. She sends out for her meals. The caretaker of Mrs. Howe's rooms at 152 West Forty-ninth Street said that Mrs. Howe expected to remain at the Von Hoffman until Mrs. Tousey comes home.

Mrs. Todd's body will be placed in a receiving vault at Woodlawn Cemetery today for keeping until Mrs. Tousey comes to decide upon its permanent disposition. At the funeral Messrs. Lockwood, Hastings, Tousey, and Heil, and Mrs. Howe will appear. It is said that Mr. Lockwood will be asked to show the papers which he says entitle him to take charge of Mrs. Todd's estate, including the Von Hoffman.

GAVE UP RICHES FOR GIRL.

J. A. Bloch Married a Christian Despite Uncle's Offer of $1,000,000.

WHEELING, W. Va., Oct. 29.—Jesse Aaron Bloch, a vice president of the Bloch Brothers Tobacco Company, of which his father, S. S. Bloch, is the president, is said to have refused more than $1,000,000 offered by an uncle if he would marry a Jewess.

He was married in the Vance Memorial Presbyterian Church here last Wednesday to Miss Jessie Thornton Moffatt by the Rev. Dr. Charles H. McDonald. The bride is a niece of the Rev. Dr. J. D. Moffatt, President of the Washington-Jefferson College and Moderator of the National Presbyterian Assembly. Bloch has espoused Christianity.

The uncle, Aaron Bloch, died in New York two years ago. He offered to the young man more than $1,000,000 if he would abandon his plan to marry a Gentile girl. Young Bloch refused.

DOG AND CAT TENDED BABY.

Roused Tenant Found Four-Hour-Old Child in Hallway.

The occupants of the tenement house at 652 East Sixteenth Street were aroused before 7 o'clock yesterday morning by the loud barking of a dog. A Mrs. Ward, who lived on the first floor, went into the hall to see what the noise was about and stumbled against a perambulator. At the foot of it sat a great white cat purring, while in the vehicle was a tiny baby.

The youngster, though in fine health, was taken to Bellevue, the dog following the ambulance. The white cat lost herself in the cellar.

SPEAKER MAY OPPOSE PRESIDENT ON RATES

Remark Indicates That He Will Abandon His Former Stand.

WILLIAMS WITH ROOSEVELT

Democratic Leader May Head the House Forces That Fight for the President's Policy.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—From a source close to Speaker Cannon comes information to-night indicating that he will break with the President on railroad rate legislation. It was Speaker Cannon who jammed the Esch-Townsend bill through the last Congress. He is quoted as having said recently to a person in his confidence:

"No bill on the lines of the Esch-Townsend bill can pass the House at this session."

This information was drawn out to-night in consequence of general interest excited by a declaration made by John Sharp Williams, the Democratic leader, strongly supporting the President. Should Mr. Cannon break away, the curious spectacle may be seen in the coming session of Congress of a Democratic leader heading the fight for the chief measure proposed by a Republican President.

It is not certain whether Mr. Cannon meant that he had abandoned the President or was merely afraid that he could not control the House. The presumption is strong in favor of the former, as it has been said that the Speaker's heart was not in the fight he made last Winter.

He took his stand after a meeting at the White House at which the President let it be known that he was not very urgent for tariff revision. Mr. Cannon is a stand patter of the strongest sort, and was willing to support a railroad rate bill, or anything else, rather than have the tariff disturbed. The President dropped the tariff, and Mr. Cannon immediately took charge of the railroad rate bill.

That party lines in the House will be practically obliterated in the railroad rate fight is shown by a statement made by John Sharp Williams, the Democratic leader, to The New Orleans Picayune. He not only praised the President and his policy on this question, but significantly warned Congressmen against opposing him on "plausible pretexts."

This pronouncement has visibly perturbed Republican foes of the President. Although Mr. Bryan, Mr. Williams, and others had praised the President's policy on rates, on the ground that it was really a Democratic policy, these men had hoped that the minority would balk at the exact measure desired by Mr. Roosevelt.

They will undoubtedly introduce and speak for such a bill, but Mr. Williams's utterance makes it clear to those who have been awaiting it that they will not defeat the President's bill if the decision rests with them. Their course is now expected to be like that which they pursued with regard to the Cuban Reciprocity bill, when they argued and voted for their amendment, and when it was defeated supported the Administration measures as the best obtainable.

Williams's leadership of the minority in the next House is looked upon as certain, the opposition having died away, and his control is not expected to be any less complete than it has been in the past. On practically everything he has held the Democrats solid, with the exception of the infinitesimal minority affiliated with Representative Hearst.

If the Senate Democrats were in the same shape, the President's rate policy could be looked upon as having a fair chance. But the Senate Democrats are still leaderless. Every man decides party policies for himself. It is a question whether a majority of the Democrats are not as thoroughly hostile to railroad agitation as are the majority of the Republicans. Certain it is that a very large number of them are against it, and this includes some who for the sake of appearances talk in favor of it.

Senator Morgan of Alabama is outspoken on the subject. He is practically an independent, though registered as a Democrat, and he votes for Republican measures quite as often as for bills bearing the stamp of the Democratic caucus. In an interview to-night, opposing the President's plan, he said:

"This proposed National legislation resolves itself into a question of Constitutional rights and powers between the States and the National Government.

"Were a National commission to have power to fix inter-State rates this would become a prominent feature in National politics, with all the evils of wire-pulling and rivalry of interests that would entail. Following Federal control of railway rates on the same principle would come the Federal regulation of quarantine, next insurance companies, next divorce laws, then public roads, and so on. The thing runs to unimaginable lengths.

"This is substitution of Federal control for State control. The trend of all this is leading this country to an imperial, consolidated Government, although we have a Constitution made on purpose to prevent that very thing."

TO DEFEND CUBA'S TREATY.

American Shipping Men Declared to be Behind the Opposition.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—It is becoming more and more evident that the friends of the pending commercial treaty between Great Britain and Cuba are prepared to make a vigorous fight for its ratification, and, if opposition from the United States continues to develop, some plain things are likely to be said which will not be entirely complimentary to certain American interests.

The treaty is not without earnest supporters in Washington, who are keeping strict watch of any developments in its status.

"It simply amounts to this," said one of them to-day, a man who is in position to speak with authority; "shall the Republic of Cuba have the chance to develop and stand by herself or shall she become merely the ward of this country, perhaps be annexed to it, to satisfy the avarice of a single corporation or perhaps two?

"The treaty is exactly the same as the one between Italy and Cuba. Not a word was said against that treaty. And why? Because Italy has no ships that interfere with the business of these lines now inspiring the opposition to the treaty with Great Britain. These lines want a monopoly of all the Cuban business. That is all the milk in the cocoanut."

TOGO THANKS THE DEAD.

Addresses the Spirits of the Sailors Who Fell in the War.

TOKIO, Oct. 29.—The great Shinto rites in memory of the naval officers and men who were killed in the war were held today at Aoyama Cemetery. Besides the Admirals, other officers, and sailors, hundreds of civil dignitaries were present.

Admiral Togo addressed the departed spirits, eulogizing their noble deeds in battle and the gallantry which resulted in the sacrifice of their lives. He humbly asked repose for the spirits, whose exemplary deeds in life had contributed to the victory over a powerful enemy.

While reading his address Admiral Togo was seen to be stirred with strong emotion, which was in contrast with his calm demeanor while on the bridge of the Mikasa during the hottest battles. The ceremony was most impressive and calculated to leave a lasting impression on those who witnessed it. Thousands of sailors marched to the cemetery, and afterward to the Naval Club.

BUSINESS IN ENGLAND.

Boom Continues—Many New Orders for Iron and Steel Goods.

LONDON TIMES—NEW YORK TIMES Special Cable. Copyright, 1905.

LONDON, Oct. 29.—The Times in its financial supplement to-morrow will say:

"This week's industrial and trade reports indicate continued expansion both for home and foreign account. There is here and there evidence of a speculative spirit, but sound consumption requirements are almost entirely responsible for the present conditions.

"The grain markets are all considerably higher, with increased business, the Russian situation contributing materially to the stronger tone.

"The cotton trade has been irregular. The raw material again ruled materially higher, with much excitement in the speculative department owing to the crop news. Yarns have been difficult to sell and profit margins have become unsatisfactory. The cloth business has been impeded by the advance in prices, but considerable trade with Eastern countries is waiting for more advantageous buying opportunities.

"Wool is very firm in spite of the hand-to-mouth buying by manufacturers. The woolen industries are generally in a good condition, with business still increasing.

"Pig iron has fluctuated considerably in the speculative departments. Hematite is firm. Advances are reported in finished iron and steel products and new business comes forward on a large scale.

"There are fewer shipbuilding orders, but some Clyde yards have contracts sufficient to keep them busy for two years.

"The metal markets have shown considerable irregularity, but are generally higher."

Little Girl Killed at Funeral.

Through the sudden opening of a coach door, Norah Carey, 4 years old, of 159 East Ninety-ninth Street, was hurled out into the road yesterday afternoon and broke her neck. Mrs. Patrick Carey had been to a funeral at St. Raymond's Cemetery, Westchester, with her three children. As the coach was crossing 129th Street Norah stood up and looked out. The door opened and she fell into the road, dying instantly.

LOW HEADS NEW BODY TO PURIFY ELECTIONS

State Committee to Work for Revised Corrupt Practices Act.

TO ASK CANDIDATES' VIEWS

Circular Letter Seeks to Put Legislative Nominees on Record—Vote-Buying Increases, Says ex-Mayor.

An association, of which ex-Mayor Seth Low is Chairman, has been formed for the purpose of preventing corrupt practices at elections. At his residence, 30 East Sixty-fourth Street, Mr. Low last night gave out the following as the present membership of the General Committee in this city:

J. G. Agar,	John G. Milburn,
Frederick Allen,	Robert Grier Monroe,
N. M. Butler,	John Hill Morgan,
Nicholas Murray,	George McAneny,
H. De Forest Baldwin,	Jamee McKeen,
James Byrne,	Wm. Church Osborn,
Henry Batterman,	Herbert Parsons,
R. Fulton Cutting,	M. Warley Platzek,
Gherardi Davis,	Isaac N. Seligman,
Cleveland H. Dodge,	James R. Sheffield,
Stuyvesant Fish,	Lincoln Steffan,
A. B. Hepburn,	William Carey Sanger,
Wm. B. Hornblower,	Edward M. Shepard,
D Cady Herrick,	Isidor Straus,
A. A. Healey,	William Williams,
Francis B. Harrison,	T. M. Wainwright,
Seth Low,	Charles H. Young.

There are also sixteen members representing cities up the State. A committee on statutes has been formed of the following lawyers: Gherardi Davis, D Cady Herrick, William Williams, Francis Burton Harrison, and Charles H. Young. Mr. Low said:

"Those who have formed this body believe that the growing use of money in large sums in the conduct of political campaigns has been accompanied by increasing demoralization of the electorate in the cities and also in the country districts of the State. It is believed that this present is a favorable moment to secure action from the Legislature, a really efficient corrupt practices act."

A circular is to be sent to-day to every candidate for the Legislature requesting answer to certain questions, substantially as follows:

What do you think of the propriety of prohibiting contributions to campaign funds by corporations?

What do you think of the propriety of calling for the publication of detailed accounts by all candidates and political committees?

Can you suggest a simple procedure to enable citizens to secure inquiry through the courts into questions relative to campaign contributions?

Give us your views on limiting and defining legitimate campaign expenses?

The association already has had compiled all recent legislation on prevention and punishment of corrupt practices at elections in this country, Canada, and Great Britain.

GIANT WAVE SWEEPS YACHT IN MIDOCEAN

Man Washed Overboard and Two Stunned on A. C. James's Aloha.

RESCUERS BATTLE WITH SEAS

Seaman Anderson Saved After Twenty Minutes' Struggle—Bits of Wreckage Sighted on Voyage.

The auxiliary yacht Aloha belonging to Arthur Curtiss James of the New York, Atlantic, and Seawanaka-Corinthian Yacht Clubs, arrived yesterday at Tebo's Yacht Basin, Brooklyn, from Southampton, England, after one of the stormiest voyages experienced by an American yacht in many years. In mid-ocean the Aloha poked her nose into a southeaster that soon grew into a full-fledged hurricane, during which the Aloha was hove to for over four days.

On Oct. 14, a few minutes before midnight, three members of the crew were hauling down the outer jib, when a big wave curled over the Aloha forward, carrying a sailor into the sea and knocking two others to the deck.

Capt. Bezanson was on deck at the time, but far enough aft to escape the torrent that swept over the yacht. He ran forward and found two men unconscious and another floundering in the sea. The crew threw five life preservers near where the seaman, Andrew Anderson, was fighting for his life. Anderson was unable to get any of the life preservers, all of which were swept away from him by the great waves.

There was no time to be lost, and Capt. Bezanson shouted to his men to launch a lifeboat and assigned his brother, Clifford Bezanson, the boatswain, to take command of it. The sailors on deck shouted encouragement, and the struggling man answered that he was all right, provided the life crew hurried. He had got rid of his storm boots and coat by this time, and was fighting to hold his place close to where the Aloha was rolling and pitching in the sea.

The life crew did not wait to launch a regular lifeboat, but cut down the dinghy, which they were in before it had time to settle in the water. In the meantime the searchlight had been focused on Anderson, so that the life-savers, by following the shaft of light, would be sure to find him. Oil was poured on the water to smoothe the way. The sailors on deck shouted encouragement, and the struggling man answered. It required twenty minutes for the life crew to cover the distance between the yacht and the seaman. They dragged him into the boat almost exhausted. Had the lifeboat been three minutes later, it was said, the man would have been lost.

Yesterday, when the yacht tied up in the basin Anderson was at his post. The two other sailors who were hit by the wave were apparently as well as ever.

The Aloha sailed from New York on July 27 with Mr. and Mrs. James and a party of friends. After cruising about the Irish coast and in the Scottish lochs the yacht proceeded to Southampton, where Mr. James and his guests left her. She went into dry dock there, and on Oct. 6 sailed for New York. On the homeward voyage the yacht passed a piece of wreckage marked Maria Margaretto, and also a hatch on which was painted the name Three Brothers. A deserted fisherman's dory was sighted off the Grand Banks.

Surveyor Hurt at New Ferry.

Harry Rose of 226 Madison Avenue, a surveyor for the city Dock Department, was badly injured last night at the new municipal ferry slip at St. George, S. I., while taking measurements along the dock. Beside the pier was a raft, and it is supposed that Rose received his injuries in jumping from the stringpiece onto the raft.

Three of his ribs were broken.

YEAR'S LAST RACE MEET TO OPEN THIS WEEK

BUSY PERIOD FOR HORSEMEN

Declaration Dates for $500,000 in Stakes and Closing of Big Events Arrive Together.

The last race meeting of the New York turf year, opening at the Aqueduct track on Thursday of this week, following the Jamaica meeting, will introduce something of a change from the order of racing affairs prevailing since the early Spring, for whatever the plans of the new management of the Queens County Jockey Club for the future, the plant in its equipment for the accommodation of the public is just as it was before it was sold to the present owners. This means that the division of racegoers into grand and field stand patrons ends with the opening of the Aqueduct racing, for there is a single public stand there, and all alike must pay the admission fee that at the other tracks was charged for entrance to the grand stand.

For the meeting the most ambitious programme ever offered on the course has been arranged. Two stakes are set for decision on the opening day, the Bellerose, for two-year-olds, and the Aqueduct Handicap, for two-year-olds and upward, at one mile and a sixteenth. The weights for the Aqueduct are to be assigned to-day, and the handicapper will have about the same horses to grade that made the handicap racing at Belmont Park and Jamaica, the more notable entries for the event being Klamesha, the sensation of the Autumn racing season; Ormonde's Right, Eugenia Burch, Colonial Girl, First Mason, Dolly Spanker, Coy Maid, Bedouin, Bad News, and Alwin.

The long entry list includes also the noted horses Roseben, chief of the year's weight-carrying sprinters and holder of a world's record, and Hamburg Belle, but as both of these have been retired for the season, they will figure [illegible]y in the allotment of the weights.

The end of the racing year [illegible] so close at hand, in fact, that the post-season activity of the managers of the big racing stables already has begun, and in addition to completing arrangements for wintering, the stable managers have much to keep them busy in planning engagements for next season's stakes and deciding on engagements already made in future events at the prominent race courses of the East. These engagements, which represent more than $500,000 to be distributed in stakes, include among the big events, to which declarations are due in November, on dates between the 1st and the 15th, the oldest and most popular fixtures of the Coney Island and Brooklyn Jockey Clubs and the Westchester, Brighton Beach, and Saratoga Racing Associations.

The Saratoga Stakes, to close Nov. 9, and the Coney Island Jockey Club's stakes, to close Nov. 15, are the next in order, these, like the fixtures already closed by other clubs, being chiefly the produce fixtures for two-year-olds, and the greater turf prizes for two and three year olds. The Saratoga Association, following a plan settled on long ago, has abandoned its $50,000 Great Republic Stakes, and with that once great fixture eliminated, the Coney Island Jockey Club stands along in its offer of the richest prize of the turf for horses three years old and upward in the renewal of the $25,000 Annual Champion Stakes, two miles and a quarter, which will close for now yearlings and two-year-olds on Nov. 15, entries made then to permit the horse entered to start in 1906 and any year thereafter on payment of the starting fee. The Coney Island Club also renews, to close on the same date, the $20,000 Century Stakes for 1907, in addition to renewing such other famous Sheepshead Bay events as the Lawrence Realization, the Tidal, and the Great Filly Stakes.

IDA HIGHWOOD'S BUSY DAY.

Nathan Straus's Trotter Has Several Spirited Brushes on Speedway.

Champions at both the trotting and pacing gait were much in evidence on the Speedway yesterday morning. The ideal Autumn weather brought out a crowd of spectators that numbered fully 5,000, and the keen contests were cheered to the echo. Close finishes marked the majority of the brushes, and especially in the series between the trotting rivals, Mona Wilkes, driven by her owner, Ackerly C. Schuyler, and Ida Highwood, driven by Nathan Straus. Luck was somewhat against the Wilkes trotter, but her driver was persistent, and after being beaten out by less than a length in the first heat, went back to the start and got away on almost even terms. At the entrance to the stretch Mona Wilkes took the lead, but when Ida Highwood reached even terms and was about to pass her she broke, and before recovering her footing again was distanced. In the final heat the pair trotted head and head over three-quarters of the length of the course, and there was every prospect of a dead heat when a touch of the whip caused Mona Wilkes to show a burst of speed that carried her a length in front of her rival and landed her a winner.

Invader, the Empire City trotting favorite, driven by his owner, Andrew Crawford, was next started in company with Ida Highwood. It was the mare's race to the head of the stretch, when a little coaxing brought Invader on even terms and the pair passed the finish as though they were in double harness. Both drivers thought they had won, but the crowd declared it a dead heat. They went back to the start to try and settle it. Some difficulty was experienced in getting them away, and when they were finally started Invader had the advantage of a couple of lengths, which he held to the finish.

Building Commissioner Isaac A. Hopper, with his crack pole team, Bessie Reid and Bessie Thompson, took an active part in the sport. Their two best heats were with the famous Edgewater team of pacers, Andy Mack and Jimmy Mack, handled by a trainer. Odds were in favor of the pacers, but the trotters were too fast for them, especially when the final drive was made, and they took the first heat easily. The second "go" proved a dead heat. Then the Edgewater team retired before a final could be arranged.

Kitty Wilkes, the handsome bay trotter owned and driven by William Scott, won two straight heats from the trotter James Shevlin, driven by Harry Phillips, and stepping home a length in front of the former Speedway trotting champion Kingmond.

KNICKERBOCKERS' BIG SCORE.

Soldiers from Fort Wadsworth Overwhelmingly Defeated at Football.

The Knickerbocker Athletic Club yesterday overwhelmed the Fort Wadsworth eleven on Olympic Field and won by the score of 34 to 0. The military football players were outclassed in every department of the game, while their physical condition was far from good. The line-up:

KNICKERBOCKER, 5; SOLDIERS, 0.

The Governors Island football eleven played a good game yesterday at Ontario Field against the Knickerbocker football team, holding the letter down to a single touchdown, which was made in the last few minutes of play.

The soldiers proved a surprise, and during the first half invaded their opponents' territory several times, but were unable to cross the goal line. Once they had the ball on the Knickerbockers' five-yard line, but a fumble saved the local team. For the most part of the second half the play was confined to midfield. With only three minutes to play Townsend made a forty-yard run around the soldiers' left end, and scored a touchdown. He missed the try for the goal. Line-up:

GAELIC FOOTBALL LIVELY.

Kerry and Cavan Win for County Championship of Ireland.

Two games of Gaelic football were played at Celtic Park yesterday in the tournament for the county championship of Ireland, confined to residents of this country, Kerry winning the first and Cavan the second. The results put Kerry in the lead and another contest will be played at Father O'Flaherty's games next Sunday between Kerry and Cavan.

A big crowd witnessed yesterday's contests, both of which were exciting and won by close scores. The first match brought together Kerry and Tipperary. The game was bitterly fought, but Kerry won by one goal and six points to two points.

Cavan outplayed Galway in the second game. For fifteen minutes the ball was kept in midfield, after which the Cavan players carried it down the field and secured a difficult goal. Several tries by both sides followed, but the clever work of the goal keepers kept the ball outside of the net. When the whistle blew Cavan had made one goal and four points against six points for Galway.

MANHATTAN, 12; LYCEUM, 0.

Manhattan Square football eleven yesterday defeated the Lyceum all-collegiate team by the score of 12 to 0. The game, which was played at Equitable Park, was witnessed by about one thousand persons. In the first half, after ten minutes' playing, the Manhattans carried the ball to the Lyceum five-yard line by short plunges and end runs, when Sturges was pushed over for a touchdown. He afterward kicked the goal. The Lyceum players made a better showing in the second half and quickly carried the ball to their opponents' territory, but the Manhattan line held and Lyceum lost the ball on downs. The Manhattans then rushed the ball down the field and secured a second touchdown and goal one minute before time was called.

In the preliminary game the Clover Athletic Club defeated Lafayette by 11 to 0. Will Tannen made both touchdowns and kicked the goal. Line-up of Manhattan-Lyceum game:

Manhattan Sq., 12.	Position.	Lyceum, 0.

Touchdowns—Sturges, 2. Goals from touchdowns—Sturges, 2. Umpire—Mr. Searle. Referee—Mr. Cohen. Time of game—Twenty and fifteen minute halves.

Automobile Notes of Interest.

E. R. Thomas of Buffalo, the manufacturer of the Thomas cars, intends to make an automobile sightseeing trip to France during the automobile salon which will open in Paris Dec. 8. Mr. Thomas hopes to obtain enough prospective buyers and others interested in comparing the merits of the domestic with foreign motor cars to form a good-sized party. Besides inspecting the different makes of machines in the Paris show, visits will be made to many of the leadings factories in France and the process of manufacture will be thoroughly explained. The plan is a novel one, but possesses excellent possibilities, and curiosity will now be aroused to see how large a party will take the trip.

The automobile school of the West Side Young Men's Christian Association has received from a private owner a magnificent new chassis of a forty horse power Mercedes car for inspection and study by the students. The owner will give the use of the car for about two months. Principal Brokaw said it is one of the finest cars ever loaned to the school for its technical work. Since the school has met with such success, private owners are constantly loaning cars for different periods, so that, with what the school owns, there are always about ten cars in the garage for instruction.

Percy Megargel, who is attempting a double transcontinental trip with his sixteen horse power Reo car, has reached Eastern Oregon. Megargel and Fassett, his assistant, have encountered some very cold weather, and frequently have had to camp out in their car far from any friendly ranch or village hotel. The car is in good condition, and Megargel expects to reach the Pacific Coast within a few days.

The prevailing tendency among automobile dealers and makers is to go northward. Columbus Circle will soon be the centre of the business, with thousands of machines stored in the garages situated between Fifty-fourth and Sixty-third Streets, a distance of a half mile.

People are not waiting for the shows to place their orders for 1906 automobiles. This fact is demonstrated no more clearly than by the case of Harry S. Houpt, the New York agent of the Thomas cars, who has already booked orders for twenty-one cars of the 1906 pattern without a sample in hand to go by.

Several prominent men in the financial world are bidders for the big Fiat cars used by Lancia, Nezzaro, and Cedrino in the Vanderbilt race. All of these cars will remain in America.

There promises to be a record-breaking entry list of touring cars for the next meet of the New Jersey Automobile and Motor Club, to be held on the Waverley Park track at Newark on the afternoon of election day. Admission to the races, grand stand, and programme will be free. Seven touring car events and gymkhana sports, together with a motor cycle race, make up the programme. The Secretary of the club is Charles S. Wells, to whom entries are being made at the New York office, 1,536 Broadway, and the Newark clubrooms, 716 Prudential Building.

LUNATIC IN CHURCH CROWD.

He Had Escaped from Amityville in the Morning.

"I want a job; I must have a job," mumbled a shabbily dressed young man last night as he went walking among the crowds that filed out of St. Michael's Church, Brooklyn.

Detectives Marks and Callahan of the Fourth Avenue Police Station got him peacefully to the station by assuring him that they had a job ready for him.

There he was recognized as Edwin Larrabee of Rochester, who was committed by the courts to the Brunswick Home, in Amityville, L. I., several months ago. He had escaped yesterday morning.

TEAMSTERS STICK.

Further Indications of a Possible Strike, Perhaps This Week.

At a meeting of Local Union 708 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters yesterday afternoon it was decided that the organization should stand by the agreement they submitted last week to each of their employers. Some of the employers have signed the agreement, and they will be protected in case a strike is declared. About three hundred teamsters were present at the meeting, and all announced their intention of striking whenever called upon by the union.

New York Has One Leader, McGann, at First Base.

DAHLEN SECOND TO CORCORAN

Bowerman Leads Bresnahan in Work Behind the Bat—Chicago First as a Team.

The best fielding team on the National League, according to the official averages compiled by Secretary Pulliam, for the season of 1905 would be as follows: Sparks, Philadelphia; Walker, Cincinnati; Robletaille, Pittsburg, or Pfeffer of Chicago, pitcher; Moran of Boston, catcher; McGann of New York, first base; Hammel of Brooklyn, second base; Hoclskoetter, St. Louis, third base; Corcoran, Cincinnati, shortstop; McCarthy, Chicago, left field; Leach, Pittsburg, centre field, and Ganlay, Pittsburg, right field.

New York team, Matthewson is seventh, Wiltse ninth, and then well behind them and in the following order McGinninty, Ames, and Taylor, on the list of forty-two pitchers; Bowerman second and Bresnanhan sixth among twenty-one catchers; Gilbert a tie with "Kid" Gleason of Philadelphia, in seventh place among second basemen; Devlin sixth among third basemen; Dahlen second among short stops, while Mertes, Donlin, Browne, and Strang are far down in the list of outfielders.

In team work Chicago, Pittsburg, and New York, in the order named, are within a point of each other, while Brooklyn brings up the rear.

BATTERED BUT HAPPY.

Peters Picked Up Unconscious, but He Had Won a Football Victory.

Roderick Peters, 17 years old, of 21 West 106th Street, a quarter back and Captain of the Artfield Athletic Club's football team, won the deciding game in a series with the Howard Athletic Club's eleven in Crotona Park in the Bronx yesterday and picked up after the game bruised and battered.

When the whistle blew at the end of the first half, the score stood 6 to 5 in favor of the Howard Club. Just before the end of the second half, with the score unchanged, Peters got the ball after a double pass on the Artfield's twenty-five-yard line and started down the field. He was within a foot or so of the goal line when tackled. The lad squirmed and wriggled with the other twenty-one players on top of him. A shout went up from all sides, when Peters, with a supreme effort, got from underneath the bunch and landed the ball inside the line just as the whistle blew, announcing the close of the game.

When the players got to him Peters was unconscious. His right shoulder was dislocated, his face and body bruised, and he was suffering from internal injuries. Peters was taken home, and when he had regained consciousness his first question was:

"Did we win the game?"

They told him the Artfields had won.

"Well, I don't care a rap for my hurts," he said.

CHINESE MASONS IN FLIGHT.

Sing Duck, "Bad Chinaman," and Two Revolvers Empty a Lodge Room.

A meeting of the Chinese Free Masons, in their rooms on the top floor at 18 Pell Street last night, was broken up, its members fleeing in fear of their lives on the appearance of Sing Duck, who is known as a "bad Chinaman."

Duck entered the room about 11 o'clock with two big revolvers which he leveled at the gathering. A stampede ensued, but two cool-headed Chinamen jumped on Duck and took away his weapons. Wong Ging Gim wielded an opium pipe with much effect on Duck's head. Duck and Gim were locked up.

FIREMEN DOING THE PAINTING.

Unions Take Up a Report on the Work on Engine No. 38's House.

A complaint was made yesterday to the Central Federated Union by a delegate of the Brotherhood of Painters that Engine Company No. 38's house in Amsterdam Avenue was being painted by uniformed firemen instead of by regular painters.

The complaint was simply filed at first, but the delegate refused to be put down, and it was decided to send a letter to the Fire Department asking that the painting of stations and engine houses be done by union painters.

ELECTRIC CARRIAGES

"THE LEADERS THROUGH ALL CHANGES of DESIGN and STYLE SINCE 1895"

IN New York, London, Paris and other large cities Columbia Electric Broughams, Landaus, Landaulets and Hansoms are the favorite vehicles of people who demand and have the best of everything. These carriages are made for private use only and no others compare with them for motive efficiency, exclusiveness of design, perfection of detail and finish, and luxury of furnishing. For town use they provide the ideal motor service.

The illustration shows the new model Columbia Brougham, Mark LXVIII. It is much lighter than any electric Brougham previously made, admitting the use of pneumatic tires. The maximum speed is eighteen miles an hour and there are important improvements in the control, steering and other operating features. With the same chassis we supply Landaulet and Hansom bodies. No less distinctive and preferable among electric vehicles are the lighter Columbias—Surreys, Victoria-Phaetons and Runabouts. All Columbia Electric Carriages are equipped with Exide batteries, the only thoroughly efficient and practical vehicle batteries developed to date.

Electric Carriage Catalogue on request; also separate catalogues of Columbia Electric Commercial Vehicles and Columbia Gasolene Cars.

FOURTEEN PAGES.

WILL THE RUSSIAN ARMY REVOLT?

The incident reported from St. Petersburg last evening, if the report shall be confirmed, is extremely significant. The willingness of even a small number of officers to act with the revolutionists, with their insistence that they should wear their uniforms, indicates that the army is penetrated with the wish that the autocracy shall fall and that those who entertain that wish think that it is safe to avow it.

The army is not only the sole safeguard the autocracy has in the present situation, but it is also the sole source from which an organized administration could be expected to succeed to the actual Government. If the army, with its officers, believes that the doom of the autocracy is at hand, the present Government will be helpless, and it will be practicable for the revolution to provide for the preservation of order and for the establishment of some sort of workable government. It is a consummation devoutly to be wished.

THE SITUATION.

In twenty districts in Manhattan, in nine districts of Kings, and in the two districts of Queens the Republican candidates for Assemblyman and Alderman have received Hearst indorsements. This means that if HEARST polls anything like the vote his leading followers predict he will poll, and IVINS is able to hold the Republican vote, or even 85 per cent. of it, BENJAMIN B. ODELL, the flouted Republican boss, in all probability will control the next State Legislature and the next Board of Aldermen. Those are the stakes for which ODELL and his chief lieutenant WILLIAM HALPIN are playing in this election, and the cards are stocked.

Why did the Hearst crowd give freely their indorsements to Republican candidates for the Assembly and the Board of Aldermen? Did they do it to help IVINS or HEARST? The Republican district leaders who secured Hearst indorsements for their local candidates piously protest that there was no bargain; that they and their followers do not contemplate any treachery to IVINS. Is that credible? But a few weeks ago, HEARST and ODELL were allies. On every point of controversy in the Fusion conference the Odell and Hearst men stood together as against the Citizens' Union. Suddenly, and for no apparent reason, ODELL concluded to break with Fusion. The Hearst followers professed to share the indignation of the Citizens' Union representatives over the manner in which both were unceremoniously chucked overboard by the Newburg boss. But within two weeks what happens? The Hearst followers in every district in Manhattan, Kings, and Queens where there was a chance of defeating the Democratic candidates for the Assembly and Board of Aldermen through a combination of forces, indorse the Republican local candidates. Was Mr. HEARST simply returning good for evil, or was there an understanding between him and ODELL that votes for Republican candidates for Assemblyman and Alderman were to be repaid by votes for HEARST for Mayor? It may be true, as Mr. IVINS declares he believes it to be, that the Republican district leaders will be loyal to him, but in view of what has occurred will anybody believe that they can be loyal to him without being treacherous to HEARST? Mr. HEARST may indeed find on Nov. 7 that he has been tricked by ODELL and HALPIN, but however that may be, one thing is certain, and that is that if the citizens of New York are blind enough to support HEARST in large numbers, it will be ODELL who will gain the most substantial triumph of the election.

If ODELL controls the next Legislature he will elect the next Speaker of the Assembly, and the boss who elects the next Speaker will control the next Republican State Convention and nominate the next Republican candidate for Governor. And if ODELL succeeds in doing that, the State job of WILLIAM HALPIN, and the State jobs of other Republican district leaders, will be secured to them. ODELL'S interests are their interests; if he falls from power, they disappear with him. To whom are they likely to be most loyal then? To ODELL, who has made them, or to IVINS, who glories in the fact that he is not beholden to them and holds out to them no expectation of reward?

"I am no man's puppet," says the sincere and cultured IVINS. "If I am elected the people will come into their own," says the demagogic HEARST. And as the deluded army of anti-Tammany-ites and the noisy Hearst revolutionary mob go by, each shouting execrations at the Newburg boss, he says nothing in defense or rejoinder, but with a cynical smile attends strictly to his knitting. And it is a wondrous web that he is making. There is power in it for him, there is humiliation and vexation of soul in it for IVINS, and there is political death in it for HEARST.

In the highly improbable contingency that IVINS should win, it would be with the Newburg boss he would have to plead for the legislation which he admits he will need to carry out the reforms he has promised. If HEARST should win, one of the first acts of the Legislature, dominated by ODELL, would be to take the franchise-granting power away from the Board of Estimate and Apportionment and vest it again in the Board of Aldermen, which ODELL would control. The bill that would accomplish that would be the political death warrant of HEARST. It would palsy his right hand, and under its blight the hopes that he has held out to his deluded followers would be as dead leaves. He would be unable to redeem a single promise that he has made. He would be the first victim of the revolution of which he had fed the flames.

Are the citizens of New York prepared to repudiate GEORGE B. MCCLELLAN, who has given them an administration decent, efficient, excellent in many ways, if faulty in not a few, and turn over their government to the control of the Newburg boss, with what consequences they can judge? That is the issue.

WALL STREET AND RUSSIA.

Wall Street is no sooner relieved of its tremors over the Russo-Japanese war than it is thrown into another quiver by the convulsion in Russia. In considering how Wall Street is or is likely to be affected by the disturbances preceding the probable disappearance of the last civilized autocracy it is well to recall how much more easily than was expected the financial world of both hemispheres bore the strain of the greatest war of modern times. No modern national combat of its length has been bloodier or costlier, but on the other hand none has been waged with less disarrangement of the processes of production and distribution. This was due in part to the skill of the financing, and in part to the fact that the hostilities were not on the soil of either combatant. Hence their crops and their trade were not disturbed, as, for instance, in our own civil war. And this suggests that what is now going on in Russia is not a civil war, but an uprising of the people against the bureaucracy. Revolutions never injure peoples. Czardom may be ruined, but that is not the ruin of Russia. Russia's prosperity lies less in the maintenance of its retarding institutions than in the welfare of its people. The spasm may be severe, but it is the prelude to a national development rivaling that hoped for China. Lands, mines, and forests now under the blighting control of an inefficient Governmental machine will be exploited in a vitalizing manner. It is the creation, not the destruction, of values which we are about to witness in Russia.

As regards ourselves, it is to be remarked in the first place that we backed the right horse. There are no Russian securities to be realized in our markets. On the other hand, it is probable that the inability of Russia to float its loan now will throw a good thing in the way of American holders of Japanese issues. If Japan seizes the opportunity and floats its conversion loan, American holders will have an option to realize the handsome advance they have enjoyed in their investment. As yet the market gives no sign of this operation, although it is mentioned in the dispatches. The brunt of the financial disturbance of course will fall upon Paris, and thence be distributed throughout the world. But only in the last place will the widening wave reach our shores, and never were we abler to bear our share of the burden. Not a few will welcome the chill to our somewhat too great buoyancy. For us to lose some gold will be as wholesome as for a fever patient to lose some blood. And markets other than financial may actually be stimulated. This is apparent in the grain and petroleum markets already. In short, it would seem as though the approaching agitation would be rather a matter of nerves and markets than of disturbance of values. With values undisturbed and prices depressed, opportunities come for the exercise of discretion and selection. Purchases which make wealth are not customarily made in buoyant markets. Bad bargains are generally made in markets which are called good. The best purchases are made in the worst markets.

LABOR IN THE SOUTH.

The Manufacturers' Record of Baltimore, perhaps the most prominent of the trade journals of the South, has been for some time collecting expressions from the Southern papers as to the demand for labor in the South and the supply. They show that the demand is increasing steadily in volume and variety and that the supply is not keeping up with it. In a recent number, for instance, the reports showed marked need in Norfolk, Va., for labor in the building trade; in North Carolina for the lumber mills; in Charleston, S. C., for the oyster canneries; in Alabama for the foundry and steel industries; in Louisiana for the sugar plantations; in Mississippi for the cotton plantations, and in Georgia for a number of occupations, agricultural, manufacturing, and domestic service.

The suggestions as to supply are various. In Louisiana Italians are being imported in considerable numbers; in Mississippi there is a notable beginning of Japanese immigration; in North Carolina and in South Carolina men are being brought from this city, but they are foreigners. Foreign immigration, direct or indirect, is quite generally favored—much more so than would have been possible even ten years ago. One paper—The Carolina Tar Heel—advocates a strict enforcement of the vagrant law on one hand and the formation of negro labor unions on the other. It is confident that the result of this combination of forces would be a sufficient supply of reasonably good labor. Doubtless it would tend that way, but the chances are that the colored men of the South will not be driven to do all the work they can except by the competition of labor brought in from elsewhere.

OUR DAY.

Mr. CLEVELAND delivered an address on Saturday at the unveiling of a statue of J. STERLING MORTON at Nebraska City. It was in every way fitted to the occasion and was remarkable, first, for the note of personal tenderness and affection toward his former friend and associate, and, second, for the earnestness, the impassioned earnestness, with which the speaker deplored the evil tendencies of our time and appealed to his countrymen to heed the high example set for them by him whom the statue commemorated.

It is the general testimony of all who knew him that Mr. MORTON fully deserved the tribute paid to him by the President under whom he served. He was a man of unusual intelligence, strong character, courageous, faithful, and a fervent patriot. Hardly could a better example be held up for emulation, especially in the West, where he was so well known and where the nature and the fruits of his labors can so clearly be understood. Were he living no one would more severely condemn everything which Mr. CLEVELAND condemns. But we cannot agree with the latter's estimate of the relative condition of our times. He says:

> We have fallen upon days when our people are more than ever turning away from their old faith in the saving grace of character and flocking to the worship of money-making idols. Daily and hourly, in the light of investigation and exposure, characterless lives are seen in appalling numbers, without chart or compass, crowded upon the rocks and shoals of faithlessness and breach of trust.
> How ill have these wrecked lives exchanged the safe course and the harbor of honor and usefulness which character and rectitude point out for a wild and headlong rush over unknown seas in a consuming search for pelf!

And Mr. CLEVELAND speaks in an accent of doubt, almost of despair, when he says:

> If our people ever return again to their trust in character as a steadying force in our restless enterprise and immense material growth, it will be when they take to heart the full significance of such a commemoration as this.

It is well to abhor and denounce the evil of our days. It is not well to mistake or misstate the direction our days are taking. As to that, no one can give a surely accurate decision, and one's opinion is likely to reflect temperament rather than information, but we know of no adequate evidence that "our people are more than ever turning away from their old faith in the saving grace of character," or "flocking to the worship of money-making idols." Certainly greed and unscrupulousness existed in the older times, and if we take the report of the men of those times whom we honor, these vices were as prevalent then as now. The writings of WASHINGTON, not only after he became President, but while he was fighting the battles of independence, are full of invectives against the men who not only worshipped wealth but risked the safety of the country to get it in vile ways. Were these invectives culled in one volume they would warrant the gloomiest estimate of the morality of the "fathers." The answer to such an inference is the almost universal trust in WASHINGTON himself, whose true greatness lay in his character more than in his ability, signal as that was. Is it not fair to say that the answer to Mr. CLEVELAND'S depressing estimate of the comparative moral quality of our times is the trust that has been so marvelously reposed in him, and which he has so richly deserved?

THE ANTI-RIDGWAY MOVEMENT.

It is plain that Mr. RIDGWAY is to have a hard time in Brooklyn. The disgust his nomination by Mr. MCCARREN has caused in the regular Democratic ranks is deep. He has little support in the press. Not only the anti-McCarren men are opposed to him, but many who have followed the Senator in the interest of the "organization" are openly fighting him. The McCarren men are even accusing the Mayor of encouraging the opposition. Probably he is not doing so directly, but he cannot regard with much satisfaction the coupling of his name with that of a man notoriously hostile to all his professed aims.

Meanwhile the strength of Major EBSTEIN grows every day. He stands the light of discussion admirably. The more his record is examined the better it appears, the record of a plain, honest, intelligent, hard-working, and resolute man. As between him and Mr. RIDGWAY, with his hopelessly tainted record, the Germans of the borough have no trouble, quite apart from any natural predilections they have on account of Major EBSTEIN'S descent, in making their choice.

"SHE DO MOVE."

The canvass in Massachusetts this year is extremely interesting. For the first time in the history of the Republican Party in the old Commonwealth its candidates and speakers are disputing with their opponents as to which party is more sincere and practical in promoting foreign trade by the reduction of tariffs.

Mr. GUILD, the present Lieutenant Governor and the Republican candidate for Governor, declares that "he is for free coal and hides, and so is everybody in Massachusetts." His quarrel with Gen. BARTLETT, the Democratic candidate, is that the latter would take the taxes from these materials of manufacture without securing in return the reduction or repeal of taxes imposed on our exports by the countries from which these come. This is a long step in advance from the position occupied by the party when the Dingley tariff was passed. Mr. GUILD ignores what is an important element in the situation, the fact that the present taxes on coal and hides are a direct subsidy to the Coal Trust and to the Beef Trust, and the people of the United States are entitled to relief from the oppression exercised by these monopolistic combinations, whether reductions in foreign duties can or can not be obtained in exchange.

But apart from that phase of the question it is an immense advantage to find the Republicans willing under any conditions to consent to a breach in the sacred wall of protective duties. For it will be noted that these duties with which Mr. GUILD deals so radically are typical protective duties. They are intended to increase and do increase the profits of powerful and wealthy interests which need no protection, at the expense of the general consumer, and especially at the expense of our own industries. If for any reason they can be got rid of, there are lots of others that also must go.

The Board of Estimate and Apportionment has approved a plan to build fifteen new reservoirs impounding 165,000,000,000 gallons of water, to be brought filtered to the city's gates at the rate of 500,000,000 gallons daily, with a head of 300 feet, through aqueducts and tunnels stretching 117 miles partly under and beside the bed of the Hudson from the springs of the Catskills to New York, Brooklyn, and Staten Island. The cost of this delivery of pure drinking water, including maintenance and operation, will be about 50 cents per 1,000 gallons, the price of four gallons of bottled spring water. The system will take ten years to complete in all its branches, and will cost $161,000,000, which, if paid instantly, would measure $40 per capita. A Constitutional amendment is now before the people by virtue of which this cost will add not one cent to the general burden of taxation; it will be met gradually by the self-earned increment of water rates. The new system will eliminate by its filtering plant the plague of typhoid fever, and it will supply the increased needs of the Greater City for a third of a century.

It was not a happy device of Mr. OSBORNE'S to attack Mr. JEROME with reference to having insurance lawyers among his supporters. In the first place the assertion that he had not, or the implication, was, according to Mr. OSBORNE, an anonymous one. In the second place, the lawyers whose names were recited by Mr. OSBORNE are those of gentlemen standing very high in the profession, and it is far from discreditable for a candidate for the District Attorneyship to have such support. Finally, if the character of a lawyer is always to be judged by that of his clients, Mr. OSBORNE'S own might suffer by the test. Nor is it yet absolutely established that every officer of every insurance company is necessarily a scoundrel.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Stage Morals and Stage Money.

Discussion of "Mrs. Warren's Profession" has resulted in the solemn presentation of innumerable platitudes from people who have heard somebody else say that it is a "bad" play and then have proceeded to perform the not difficult task of proving that plays of that sort should not be put on the stage. The people who have taken the trouble to read Mr. SHAW'S production have for the most part formed the judgment that it is not suitable for public performance, but as they have also discovered that all the arguments oftenest made against it are based on grotesquely inaccurate misunderstandings of what its real faults are, they have been amused rather than indignant over the situation created by Mr. DALY'S keen sense of values and have treated the subject with a levity which, while it has enabled them to tell many sound truths, has yet had an effect in some respects regrettable, since it has distracted intelligent attention from the fact that there are real and sufficient reasons why the play should be kept in book form, where it is not likely to hurt, or even to offend, anybody, and be kept off the stage, where it is certain to do a lot of harm—chiefly, it seems to us, by adding new stains to minds already far from immaculate. This certainty is not dependent upon either a fair or an unfair dislike for Mr. SHAW and his work as a whole. It rests, instead, upon the very obvious fact that even if Mr. SHAW intended to teach and has taught, as he and Mr. DALY declare, a deep—or was it a high?—moral lesson, there is not the slightest chance that more than one person in a hundred who goes to see the play will learn that lesson from it, and every prospect that the other ninety-nine will find in it many things which Mr. SHAW and his friends like to say are not there. He and they, with their avowed fondness for truth and reality, as distinguished from convention and assumption, might profitably ponder what they are doing when they talk of teaching on the stage this particular kind of moral lesson. They know as well as the rest of us that an enormous majority of people who go to the theatre do it with little other purpose than to be amused, with some incidental stirring of the simpler emotions, and that they neither look for moral lessons nor will get them—except unconsciously and unintentionally. And there will be nothing unconscious or unintentional about the gettings of the general public from "Mrs. Warren's Profession." For presenting it there is no valid excuse, and it should not be forgotten that the recent arguing about it will have an advertising effect for the folk who go to see it as well as for its author and its producer.

Disappointment for the President.

Some joking remarks by a Weather Bureau official do something more than hint that President ROOSEVELT has been telling somebody of his hope to get in his voyage up the coast the excitement and sense of struggle with danger which a severe storm at sea is so well calculated to give the not too experienced traveler on it. "For once," said this official, "the President's luck has deserted him. Our big storm on the Atlantic has gone ashore and we have nothing left down there to take its place. The President wanted to get into that storm, we know, and we tried hard to hold it for him, but he was just two days too late to touch the tail of it." Now, wasn't it just like the President to think of the fun he would get out of a storm and not to think of the worry his exposure to elemental perils would inflict upon a very considerable majority of his fellow-countrymen? And what chance would there have been of persuading him to postpone his voyage for a day or two if the Weather Bureau, instead of failing to keep the storm back for the President's entertainment, had succeeded in doing so? Wait! the very idea is funny. But as somebody—a most immoral man he was, too—said the other day in writing about one of the worst phases of the insurance scandal, "Of course it was very wrong, but I am glad he did it." Few of us have any real regret that the President has the defects of his qualities, and it is quite certain that a man who is never afraid when he shouldn't be will sometimes or often lack the caution which is so valuable when present in precisely the exact amount. President ROOSEVELT will insist on remembering that he is also one THEODORE ROOSEVELT, with a highly developed taste for strenuous joys spiced with danger. He shouldn't, but the natural man is glad he does. And anyhow, "luck" gave him a collision and some flying glass.

Vindicating the Uniform.

Secretary BONAPARTE is almost sure to get a lot of immediate commendation for his action in the case of a civilian employé at the Norfolk Navy Yard who, after he had agreed to admit to his home as a boarder a machinist's mate serving with the torpedo flotilla, rescinded his agreement, because the man was obliged to come to and go from the house in uniform. The civilian declared that he had himself no objections to the Nation's livery and viewed it with all the respect it deserves, but it seems that there is in the circle where he moves a prejudice against uniforms as worn in the lower grades of the naval service, and that he could not have such a boarder and retain his social status. The Secretary pronounced the explanation worse than inadequate and discharged the maker of it without any ceremony or delay. Of course he did right—if the matter came within his authority—and nobody will be at all sorry that an affront to all of the country's defenders was promptly and severely punished. Yet, on thinking the queer case over, it is more than a little hard to see just how it did come within the legitimate exercise of the Secretary's power, or exactly what law or regulation was violated by a refusal to take a boarder who, for good reasons or bad, injuriously affected the householder's relations with his neighbors. It would have been very fine if the owner of the house had said—and persuaded his wife to say—that a naval uniform is a garb of honor and that people who view it otherwise should be defied by all good citizens and patriots. But that involved a sort of martyrdom, and while martyrdom in a noble cause is highly admirable, reluctance to accept it is not generally held to be a sufficient cause for severe punishment. Secretary BONAPARTE, however, is a man who is apt to know any business in which he is engaged, and it is therefore fairly safe to assume that he made no mistake in this instance. We only confess that we do not quite understand his warrant for what he did.

Motorists Fined $1,090,000.

From The London Express.

The tribute, levied upon motorists by the magistrates of the United Kingdom during 1904 reached the enormous sum of £218,000. This amount averages very nearly £10 per head for every car on the road that year.

Astonishing as these figures appear, it is probable that when the total of this year's fines can be made up it will reach well over £300,000.

The increase this year is due to the persistent manner in which the police in many parts of the country, and especially in the southern counties, have pursued their campaign against motor cars by means of traps.

"The latest form of police trap is an electrical arrangement," says Stenson Cooke, Secretary of the Automobile Association. "A piece of rope is almost buried across the road at the start of a measured furlong. When the car touches the rope it starts a timepiece. Another rope is laid at the end of the trap, and when the car touches this it stops the timepiece. This is the most just and reliable form of trap, for it does not depend for its accuracy upon cheap stop watches and unskilled police as timekeepers.

"By the system of patrols which the Automobile Association has established many of the police traps have been completely nullified. At Guildford some time ago as much as £105 was taken in fines from motorists in one day. Now that our scouts are at work things are very different.

"On two main roads, working two days a week, the patrols exercised the necessary restraint on 297 motor cars. But for the association's efforts at least half of these would have been fined. We estimate that we save £100 a week on each road."

The Criminal Year in England.

From The London Globe.

The annual report of the Commissioners of Prisons shows that the number of commitments per 100,000 of the population has been the subject of considerable fluctuation during the last quarter of a century, varying from the highest (621.6) in 1882-3, to the lowest (460.7) in 1900-1. Since 1900-1 there has been a progressive rise, culminating in 586.2 for the year 1904, which is the highest since 1884-5. This rise has been almost entirely in offenses tried summarily. So far as serious or indictable crime is concerned, the number per 100,000 has fallen from 37 in 1880-1 to 25.9 for the year under report. Summary offenses have arisen from 542.8 to 560.3.

The principal offenses which accounted for this increase are as follows: Drunkenness, 1,951; begging and sleeping out, and misbehavior by paupers, 3,669; offenses against police regulations and county and borough bylaws, 1,606, which include sleeping out and begging.

NEWSPAPER GRAFT.

Erratic Views Upon the Publication of News Telegrams for Pay.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

In some of the newspapers which I read I remark highly virtuous comments condemning their erring sisters which accepted from a local news agency telegrams regarding the insurance scandal and published them for pay, instead of paying for them as special dispatches. At least the testimony shows the insurance company paid out the money which the newspapers should have received, and as yet there has been no public complaint of non-receipt. The telegram which was most heinous alleged that Mr. McCurdy's testimony created a favorable impression. I am so constituted that testimony to the fact that my company has made a profit of $16,000,000 does create a favorable impression upon me, and I think it well to get that fact before the public even by paying for it, at a time when for some inscrutable reason the only thing that is published free is of an unfavorable nature.

Another peculiarity of mine is that I like to help along all good works. Assuredly it is a good work to assist in prevention of publication of any and all misleading statements published for pay. Now what puzzles me most is that the sharpest comments appear in journals which have not the least hesitation in publishing in their own sheets matter which they should not touch with a pitchfork. The mere matter of money aside, the denounced telegrams are fit to appear anywhere. But if the mere matter of receipt of money for publication cannot be waived then it appears to me that the intrinsic excellence or demerits of the matter published is the real issue. The heinous telegram regarding Mr. McCurdy's testimony, published however deceivingly and for whatever money is virtuous compared with mercenary publication of incitements to organize runs upon banks, of puffs of nostrums which cure incurable diseases infallibly, and of much other matter which it is defilement to describe. It is journals which publish matter of this character which lead the lecturing of the unhappy country sheets in this sad predicament.

Of course such journals have a defense which is perfect in their esteem. Their advertising columns are not edited. This leaves nothing to be said. For those who like that sort of journal that is the sort of journal they like. It might seem that such virtuous editors of everything except their advertising columns which they sell to anybody for any purpose would prefer to publish sheets in which even the advertising columns are edited. But that would cost them something, and high-minded discourse upon others' faults costs nothing, while incidentally giving the impression of preferring the public weal to all else. Let the good work go on. Perhaps in time somebody will set the fashion of emphasizing the good things which are sworn to as well as the bad. I could see no objection if they were published without intent to deceive. Which suggests to me that some of the bad things are not emphasized for reasons of pure virtue.

MUTUAL POLICY HOLDER.

JEROME'S APPEAL.

It Is to the People and Against the Bosses, and the Country Applauds.

From The Boston Herald.

The people dearly love a fighter—one who like Jerome, dares to do his duty and speak his mind regardless of the consequences to himself, and who in a machine-ruled State and city, hurls defiance to the bosses of both parties and takes his appeal directly to the voters. The people who are not "party worshippers" admire such a man. They flock to his support as they rallied to the standard of Folk in Missouri, La Follette of Wisconsin, and Weaver in Philadelphia. These revolts are the best vindications of the democratic system of government. The only regret is that they do not come oftener.

From The Philadelphia Ledger.

The great popular movement toward Jerome is something more than a personal tribute to a brave and courageous leader. It finds its origin far deeper than the magnetic influence of an unusual personality; it is a sign of the ground swell toward higher and better things in our political system, an awakening of the public conscience and an arousing of the people from the preoccupation and the lethargy which have made possible Tammany, the Philadelphia organization, and all like sores on the body politic.

From The Birmingham (Ala.) News.

Mr. Jerome has been active in prosecuting violators of the law, and that is the business of the District Attorney in New York. Perhaps no city in America to-day has a greater need for just that sort of a man than has New York, unless Chicago, and especially Philadelphia, be excepted.

From The Chattanooga Times.

The whole country is interested in the fight William Travers Jerome is making in New York, not on his own account especially, but because of the principle involved, independent, honest manhood against ring politics.

From The Charleston News and Courier.

In New York Mr. Jerome is doing battle against bossism, which will inspire to greater independence of thought and action men throughout the country who are engaged in public services.

From The Butte (Mon.) Inter-Mountain.

From the conduct of the campaign it appears that the principal question to be determined by the New York election is whether or not District Attorney Jerome is bigger than all the parties.

From The Rochester News Leader.

Jerome is the candidate representing achievement, solid character, real man work, done courageously and ably for honesty against corruption and graft defended by power and wealth.

From The Lewiston Evening Journal.

The qualifications of Mr. Jerome, like those of his distinguished predecessor in the purification of New York conditions, Mr. Roosevelt, are unquestioned, and his honesty is beyond dispute.

From The Utica Press.

New Yorkers are being awakened and aroused as never before, and Jerome just now is the man of the hour, the one to whom attention is directed, and on whom all eyes are fixed.

From The Pittsburg Dispatch.

So Flammer retires with a request that the Republican vote be given to Jerome. This is beginning to look like a good year for fractious and untamable independence.

From The Topeka State Journal.

The country at large is more interested in Jerome than in the Mayoralty contest because of the moral effect his defeat or victory will have on the entire country.

From The Indianapolis News.

We wish to call attention to the wonderful progress that Jerome has made. He is appealing directly to the people, and the people are listening to him.

From The Syracuse Post-Standard.

Mr. Jerome is what New York and all America rejoice to see, a man who has won unqualified success through sheer integrity and force of character.

From The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.

Should Jerome be defeated, he has staring him in the face a fine law practice of large proportions. He cannot feel that his has served or run in vain.

From The Oklahoman.

Nobody seems to be for Mr. Jerome for prosecutor in New York except the people.

From The Wilmington (Del.) News.

It would be an all-around rebuke to the politicians should Jerome be elected.

THE HEART OF THE SCANDAL.

How Life Insurance Has Drifted from Its Legitimate Field.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is quite refreshing to read that at least one policy holder is entirely satisfied with the condition of affairs recently disclosed in the three great insurance companies, although it is difficult to believe that the writer of the letter in today's issue of your paper is entirely sincere—or disinterested. Were it not for the well-known character of your paper one would almost feel inclined to think that Mr. Smith of the Mutual had inserted it at a dollar a line. It certainly reads like a plea in abatement made on behalf of the companies—they pay policies as they mature—what more do you want? What if officials are unduly multiplied and salaries unwarrantably increased? What if officers and trustees use their positions to increase their own fortunes? What if dividends are small and expenses large? The lecture to the policy holders at the end of the communication is particularly impressive—"why," is asked, "did they promise to pay too much for insurance?"

Why, indeed? Is it not pointed out to every prospective policy holder that not only is he to have insurance, but also a great investment? Is not the promise of dividends a great lure to attract insurance? Does not every company try to outdo its competitors by attractive forms of investment? And can an applicant dicker as to terms?

And here, I think, we strike the keynote of the insurance scandal. Insurance officials are not worse than officials of other corporations; the men now under fire have done nothing but what thousands would have done in their places. A low business standard of morality in the community is to blame for their conduct in the discharge of their trust. The opportunity for enormous and unearned salaries, for manipulation of funds to their own benefit, for lavish expenditures, for ostentation in buildings far beyond their need arose from the accumulation of assets to figures almost beyond the comprehension of the average man.

How did these assets accumulate so rapidly? I think the answer to this question is, by the diversion of life insurance from its legitimate purpose—i. e., protection of the family against the death of its head. If policies had been always issued payable only at death the big companies would have had no such volume of assets as exists. But for more than thirty years the companies have been offering all kinds of inducements to catch insurers—short-term endowments, tontine and semi-tontine policies, policies promising an annual income after a certain period—in fact, the plans are only limited by the ingenuity of the actuaries.

Now, so far as the interest return is concerned, it is clear that the insurance companies cannot invest their money to as good advantage as an individual, and this quite apart from any rake-off that the officers may get by manipulation of investments. In Mr. McClintock's testimony yesterday it appeared that the actual interest earned by the Mutual last year on its gross assets was 4.33 per cent. One who has comparatively small amounts to invest can do as well as this, and even better. With 5 per cent. as the prevailing rate of mortgage loans, no one, by exercising a little care need take as little as 4.33. It is not necessary to enlarge on this point, or reference might be made to the much lower return on real estate which the companies receive.

The other two items from which the profit of the companies come are mortality rates less than anticipated and the loading; it is quite evident that at present this latter item is not contributing very much to dividends, and the benefit from a lessened mortality ought to appear from time to time in reduction of premiums. It is immoral to continue to charge premiums proved by experience to be too large, with the promise to return what is not needed in dividends.

The appeal of the companies is to the gambling instinct of human nature—one of the basest. Where participation in dividends is made to depend on surviving a certain age, the contract of insurance is as much gambling as is a lottery scheme, from which it differs very little.

Restore insurance to its original purpose, let the companies issue policies payable only at death, or possibly to the insured if he live to the age of 65, and the increase of assets in the future will not justify an increase of salary fivefold in the next twenty years.

Of course, I do not suggest this as the only remedy for present conditions, nor do I suggest that past offenses be condoned. It is rather by way of explanation than otherwise.

EDWARD C. PEARSON.

The American Language?

From The London Globe.

The bootblack who put up over his stall the notice, "English Spoken; American understood," was a prudent youth. We can most of us understand American, but it is more difficult to speak it. Yet it is a fascinating tongue, and worthy of much study. The great point to remember is that American is really a separate language, not merely a perverted kind of English. Unless we realize this all our pleasure in the study of it will be swamped by our indignation at the maltreatment of our native tongue. When, for instance, we overhear such a conversation as, "Ssy, Mister, can you dahnce?" "I can't now, but I useter could," we are apt to wince unless we realize that we are listening to a foreign language. To any one who really wishes to make a study of the American language, by which we mean the language as it is spoken rather than written, we would recommend Mr. George Ade's "Fables in Slang." American slang becomes almost classic in that book and its sequel, "More Fables in Slang." It is interesting to notice that the great majority of the idioms are borrowed from the baseball field and the boxing ring. The ring, in particular, adds to the language as it did in the case of England a hundred years ago. The essence of the American language is a surprise. An American who really speaks his own tongue never uses the verb which one would naturally expect.

"Where Did He Get It?"

From The Boston Transcript.

This question which both Messrs. Jerome and Ivins are thrusting each day on the attention of Tammany's boss, Mr. Murphy, and on the voters of New York City is one that has in it the essence of the great conflict between the American Democracy and its bosses in politics and in high finance. It is a question the like of which might well be put to many another "boss" who has grown rich out of politics and many another guardian of trust funds besides the group of insurance company Presidents whose loot has been at last unearthed.

Too Little Fruit Eaten.

"We are prone to indulge in too much meat and too little vegetables and fruit, possibly in consequence of defective methods of preparing them for the table," declared Sir Trevor Lawrence the other day at a meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society in London, and he pointed out that in 1904 more than £4,000,000 worth of fruit was imported which could have been grown in this country.

"There's room above," the wise man cried;
"Then reach it while you can!"
"I will, for I'm," the lad replied,
"A second-story man!"

$5,065,122 OF GRAFT IN DURHAM CONTRACTS

In All Philadelphia Has Paid $6,330,000 Too Much.

REPORT OF INVESTIGATORS

Fair Competition Prevented—1,200 Deaths from Typhoid Laid to Delay in Completing Filtration Plant.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 29.—Up to date the city has lost $6,330,000 through excessive costs, collusive bids, illegal advertising, and in other ways, according to the report of the Board of Investigation Engineers appointed last July by Mayor Weaver to examine the filtration system of the city and the Northeast and Southern Boulevards.

The report was submitted to the Mayor yesterday and made public to-day. It is signed by Major Cassius E. Gillette of the United States Engineer Corps, who investigated the Savannah Harbor frauds, and John Donald MacLennon of Washington.

The contractors who received most of the more than $18,000,000 that has been expended on improvements are D. J. McNichol & Co., James J. Ryan and John A. Kelley, and Vare Brothers. The members of the McNichol firm are Israel W. Durham, leader of the local Republican organization; State Senator J. P. McNichol, also a city leader, and the latter's brother Daniel. The Vare firm is made up of State Senator George A. Vare and Edwin H. Vare. Their brother, William S. Vare, is Recorder of Deeds, an elective office.

The officials held responsible by the report for some of the conditions in connection with the filtration system are William C. Haddock, who was Director of Public Works under Mayor Weaver until last May, when the Mayor dismissed him, and John W. Hill, former Chief of the Bureau of Filtration, who is awaiting trial on charges of fraud and falsification of records in connection with the construction of the filtration system.

The report says:

"Omitting from construction all small contracts—say under $30,000—we find for the filtration work and the two boulevards as constructed up to date the city has paid or pledged $18,761,541. First-class work under the specifications should not have cost over $12,430,000, which includes an allowance of 20 per cent., or $2,057,208, for legitimate contractors' profits. The difference is $6,330,000. In other words, $18,760,000 in round numbers has been paid for work costing the contractors $10,356,000.

"Of the $6,330,000 excessive cost there has gone to the contractors who worked under the name of D. J. McNichol, $5,065,122, similarly to Ryan & Kelley, $543,890, and to Vare Brothers, $89,128. Of the $18,761,541 there remains unpaid about $568,000 to McNichol, and $75,000 to Ryan & Kelley.

"Some of these contracts are incomplete; the estimated cost of completion of the existing filtration contracts at contract prices is about $1,685,000. A fair price, allowing 20 per cent. profit, would be $1,218,000. The difference the city will lose if these contracts are completed.

"The price paid for the three-quarters of a mile of Northeast Boulevard already constructed is $552,348, on which there was a loss to the city of $273,217. There are nine and a half miles more of it laid out on the maps. If completed at contract prices the additional cost to the city will be about $6,500,000, and the additional loss at least $2,250,000.

"On the Southern Boulevard the amount paid to date is $286,389, on which the loss on the one and a quarter miles built has been $89,128. To complete it at contract prices would cost $350,516, and the additional loss would be $85,555.

"In other words the total cost of both boulevards as planned at contract prices would have been $7,636,000, and the total loss to the city $2,750,000.

"Much of the work done by Ryan and Kelley and Dr. J. McNichol is not first class. The parts which show prominently to the public are fairly well done; the parts that can be examined with a little trouble are distinctly second class, and not up to the specifications. We, of course, do not know the condition of such portions as cannot be seen without tearing up the work; but wherever we have dug into it we find it second class or worse.

"The Southern Boulevard work so far as can be seen is good. As yet only the rough work of filling has been done."

One of the means by which excessive profits were made possible, the report says, was by not permitting fair competition. The advertising was wholly inadequate—scarcely more than a pretense.

"A careful analysis of all filtration advertising," it says, "indicates that everything possible was done to avoid any local publicity without letting that fact appear too prominently in the records. The bureau's preliminary estimates, instead of being freely furnished to bidders, were rigorously guarded secrets so far as the general bidder was concerned, except that they were furnished in the specifications for filtering materials where they were very little needed.

"The specifications in many particulars were unfair to bidders and gave excessive and unnecessary power to city officials. In short, the specifications were so drawn that the engineer in charge could harass an unwelcome contractor to an almost unlimited extent without the contractor being able to prevent it or secure legal redress."

A frequently used method of guiding contracts into the desired hands, the report says, was to readvertise them whenever others were the lowest bidders. In some cases contracts were let to the firm which promised to do the work in the shortest time and not to the lowest bidder. The McNichol bids always proposed strikingly short periods for the completion of contracts, and in one case notice to begin work was given to McNichol four months after he started the operation so that the firm would have four months in which to complete the contract. In many instances the proposed time was exceeded by from 10 to 200 per cent. In the aggregate, the report says, McNichol could have been assessed for liquidated damages for overtime about $532,000. He was actually assessed $3,255.

The report says the filtration system ought to have been completed on Jan. 1, 1904; that since June 6, 1904, when the West Philadelphia district began receiving filtered water, there have been only 10 deaths from typhoid fever out of a population of 41,000. At the same proportional rate the deaths from typhoid fever in the whole city since Jan. 1, 1904, when the filtered water system ought to have been completed, should have been 57 or less, whereas 1,257 have died from that disease.

Since Jan. 1, 1904, the total number of cases of typhoid, including deaths, was 11,978. The difference between 57 and 1,257, the report says, represents the loss of life due to the methods that have been employed in conducting the filtration work.

State Senator James P. McNichol in commenting upon the report to-night, said: "The statement that profits aggregating over eight millions of dollars have been made on the filtration plants is absurd. The work was in many respects experimental, and many losses occurred in unexpected places, such losses amounting on some of the contracts to 15 per cent. of the total amount of the contract."

Sacrificed an Arm to Save His Life.

To save himself from being cut in two by a circular saw yesterday, David Kronenberg, the proprietor of a molding mill at 126 Osborn Street, Brooklyn, sacrificed his left forearm. The left sleeve of his coat caught in a board which was running through the saw and Kronenberg was being rapidly drawn toward the saw when he placed his arm against it. The arm was amputated in a few seconds. Then the injured man bandaged up his arm as best he could and walked four blocks for assistance.

PENCIL ON SHAW'S PLAY.

But Just on the Lines, to Cut Out Double Meanings.

"Mrs. Warren's Profession" will not be presented to-night at the Garrick Theatre as it was written by George Bernard Shaw. Arnold Daly was busy yesterday and until late last night editing it, and when the jury of New York dramatic critics passes on it as to its cleanliness the verdict will not necessarily imply the commendation or condemnation of the play as it came from Mr. Shaw's pen.

Every single line which is capable of double construction will be either eliminated entirely or so changed as to convey directly the meaning intended.

"It is true," said Mr. Daly, through his personal representative, Winchell Smith, "that some of the lines have been cut out or changed, but nowhere has the impression which Mr. Shaw meant to convey been clouded. The changes are purely changes of words, made necessary by the fact that some of the lines, as the play is written, are susceptible of impure constructions which were not at all intended."

"I am greatly upset by the injustice of the stand taken by the Mayor of New Haven, and am tired out by last night's long rehearsal, so that I have not the strength nor the time to go further into the defense of the play," Mr. Daly said. "The play will positively be presented to-night, and if it is condemned by the jury of critics it will be withdrawn. That is all there is to it."

"But suppose the jury disagrees," it was suggested. "How will you govern yourself then?"

"I will take the concensus of opinion."

THE HERBERT CONCERTS.

Russian Composers Featured in the Second of the Series.

The second of the Victor Herbert Sunday night concerts at the Majestic Theatre brought out a large audience again last night. The Russian composers were liberally represented in the programme, among the numbers being the peasants' dance of Glazounow, the Malaguená from Moszkowski's opera "Boadbil," and the "Andante Cantabile" of Tschaikowsky. The latter was arranged for strings only and brought out the full strength of Mr. Herbert's strong organization.

George Leon Moore, the soloist, was heard in the aria "O! Vision Entrancing," from Thomas's opera "Esmeralda," and in two songs, "Before the Dawn," by Chadwick, and "Bid Me Live," by Hatton. Mr. Herbert's orchestra gave Litolff's "Robespierre" overture, the Marseillaise theme, which brought out much applause from the Frenchmen present, and the "Dance of Apprentices" from the third act of "Die Meistersinger."

Of the conductor's own compositions the programme contained the entr'acte from "Mlle. Modiste," "The Moth and the Moon," from "Miss Dolly Dollars," and the march finale from "Wonderland," but the audience was not satisfied with this small offering of Herbert music and made the orchestra give the principal numbers from "It Happened in Nordland."

NOW HERE'S "SALOME,"

And Mr. Hopp Greatly Fears Comstock Will Stop the Play.

Oscar Wilde's "Salome" is to be presented under the auspices of the Progressive Stage Society at the Berkeley Lyceum, beginning to-morrow evening. Julius Hopp of that society innocently called up THE TIMES yesterday to express the fear that Anthony Comstock might interfere with the production if it got into the papers that it was an immoral play.

"Mercedes Leigh, who is to play the part of Salome, has been notified of an attempt which Comstock proposes to make to interfere with the play," Mr. Hopp said.

At some length Mr. Hopp said that the play has rare poetic beauty, and that the theme in some respects was similar to Maeterlinck's "Monna Vanna" and many other plays which had been presented in this city without question.

ROGERS BROTHERS BACK.

The Comedians Make Peace with the Theatrical Syndicate.

The Rogers Brothers have made up their differences with the theatrical syndicate, and Klaw & Erlanger will do their booking for the rest of this season. When the two comedians had a falling out with the syndicate a few weeks ago, it was announced that the Shuberts would be their managers and also acquire the stock in the New York and Liberty Theatres owned by the Rogers Brothers. The Shuberts later denied that they would purchase the stock in the theatres, but said they would manage the comedians.

Still another report was issued early last week. This was that the Shuberts would simply book the Rogers Brothers.

Ade Sells "The County Chairman."

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—With the closing performance of "The County Chairman" at the Columbia Theatre last night, all the rights and titles of the play written by George Ade passed into the ownership of Maclyn Arbuckle and Joseph E. Luckett. Mr. Arbuckle has been the star in the title rôle since the first production of the play. Mr. Luckett has been manager of the Columbia Theatre in this city for several years.

New Brunswick Opera House Sold.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Oct. 28.—Shortridge's Theatre, the only one in this city, passed into the hands of the New Brunswick Opera House Company this morning. Ex-Mayor George A. Viehmann, ex-Sheriff George J. Litterst, and Louis C. Wiswell of Stair & Havlin, the theatrical booking company, are interested in the company.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Edith Evelyn will play the title role in the comedy drama "Hazel Kirke" at the Yorkville Theatre this week. Mabel Montgomery is ill.

Andre Messager, composer of "Véronique," which will be presented for the first time in America to-night at the Broadway Theatre, will conduct the orchestra in person. The curtain will rise promptly at 8 o'clock.

Arenstaff, the ticket speculator who was arrested on Saturday while selling tickets to "Monna Vanna" in front of the Manhattan Theatre, was fined $2 and reprimanded in the Jefferson Market Police Court yesterday morning.

Miss Marie Cahill came to town yesterday after a five weeks' tour in her new play "Moonshine," and said she was very much in earnest in her efforts to establish a Mary Anderson Guild. Her plan had received the indorsement of Thomas M. Muiry, President of the St. Vincent de Paul Society, who calls it "a most practical charity."

Baptised in the Hackensack.

Mr. and Mrs. John Doran, Seventh Day Adventist converts, were baptised yesterday in the cold waters of the Hackensack River by Evangelist J. H. Carrol. The evangelist told the spectators that the world would come to an end within ten years

HALL CAINE ON WEALTH TO ROCKEFELLER CLASS

Says It Is a Menace to the Individual and the Nation.

HIS FAREWELL TO AMERICA

King Edward the Most Popular Man Here Next to Roosevelt—Kaiser Called a Pagan Monarch.

Hall Caine discussed wealth as a menace to nations and individuals in a talk to the Rockefeller Bible class yesterday afternoon. He praised Mr. Roosevelt; said that next to the President King Edward was the most popular man in this country, and called Emperor William a pagan monarch.

The speech was Mr. Caine's farewell to America. He will sail to-morrow on the Caronia, and he said that this would be his last visit to America. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., was not present to hear Mr. Caine's sermon on wealth.

"I may say that I feel at home here," Mr. Caine began, "because my father and mother were Baptists and I feel a certain right to that belief by inheritance. I belong, however, if Dr. Johnson and Mr. Richardson will forgive me, to a broader church than that which is contined within the Baptist, the Episcopal, or the Catholic creeds or tenets.

"A novelist, most of you know, ought first and foremost to be a man who can tell a story. But this is perhaps the easiest qualification. If there is not some ethical value to his works I fear his force and power are not likely to become very great. I am not now speaking of plays. In a play a writer's work is so much what others make of it. Its charms lie so much in the representation of it that it is not wholly his own. He ought not to be given credit for all the excellencies which may accompany its presentation, and he ought not to suffer all of the humilities of its failure, for he is apt not to be fully responsible for either. But in a book a man is responsible for what he puts into it and that which he leaves out. I have tried in my books to represent the religious principles which I hold and feel."

After referring to the object of Mr. Rockefeller's class, Mr. Caine said:

Pace That Kills the Soul.

"I doubt if there has been a time when it was more desirable to apply the principles of Christianity to the life of the world. It is even more true now than it was when the poet said it, that 'the world is too much with us. Late and soon, getting and spending, we lay waste our powers.'

"A few days ago Mr. Choate lamented in the life of your country the pace that kills. I wish to associate myself with what he said so eloquently, and to embrace my own country in the range of his criticism. But I wan to go a step further than Mr. Choate. He lamented the pace that kills the body. I lament the pace that kills the soul. The soul as well as the body wants its resting times, its hours for recuperation. We are so much occupied in getting and spending as men, and in our progress and prosperity as nations, that we leave no time to the individual or the collective soul to restore itself, to build itself up and grow strong.

"When I think of the application of the principles of Christianity to the practical life of the time, I am instantly made to reflect upon the hard saying, 'It is easier for a camel to pass through the eye of a needle than for a rich man to inherit the kingdom of heaven.' No one with any knowledge of the symbolism of the East will understand that to mean that, according to the teaching of Christ, it is impossible for a man to be rich and yet live the Christ life. But any one may see that it was the intention of Christ to say that it is harder for a rich man to be good than for a poor man to be good.

"But if it is hard for the rich man to inherit the kingdom of heaven, what about the position of the rich nation? Does not the same principle apply?"

Mr. Caine said that there was no nation in the world that did not stand condemned as positively pagan. He continued:

Compares Roosevelt to Gladstone.

"President Roosevelt is one of the very few men in the sphere of public affairs since Mr. Gladstone, who bring public questions, first of all, to the touchstone of principle, telling you in America that your great Republic, your great democracy, can live on the foundation of justice; that ill-got power or ill-got prosperity, whether in the individual or the nation, can lead only to ruin and bankruptcy and shame. We want such a man in England at this moment. There never was a time when, in the struggle for national welfare, such men with such principles were more wanted in all the nations of the world."

Turning to the question of drink, Mr. Caine said:

"Women and children are the chief sufferers by the trade of drink, and by the false and unchristian attitude of the nations with regard to it, and I look to the coming enfranchisement of our women as the most powerful help toward removing the wrongs that attach to it. In nothing is it more true than on the tragic side of life which is concerned with drink and its consequences, that it is 'the woman who pays.' And because woman more than man pays the price of the drink trade, I look to women to deal, when their time comes, the death blow to a disease of which I truly believe that if it could be wiped out to-night, humanity would awake in the morning with more than half its sorrows and sufferings gone."

A Plea for Peace.

In a plea for universal peace Mr. Caine said:

"Isn't it a fact that newspapers in democratic countries are often a constant danger at times of international differences? It will be answered that newspapers have no financial interest to serve in provoking wars, inasmuch as a time of war is to them a time of loss. That is a falsehood that ought to be nailed down once for all.

"It may be true that the increased circulation which comes to newspapers in a time of war is more than counterbalanced by the increased cost of production, but no proprietor of the yellowest newspaper will dare to deny that when he spends his money to meet the needs of the increased circulation which wartime brings him he lives in hope that a profitable part of that increase will remain to him in times of peace. It requires a vigorous exercise of Christian principles, and a very disinterested public spirit, to conduct a newspaper at a time of national disagreement and to uphold the doctrinea of peace. Thank God that is not a thing unknown either in your country or in ours.

"Your President has lately done noble service for humanity in helping to put an end to the bloody conflict in the East. All the world honors him for it, and it is a proud thing for America that one of its citizens, a man of the people, although the head of your executive, has been able to do a work which was impossible to any crowned head in the world. And in this connection I am, as an Englishman, proud to think that no man has been a stronger force for good in staying or preventing the ravages of the god of war than the present King of England. If I had to say who, outside of your own President, and perhaps not excluding even him, is the most popular man in America at this moment, I should probably say King Edward VII.

The Kaiser a Pagan Monarch.

"There is such a vast and influential German element in this country, and especially in this city, that I heartily wish it were possible to believe that only second to the English King and the President of the United States as a force that makes for the peace of the world is the German Emperor. The Kaiser is assuredly one of the most impressive figures of the time. His ardor, his enthusiasm, his almost frantic fervor of religious belief, give no kind of doubt that as a man he is a Christian. But his passion for empire, his faith in physical force, his reliance in the power of the sword as a means of upholding the welfare of his country leave no kind of doubt that as a monarch he is a Pagan."

A WALDORF IN LONDON BUILT BY AMERICANS

Plans for a Hotel with Two Theatres Adjoining.

SITE IN ALDWYCH STREET

Structure to Cost $1,500,000—Shuberts Will Manage One Theatre and Charles Frohman the Other.

An American hotel is to be built in London with American capital. It will be on the general plan of the Waldorf-Astoria, and will be called the Waldorf. The site will be in Aldwych Street, which was opened by King Edward a short time ago with elaborate ceremonies.

In connection with this project two theatres are to be built, one on each side of the hotel. One will be known as the Waldorf Theatre and the other as the Aldwych. The Waldorf will be under the management of Shubert Brothers, and Charles Frohman will manage the Aldwych. The builders of the hotel and the theatres are Waring & White, the London branch of the New York firm of J. G. White & Co., of 43 Exchange Place. Announcement of the enterprise, which is to cost $1,500,000, was made yesterday by representatives of J. G. White & Co. This firm built and is operating the street railways in Manila, Monterey, Mexico, and various other North and South American cities.

The new hotel will be in the leading thoroughfare of the new London, as Aldwych Street lies between the Strand and Holborn. The plans for the hotel and the theatres, which are to be built as wings, were made by A. Marshall Mackenzie of Aberdeen, who spent much time in the United States studying hotel construction before preparing his plans. The furniture and the furnishings have been designed in harmony with the style of the building.

The new Waldorf Hotel will rise sixty feet higher than the adjoining theatres. The building will be of white Portland stone, with a striking elevation in the Louis Seize style of architecture. There will be a splendid row of columns in front, each being as large as the columna on the façade of St. Paul's Cathedral. The base of the building will be in blocks of gray Aberdeen granite.

There will be three great entranee halls, the middle one opening from a palm garden which will be a representation of the courtyard of a great Louis Seize mansion. Nothing in London will equal the dining rooms, 200 feet in length. In addition to the adjoining theatres, the Waldorf Hotel will be near five of the present big London theatres, which will make the spot London's greatest amusement centre. Luncheon and dinner will be served to the large and increasing number of professional men who now live in the Temple and in chambers in or near the City and Charing Cross. Besides the great dining room there will be other dining rooms around the palm garden for the use of dinner parties. Around the garden will be a marble terrace, and beneath will be one of the finest grillrooms in London.

The hotel will have 400 bedrooms and 200 bathrooms. A bath will be attached to each bedroom or suite. It is intended to make the hotel a centre for foreigners visiting London. Part of the hotel will be run on the apartment hotel plan.

FOUR CONDUCTORS ASSIST.

A Notable Quartet Wields the Baton at a Masonic Concert.

Frank Damrosch, Victor Herbert, John Philip Sousa, and Nahan Franko, and Mme. Lillian Blauvelt assembled on Carnegie Hall stage yesterday afternoon and did all in their power to make the concert in aid of the Masonic Sanitarium for Consumptives go ahead of expectations. It did.

From the first to the last number intense appreciation was evident. Though the programme declared that there would be no encores for orchestral numbers the audience clamored always. Mme. Blauvelt charmed everybody with her songs, and, for good measure, charmed all again with her bow and smile. Besides a full meed of applause two clusters of American Beauty roses, each stalk as tall as herself, were the prima-donna's portion.

It was Mme. Blauvelt's last appearance in concert, special permission having been obtained from her operatic manager, F. C. Whitney. Her selections were Una Voce from "The Barber of Seville," and Sicilian Vespers.

The set piece was the Hallelujah Chorus from Handel's "Messiah," by the Brooklyn Oratorio Society, led by Walter Henry Hall. The four conductors, like the soloist, received ovations when they appeared in turn to lead the orchestra of 100 pieces. Everything that was offered pleased.

The concert was given under the auspices of St. Cecile Lodge, No. 568, F. and A. M., recognized as the musical lodge of all lodges of the order in New York or elsewhere. All gave their services absolutely free.

CONCERT BY IRISHWOMEN.

Gaelic Songs Welcomed by Big Audience at the Academy.

Twice yesterday the Irish Ladies' Choir of Dublin gave concerts to large audiences at the Academy of Music, composed principally of persons to whom the songs had patriotic significance. The programmes for both concerts were arranged by Mrs. Cosslett Heller, the leader, who trained the voices and won prizes for them as well as herself at several festivals in England and Ireland.

The selections, vocal and instrumental, were principally Irish folk-songs, the effort of the choir being to revive Gaelic songs. The programme, however, was interspersed with preludes by Chopin, arias by Glück, and solos by Liszt. After a tour, the choir will be at the Academy of Music again on the afternoons and evenings of Dec. 17, and 24.

ALEXANDER'S SACRIFICE.

Started Equitable Crisis to Clear His Conscience, Dr. Stimson Says.

The Rev. Dr. Henry A. Stimson, pastor of the Manhattan Congregational Church, preached yesterday on "Money and Men." He said, in part:

"It is plain that God does not intend that what He claims as His shall be destructive to men—that money shall destroy souls. Silver and gold, like steam and electricity and dynamite and alcohol, are sometimes a special danger to men. Even God's best gift may be a snare to a sinful heart, as the love of money may be the root of every kind of evil. To-day many strong men are drunk with money. As a ship's compass is affected by the proximity of a mass of iron, their moral compass is made good for nothing by having near at hand a lot of gold.

"This simile is not mine. It has a tragic history. I am told it by a gentleman who was present at the interview. A dozen or more insurance financiers were assembled in a room, just prior to the exposure of the affairs of the Equitable Life. Its President, Mr. Alexander, stood before them and pleaded for a change of method, announcing the course he proposed to take in case of their refusal. He could endure existing conditions no longer. They said, 'It will ruin you.' 'I know it,' he replied. 'There is a saying of the ancients, "Let the man who has the fewest years to live be the sacrifice." I am the oldest man present. You, with your millions, may weather the storm. I shall go upon the rocks; but my conscience will be clear.' And more to the same effect, warning them that they were steering by a compass perverted by their gold.

"It was a dramatic scene, prophetic of all that has happened since, but the men in authority could not be moved. A few hours after he gave to the press his letter addressed to Mr. Hyde, and the crisis was on."

CHRIST CHURCH DEDICATED.

New Presbyterian House of Worship Built in Episcopalian Style.

Christ Church, (Presbyterian,) at 334 West Thirty-sixth Street, was dedicated last night, the officiating clergymen being the Rev. Dr. William R. Richards of the Brick Church, the Rev. Dr. Henry Van Dyke, minister of the Brick Church from 1883 to 1900; the Rev. Dr. James M. Farr, who is in charge of Christ Church; the Rev. Dr. George S. Webster of the Church of the Covenant, and the Rev. Dr. Shepherd Knapp, assistant minister of the Brick Church. The congregation filled the church.

The church and church house are built as a memorial by the people of the Brick Church and Christ Church. The church house is in memory of the Rev. Dr. Maltbie Davenport Babcock, pastor of the Brick Church from 1900 to 1901, and the church in recognition of the ministry of Dr. Van Dyke, pastor of the Brick Church from 1883 to 1900.

The architecture is simple English Gothic, and an innovation in Presbyterian churches has been introduced in the arrangement for the ministry and choir. Altogether the arrangement is like that in an Episcopal church. The choir of men and women wears long black gowns and enters in procession.

JOHN ST. CHURCH REJOICES.

Pioneer Methodist Flock Celebrates Its 139th Anniversary.

From far and near came hundreds of members and former members of the old John Street Methodist Church yesterday to celebrate the one hundred and thirty-ninth anniversary of the foundation of the church. From the settling of Philip Embury, a disciple of Wesley, in New York in 1760, dates the foundation of Methodism in America.

There was a special service yesterday morning and others throughout the day, the Rev. Dr. J. M. Buckley, editor of The Christian Advocate, preached the morning sermon.

A number of ex-criminals told at the afternoon service how they had been reformed. The church, in connection with its other work, directs the Water Street Mission and the Wesley Rescue Hall. In charge of the meeting was the Rev. S. H. Hadley, an ex-forger, who is superintendent of both institutions.

THE JUDICIARY AMENDMENT.

Ex-Judge Herrick Advises Its Defeat as a Republican Job.

An important Constitutional amendment upon which the people will be called to pass at the election provides for an increase in the number of Justices of the Supreme Court. The people are to vote whether or not the Legislature shall increase the number of Justices in the Third, Fourth, Fifth, Sixth, Seventh, and Eighth Judicial Districts until there shall be a Justice for every 60,000 inhabitants. In the First and Second Departments the number of Justices would be one to every 60,000 inhabitants. Under the Constitution the Legislature must rearrange the eight Judicial Districts following the taking of the State census. A reapportionment of Justices must also be made by the Legislature.

There is a strong sentiment among the members of the bench and bar in the First and Second Departments in favor of the passage of this amendment, but ex-Judge D. Cady Herrick at Carnegie Hall Saturday night said that it was a good amendment to defeat. He asserted that there were at present more Judges to discharge the judicial business of the State of New York than there were to discharge the judicial business of the whole of Great Britain.

While a few more Justices might be needed in the First and Second Departments, ex-Judge Herrick said, there is absolutely no need for more Judges up-State. The effect of the adoption of the amendment, he added, would be to bring about the transfer of more Republican Judges from up-State to New York City where, instead of $7,500 a year, they receive $17,500.

BRAVE POLICEMAN BURNED.

And the Woman He Sought to Rescue Was Already Safe.

Seeking bravely to rescue from a burning house a supposed imperiled woman who was all the time safe in the street, Policeman Jeremiah Kearny of the Grand Avenue Police Station, Brooklyn, was severely burned yesterday afternoon and forced to jump from a second-story window.

The policeman made his plucky but needless efforts at rescue at a two-family frame house at 1,089 Pacific Street. The fire, the cause of which is not known, started on the first floor and spread rapidly through the building. Kearny hustled the tenants out of the house, and supposed that all had got out safely, when some one told him a woman was still on the upper floor. Although the building was all ablaze, Kearny made his way upstairs through the flames and groped about on his hands and knees, searching for the woman.

Satisfying himself that there was no one there, he returned to the hallway, to find his escape by that route cut off by the flames. His clothing took fire, but he smothered the blaze by wrapping a bed quilt about him. Kearny was finally driven to a rear window, from which he was forced to jump to save himself.

He was severely bruised and his face, hands, and body were painfully burned. As he was being taken to St. John's Hospital Kearny learned that the woman whom he had sought to rescue had been one of the first to get out of the building.

No Services at St. Thomas's Yet.

The first service since the fire which destroyed St. Thomas's Protestant Episcopal Church, in Fifth Avenue, was to have been held yesterday in the temporary building erected among the ruins on the site, but it was decided that it would not be expedient to use the building. The first service will be held there day after to-morrow, All Saints' Day, at 1 P. M.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 29.—The high pressure area, while it still covers the entire country except the middle and southern plateau, has diminished somewhat in strength, and conditions in the Northwest have become somewhat unsettled, with local snows. An irregular disturbance over the middle and southern plateau, in connection with the high area to the northeastward, has also caused snow in Wyoming, Eastern Colorado, and the western portions of Nebraska and Kansas. There was no precipitation over the eastern portion of the country, except light rains along the South Atlantic Coast.

Temperatures continue below the seasonal average, except in the Pacific Coast States, the departures from the normal ranging from 5 to 23 degrees, the greatest difference being over the Northwestern States and the Central Rocky Mountain region. There will be snow Tuesday in the upper lake region and the Central Rocky Mountain region, and rain or snow in Utah, Western Colorado, Nebraska, and Kansas. There will be rain or snow Wednesday in the lower lake region, and probably rain in Texas, the Middle Mississippi, and Lower Ohio Valley, and the extreme Southwest. It will be colder in the Southern plateau. Elsewhere temperature changes will not be marked.

The winds along the New England and Middle Atlantic Coast will be light to fresh northeast to east; on the South Atlantic Coast, fresh northeast, except brisk on the North Carolina Coast; on the East Gulf Coast, light to fresh northeast to east; on the West Gulf Coast, fresh easterly; on the lower lakes, light to fresh east to south; on the upper lakes, light to fresh south to southwest, shifting to northwest.

SATURDAY'S BIG GAMES SHOW FOOTBALL FORM

Teams Compared for the Championship Contests to Come.

TIGER COACHES DISCOURAGED

West Point's Next Encounter Will Be with the Indians—Columbia Meets Yale This Week.

While the gridiron contests of Saturday developed no surprises, unless the victory of Pennsylvania over the Indians, in view of the general fear of defeat, be termed a surprise, they afford food for study to the analyst looking for indications of form to determine the chances in the real championship contests to follow. There was much of interest in the showing of Yale against West Point, in comparison with that of Harvard seven days before, as there was also in Harvard's work against Brown, reviewed in the light of what the Pennsylvania game with Brown showed the previous Saturday, and there were fruitful opportunities to weigh Princeton's strength in the game with Columbia.

Taking first the West Point games, it would seem at first glance that Yale, by her large score, was greatly superior to Harvard in the two contests. Yet analyzing the score alone, it develops that Yale made her first touchdown through an inexcusable and unnecessary fumble on West Point's fifteen-yard line, her safety on an unpardonable bit of stupidity in Beavers not kicking the ball on his attempted fake kick, when he saw himself likely to be tackled behind his own line, and her last touchdown on a run of forty-five yards, which Jones, after catching a punt, made by brilliant dodging. While the latter was unquestionably good play, it was at the same time an unlikely play, and, all things considered, though Yale gained enough to score more frequently, only one touchdown was strictly earned.

Considering the Blue's defense, West Point carried the ball, not by long, erratic end runs, but by steady, short line plunges, for sixty yards right through Yale's territory until the leather reached the three-yard line. Here Yale held for downs and in a measure redeemed herself, but the sixty-yard gain showed that the Blue line was vulnerable and that Harvard has the possibility of penetrating it by consistent line plunging.

Harvard showed great improvement over her West Point form in the game with Brown. The Providence team, though a fairly strong aggregation, is not intrinsically as good as West Point. It seems quite as able defensively, however. Harvard carried the ball for two long series of short rushes through the line 53 and 94 yards. The latter was especially commendable. The Brown team could not penetrate the Crimson line, but its attack is not strong. The two real gains made, 20-yard runs from quarter back, simply fooled the ends.

Compared with Pennsylvania's showing against Brown, Harvard gained no more ground, but gained more steadily. Pennsylvania's fumbling marred their attack and lost three good chances to score. The defense of Crimson and Quaker were equally effective, and Brown was never dangerous to either. Penn used kicking more, and covered kicks better.

The Princeton game against Columbia offers food for serious thought to those Nassau supporters who have been comfortably regarding the big scores made by the Tigers in their preliminary games and figuring that the eleven was probably exceptionally clever. Careful study of the game they played at American League Park does not tend to that belief. The score of course means nothing, for the first half was given over exclusively to defensive play, while in the second half there was no evidence in the selection of plays of any desire to run up a total. The inevitable conclusion is that the Tigers sought to develop good interference on end runs in the early games against weak opponents, and therefore made big totals and are now trying to develop line plunging and practice defensive tactics.

Take the defense of the eleven, and unless a big improvement is evident in the right side there is no chance of stopping Yale's attack. Columbia plowed through time and again with an ease that must have meant weakness. Of course a substitute was playing tackle, but that does not entirely excuse it. He may have to play regularly before the Yale game. Then in following kicks the ends were way below par. Both these departments must be materially improved if Nassau is to win its big games. Indeed, unless it is speedily remedied Cornell may trounce them two weeks hence.

Columbia showed encouraging improvement over previous form. The Blue and White have no possibility of reaching first-class form, however. If they can hold Yale down and make a good, hard fight against Cornell and Pennsylvania they can consider that they have done all that they can expect. They are physically as able as the others, but painfully slow and seem to lack woefully knowledge of what to do.

The Princeton football squad returned to Princeton yesterday morning in good condition with only one injury from the Columbia game, but every man looked a little sleepy. This was due to the fact that the aggregation kept its latest hours of the season in New York Saturday night. After the victory over the Blue and White the "Tigers" attended the theatre. The coaches were not altogether satisfied with the showing made in Saturday's contest, in spite of the fact that the eleven had been instructed to play a defensive game in the first half. The right side of the line would undoubtedly have been stronger but for the fact that Dillon, who played guard next to Phillips, received a blow on the head soon after the game started, which threw him into a dazed condition. In this state he played through the entire contest and later suffered a broken nose, which rendered him still less able to play in his usual form.

West Point finds it a hard matter to become reconciled to the crushing defeat which she received from Yale. It is needless to state that Army supporters were greatly surprised. Now things look very blue for the Army on Dec. 2, when the Army and Navy meet. Defects were shown in West Point's team which can hardly be remedied. The team had no injuries to speak of yesterday. Christy and Weeks are in the hospital, but will soon be out. The others are bruised up considerably, but are all right otherwise. After one day's rest every effort will be put forward for the game with the Carlisle Indians on Nov. 11. This will be West Point's next game, since the game with Vermont for next Saturday has been canceled.

West Point has not had such a poor team for years. It is thought that so many successive victories over the Navy have made the cadets overconfident and indifferent. The three defeats in the last three weeks ought to make West Point realize how poor her team is. At any rate, lots of hard work is in store for the football squad.

Nick Kind First of Tiger Wheelmen.

The Tiger Wheelmen had great sport on the Hoffman Boulevard at Jamaica, L. I., yesterday. It was the fourth of a series of championship races, comprising a handicap of twenty miles. The affair differed materially from ordinary races of the kind, because the riders did not know the extent of their handicap until the contest was finished. The starters were pushed off together, and it then became a case of the speediest outriding the others. It was the best attended event of the series. The time of the first seven riders was:

	Handicap. M.S.	Time. H.M.S.
Nick Kind	5:00	1:03:25
N. McDonald	Scratch	1:01:20
Chris Kind	6:00	1:09:13
F. Morin	0:45	1:05:25
O. Brandes	0:45	1:05:29
G. B. Hunter	3:00	1:09:37
G. Fox	..	1:16:52

Next Sunday's run will be held on the Merrick Road at Valley Stream, L. I., the distance being twenty-five miles.

Hoppe, Billiardist, Going to Paris.

Willie Hoppe, the young billiard player, who was unable to induce George Slosson to cover his deposit of $500 and play him a match at the balk-line game, will sail for Paris this week for the purpose of arranging a match with either Champion Vignaux or any of the other experts in the French capital. By securing a meeting with some of the stars in Paris Hoppe hopes to attain such form that upon his return home Slosson cannot ever well evade a match with him. While in Paris Hoppe will make his headquarters at M. Duçe's Academy.

ERASE DUFFEY'S NAME FROM COLLEGE RECORD

Intercollegiate Officials Want Summary Action Taken.

MUST EXPLAIN AFFIDAVITS

To Ask Georgetown to Investigate Confession—Athletes Resent Sprinter's Charges Against Them.

The immense sensation made by Arthur F. Duffey's confession of professionalism can be best appreciated when the statement is made that it was almost the exclusive topic of conversation in athletic circles yesterday. The action of James E. Sullivan, Secretary of the Amateur Athletic Union, in expunging Duffey's performances and records from the amateur lists was generally commended and the hope expressed that the suggested legal prosecution be successful.

Collegians feel Duffey's action sorely. The officers of the Intercollegiate Association are not disposed to deal lightly with him. They have been especially imposed upon, since his amateur standing was under investigation before them and affidavit made to his bona fide standing. Georgetown was sponsor for him. While there is no disposition to doubt Georgetown's sincerity in its expressed belief in him, at the same time it is felt that formal attention to the matter should be called, leaving Georgetown officials to investigate the deception practiced upon them and report. This will probably be done.

Of course Duffey's records on the books of the Intercollegiate Association will be erased and credit given in the list of champions to the men who finished second to him in the races. These include W. T. Lightner of Harvard in 1901, W. A. Schick, Jr., of Harvard in 1902, and F. R. Moulton of Yale in 1903. No recognition can be taken of the changes thus occasioned in the contests for the championship trophy, as the absence of a fifth man in the hundred yards would make such changes unfair.

On this score Evert J. Wendell, one of the best known and most influential of the graduate advisers in intercollegiate athletics, said yesterday:

"Of course any man whose records appear on amateur lists who is subsequently proved a professional has no right to such position. His name must be erased wherever found. It should be the same with Duffey in the intercollegiate records. I cannot express adequately my regret at the unfortunate occurrence. I am most sorry for the man and for the necessity of action which it places upon us."

The athletes who are engaged in active competition on track and field feel very sore because of the stigma placed upon American athletics before the world through Duffey's prominence. They feel the stain can only be removed by the most severe punishment that could be meted out. There was a general feeling of resentment among them that Duffey had stamped them as a class as practicing the same methods. This they bitterly refute, and the athletic authorities sustain them in their denials.

As speedily as the machinery of investigation can be set in motion an effort will be made to discover Duffey's accomplices. On this score Secretary Sullivan said yesterday:

"I think Duffey's principal offenses have been committed abroad. Indeed, this must be so, since in the last five years he has not competed more than a dozen times in America. We are not concerned with the nature of the inducements offered to him there, but we will investigate all his connections here most thoroughly.

"It must be borne in mind that his professionalism dates from 1898, and he did not go abroad until 1900, so that his first offenses were committed on this side of the water. Every meeting in which he took part and every organization which he represented must be probed for the truth. Since these organizations vouched for his amateur standing they ought to be only too ready to aid in clearing the matter up.

"We must prosecute this case to the bitter end, no matter what it costs. As for Duffey's charges that other athletes are as bad, indeed that the practices he made were the rule, that I know is untrue. There are only three athletes to-day who are questioned. These are Joyce, Castleman, and Sheridan. The charges against Joyce are well known, Castleman is attacked on the score of Summer baseball, and Sheridan because of the claim that he was an athletic instructor. There may be isolated cases of crookedness, but any wholesale practice would certainly come to our knowledge.

"The disclosures compel a rigid examination of those athletes who have been going abroad, however. The four men who have just returned have not yet complied with the rule which demands that they shall give detailed explanation of all expenses accepted by them. They will be interrogated thoroughly and compelled to demonstrate their amateur status before they will again be allowed to compete. These four are Taylor, the colored quarter-miler; Hyman, his college mate; Amsler, the intercollegiate champion hurdler, and McDonald, the high jumper.

"Until I have gone over the matter of Duffey's prosecution with our attorneys I cannot say just how we will proceed."

AUTOS BEGIN TEST TO-DAY.

Economy Run Presents Novel Features and Good Results Are Expected.

Automobile interest has been widely aroused, particularly in local circles, over the six-day economy run which will start to-day from the Smith & Mabley garage, Broadway and Fifty-sixth Street, on the initial run to Philadelphia. The presence of a ten-passenger 'bus and three of the cars known as compounds will contribute a novelty to the affair, and the results in these cases will be watched with especial interest.

It will be the first time in this country that a passenger 'bus will be put through a thorough test regarding cost of operation per passenger for each mile and over much longer distance than would be demanded in actual service. Interurban transportation interests have shown more than ordinary curiosity in the results.

The route to be covered is to Philadelphia and back on Monday and Tuesday, to Albany and back on Wednesday and Thursday, and to Southampton, L. I., and back on Friday and Saturday, making a total running distance of 092 miles.

The competing cars; drivers, horse power, and passenger capacity are as follows:

1. Frayer-Miller, Lee Frayer, driver; 5 passengers, 24 horse power.
2. Marmon, Arthur Largenson, driver; 4 passengers, 20 horse power.
3. Reo, Richard Lockwood, driver; 10 passengers, 16 horse power.
4. Reo, Charles C. Singer, driver; 4 passengers, 8 horse power.

6. Compound, F. C. Carter, driver; 4 passengers, 12-15 horse power.
7. Compound, E. C. Hatch, driver; 4 passengers, 12-15 horse power.

THE SPECULATIVE SITUATION.

For a period of about six weeks, or since the recovery in prices from the sharp decline that occurred in the first fortnight of September, the stock market has been highly unsatisfactory from the habitual speculator's point of view, no matter on which he has played it. Those holding a bearish position have complained most, probably because from time to time they have been caught short of the "specialties" that have been advanced by aggressive manipulation, but in a general way the bullish operator, especially if his speculations have been confined to those stocks only in which it is possible to have a broad speculation, has found the market equally unprofitable, and in each case the reason is the same, namely, that the market during the period in question has been as vacillating as a weathercock. Weakness and strength have alternated, not by weeks or days, but by hours. The general market, in short, has been without a recognized tendency either one way or the other. Bearish traders have sold stocks persistently on the bulges, and then, 1 per cent. lower, with the market looking very weak, they have doubled up, only to see prices come back again to the level of their first selling in a perfectly bewildering manner. Bullish traders, on the other side, have bought stocks on recessione, and then, 1 per cent. or so higher, have doubled their lines because the strength was irresistible, only to see the whole market turn weak again and fall back to the level of their first buying. There has been activity enough. Twice last week the daily transactions exceeded 1,000,000 shares. The speculation at times has had the appearance of broadening, and then it has flattened out again most abruptly. With prices moving up and down in this seemingly aimless manner, bullish and bearish ammunition has been equally ineffective. Bullish influences have made prices strong and bearish influences have made them weak, but on neither side has there been an accumulation of influences strong enough to give the market a pronounced impulse in either direction.

Since Sept. 27 the range of twenty active railroads of which the average price is charted by Dow-Jones & Co. has been less than 3 per cent. The extremes have been a low average of 130.04 and a high average of 132.62. The average price at the close of last week was within a small fraction of the average on Sept. 27. These averages tell the whole story.

The troubles of traders would not be worth recounting, nor would the mere recital of the fact that the market has been fluctuating on one level for so long a period possess any particular interest, if it were not for the fact that a market of this kind is indicative of one of two things—distribution or accumulation. The problem narrows down to just that. For several weeks, and within a very narrow range of prices there has been in progress either a distribution or an accumulation of stocks, and during that time speculative interest has been largely preoccupied with the activity of specialties in which there is little or no general public interest.

The facts that oppose themselves to the theory of accumulation are these: (1) That the conditions referred to come on top of a tremendous advance in stock market prices, an advance that has been in progress for about eighteen months; (2) that there are many large holders of speculative securities who can afford to sell at this level of prices; (3) that while there has been no lack of bullish initiative in the last few weeks it has been employed largely to advance stocks which are not widely distributed—stocks which lend themselves to that sort of thing because nobody has got any to sell; (4) that tipping has pervaded the whole market, and people are not tipped to buy stocks unless interests are ready to sell on the prices at which they advise others to buy.

The principal fact opposed to the theory of distribution is that the commission houses are not loaded up with stocks.

That there has been continuous selling for several weeks by a conservative group of capitalists cannot well be disputed. On the other hand, it is strongly asserted that there has been strong and progressive buying by those financial interests who throughout this period of uncertainty have been positively committed to the bull side of the market. Perhaps it is true that the buying has been as good as the selling, on the whole, but it is also true that there has been a large accumulation of stocks in highly speculative hands. The majority of professional operators are long of the market and believe in higher prices. Conflicting assertions as to the relative character of the buying and selling are natural enough in view of the positive division of banking opinions as to what the market ought to do. It is no secret that certain very powerful banking interests have opposed bullish operations on this level of prices, and that another equally powerful element has been on the side of higher prices. In this dilemma the trader is reduced to the alternative of choosing between one side or the other. It is seldom that the speculative situation is so two-sided as it is at the present time.

The list of net price changes for the week shows a preponderance of declines. The news was chiefly on the bear side. Among other things, the bull element had to contend with the possibility of gold exports, the menacing Russian situation, and rumors of a fresh outcropping of the old Hill-Harriman feud in the Northwest. Mr. Harriman returned from his Eastern trip last week, and ended his first day in Wall Street by giving out an interview to which the financial community attached a great deal of ulterior significance. The troublesome sentence in Mr. Harriman's interview was this: "We are going to run into an era of competitive railroad building, just as we have passed through an era of competitive buying." The phrase about competitive railroad building gave weight to a subject which had already engaged the attention of thoughtful Wall Street observers; the speculative community was at liberty to determine for itself why Mr. Harriman placed the era of competitive buying in the past tense.

The Northwestern railroad situation is not as harmonious as could be wished for. All concerned appear to have taken an aggressive attitude. It is believed that the St. Paul is determined to build to the Pacific Coast, and Mr. Hill's friends say that if the St. Paul goes to the coast the Burlington will do likewise. Mr. Hill, of course, does not say so. There is the Western Pacific, besides, as an established undertaking, and over the northern boundary there is the Grand Trunk Pacific building to Western tidewater.

There has been a growth of conservative feeling recently toward the high-priced railroad stocks, selling at prices where they yield less than 4 per cent. to the investor. The speculative position of these high-priced stocks is going to be affected chiefly by the value of money during the next three or four months. It is noteworthy that the authorities who so far have been right in their money market predictions say that a rate as low as 4 per cent. for call money cannot be expected to continue through the remainder of the year. It is predicted, indeed, that money will shortly work tighter than it has been in the past fortnight. A good many of the high-priced stocks are selling at prices where they no longer appeal to investors, and, as one shrewd commentator has pointed out, if anything should happen to shock the market such stocks would have to decline heavily before investors would come to their support.

30 AMERICAN DESERTERS FROM WHALERS COME IN

After Leaving Their Ships They Suffered Hardships at Fayal.

WHOLE CREW MUTINIED

One of the Bertha's Watches Was Handcuffed and Chained Five Hours —Food Scanty, Seamen Declare.

The Portuguese tramp steamship Peninsular, from Fayal, brought in as passengers yesterday thirty American sailors sent home by the American Consul. All are deserters from whalers which call at Horta, the port of the island, to ship their cargoes of oil to New Bedford, Mass. The men, according to their story, have been living in secluded nooks and corners among the volcano rocks of Fayal for periods varying from two weeks to several months. They were fed by the native Portuguese, but were sadly lacking in raiment when they marched into Horta to tell their troubles to the Consul. The men say that thirty more sailors are waiting to be sent home.

Among the Peninsular's complement were three men and a boy who had composed part of the crew of the New Bedford whaler Bertha. They carried a tale of five months' hardships, ending with mutiny. Many of the men were put in irons, and one was strung up in tha rigging by the arms.

When the Bertha reached Fayal with a full cargo of 1,000 barrels, the result of the taking of 42 whales, the entire crew of thirty-four, with the exception of the first mate and one boat steerer, deserted, although each man on board was antitled to one barrel of oil in every 160.

The four who arrived on the Peninsular are Frank Sylvester of Boston, who used to be a machinist; John McDonough, who was born in Nova Scotia, and was in the Signal Corps Service in the Boer war; Charles Clark, an ex-sailor of tba American Navy, and Harry Rudolph, the cabin boy.

This is the story McDonough told to a TIMES reporter last night:

"We signed articles at New Bedford on April 22 last, for a thirty-six months' cruise. There were thirty-four of us, and only six were Americans. None of us Americans had ever been to sea before. The others were negroes from the Cape Verda Islands, and they had only made one voyage. We were practically a green crew.

"Capt. Gomez is a Portuguese, and so is the first mate, whose name is Pine. The third mate was a negro named Rose.

"As soon as we got up anchor and made sail Capt. Gomez called up aft and made a speech, in which he said there would be no trouble, but plenty of good food.

"This all sounded pretty good, but we were soon undeceived. For supper that night we had three hard biscuits each, a pint of tea, and a small piece of 'salt horse.' We had the same for breakfast, and again the same at dinner with the addition of potatoes and soup made with salt water. This was our diet, week in and week out, month in and month out. This was one of our hardships. We had no lime juice, and but little water. There was always a pail from which to take a drink, but none could be carried away. We had to wash ourselves and our clothes in salt water. The combination of whale oil and salt water resulted in the development of the dreaded whale oil boils, and we were soon covered with them and could get no relief, for we had no fresh vegetables or lime juice on board. Seasickness made us all miserable for a week.

"Somewhere off Hatteras we struck our first whale. In all we got forty-two, after cruising about until the latter part of August. The captain said he had never had such good luck before, but the good luck only increased our hardships, for we had to work double watch all the time; that is, each man had only four hours' sleep out of the twenty-four.

"We grumbled at the food and were on the verge of mutiny for weeks. We had to use a hand winch to hoist the blubber on board, and this was the hardest kind of work. At last the potatoes gave out and we had but one barrel left. We lived on hard tack, tea and salt horse. The captain and mates had 'extras,' but we got none of them.

"At last the barrels in the hold were full, and those on deck were nearly filled. One day we killed a whale and the first mate yelled out in an excited way that he believed it was a 'sick' whale—that is, that ambergris, which is worth about $200 a pound, would be found in it.

"'If that's so,' the captain yelled back, 'we'll go to New Bedford.'

"They did find a large quantity of ambergris in the whale, but we were not allowed to look at it. I saw the captain showing it afterward to some Custom House officers in Fayal.

"After this find, we sailed to Fayal. Capt. Gomez would not enter the port because he saw no other whaler there to share with him the port dues for Government anchorage. The fee is $20, for one or a dozen ships, and although we had been out five months, Gomez would not stand the charge alone, but ordered the watch to tack out to sea again.

"This enraged the men, and that night we had a whispered meeting. All agreed to refuse to work the next morning unless the Captain would give orders to return to Fayal and to give us extra food. Strangely enough, we clamored chiefly for molasses.

"The next morning the starboard watch was ordered to breakfast. They refused to eat or to work. Then the Captain, who had previously threatened to string up by the hands any one he heard swearing, raged and cursed on the quarter deck.

"'I'll show you who's boss here!' he yelled. 'I'll put you all in irons.' And he did put old-fashioned handcuffs of the navy pattern on eight men of the starboard watch. He put the men on a row of barrels in the hold and then had a hundred feet of heavy chain hoisted out of the forehold. This was run in and out through the manacled arms of the men. They had to bear the weight of the chain for five hours, when the port watch mutinied.

"He didn't have enough handcuffs to go round, so he unshackled the starboard watch and called all hands aft. Then he read the sea law from a book, and declared that the muineers were liable to a fine of $1,000 each and imprisonment for five years when we got back to the United States.

"'I'm sorry, man,' spoke up a big St. Vincent negro, 'but I can work no mo' 'less I git some 'lasses.'

"The Captain then agreed to give us molasses, and sailed into Fayal. When we reached there the second and third mates demanded their discharge. We unloaded the oil, and, when the Captain would not pay us, all, with the exception of one man, deserted. We skirted around the island and hid among the rocks, ten miles away from Horta until the Bertha had gone. The American Consul got us home."

WHERE IS LIEUT. OTIS?

Army Officer Who Left the Presidio Is Missing Again.

"Where is Frank Otis?" is a question that is being asked throughout tha regular army by many of the older and nearly all of the younger officers. Otis is a First Lieutenant in the Fourth Cavalry, and was stationed until a few weeks ago at the Presidio, at San Francisco. He disappeared from that post, and for almost two weeks his whereabouts was a mystery.

A few weeks ago he turned up in New York. Some of his many friends sent him to Governors Island. There they said he was not responsible for his strange actions, and the medical officers stationed on the island took tha young officer in charge. A little more than two weeks ago the medical officers decided that Lieut. Otis was able to resume his duties, and he was ordered back to the Presidio for duty. Since that time not a word has been heard from him. A notice was sent out ten days ago asking that a search be made for him.

In the meantime other matters have come up for Lieut. Otis to explain. His friends believe that he will be able satisfactorily to explain everything connected with his going away.

Several months ago Lieut. Otis caused to be inserted in the San Francisco newspapers an advertisement in which he asked for employment. It said that the applicant was an army officer, and that so varied were his attainments that he would be quite willing to do anything from managing a newspaper to running a ranch. He added that he wanted to give his family all the comforts of civilization and that he had found it impossible to do so with the salary allowed him as a Lieutenant by the United States Government.

HIT A POLE TO SAVE A BOY.

Auto Smashed and Occupants Dumped Out, but He Escaped.

To avoid striking a boy on a bicycle at Jamaica Avenue and Welling Street, last night, A. C. Bohack of 1090 Greene Avenue, Brooklyn, ran his touring car into a telegraph pole. The pole was knocked two inches from its base and the car was wrecked, but the boy escaped without a scratch.

Mr. Bohack had five friends with him, Julius Manck, Henry Le Mare, Thomas Alrick, Mrs. Le Mare, and Mrs. Bohack, all of Brooklyn. The boy suddenly crossed in front of the swiftly moving automobile. There was nothing to do but hit the boy or the pole. Mr. Bohack chose the pole. The occupants of the car were thrown in all directions. Mr. Le Mare was knocked unconscious and the other men were cut and bruised, but the women escaped without injury.

After Mr. La Mara had recovered the motorists were driven home in carriages.

We don't care what size you take.

We know we make it, because we make five sizes for every chest measure.

If the tape shows 42 inches chest, you may need a 42 regular, a 42 long, a 42 short, a 42 stout, or a 42 short stout.

We've been especially happy in fitting our good-natured short stout friends.

Being able to have so many sizes is one of the incidental advantages of doing a big business.

We've figured that a man whose instep is low really needs two sizes of shoes.

One to fit snugly over the instep and another and larger size to give comfortable toe-room.

So we made the "Two-shoe Shoe" whose lower part really belongs to a larger shoe than the upper.

Made it of vici kid to give the greatest possible comfort, but added a fairly heavy sole to make it useful for every day.

PRESIDENT IN STORM TRANSSHIPS TO DOLPHIN

After a Rough Voyage Up the Coast—Due at Capital To-day.

HE SPENDS DAY ON BRIDGE

Wsst Virginia Runs at 18 Knots in Gale—Three Other Cruisers Convoy Her—Wireless Reports.

WASHINGTON, Tuesday, Oct. 31.—President Roosevelt transferred from the cruiser West Virginia to the United States dispatch boat Dolphin in Chesapeake Bay at 12:40 o'clock this morning, and left Wolftrap Light on the last leg of his journey. The following dispatch was received at the Washington Navy Yard early this morning:

"Please inform the Navy Department that the Dolphin, with the President aboard, left Wooltrap Light at 12:40 A. M., and should arrive at the navy yard at Washington betwcen 10 A. M. and 11 A. M. to-day.

"GIBBONS."

NORFOLK, Oct. 30.—After fighting a northeast gale up the coast for twenty-four hours, the fierceness of the wind and sea causing a wide divergence from the usual route, the armored cruiser West Virginia, bearing President Roosevelt from New Orleans, passed in Cape Henry at 9:30 to-night, convoyed by the armored cruisers Maryland, Pennsylvania, and Colorado.

Owing to the choppy sea off Cape Henry and in Lynn Haven Inlet, the plan for the President to transship from the West Virginia to the dispatch boat Dolphin was abandoned long before the squadron reached the capes. Early in the afternoon Admiral Brownson communicated with the Cape Henry station by wireless telegraph and instructed that a pilot for the Maryland waters be ready to board the West Virginia off the cape at 7 o'clock to-night.

The storm threw out the Admiral's reckoning by two hours and a half. Then it was announced by wireless that the President would transfer to the Dolphn off Smith's Point at the mouth of the Potomac River. The Dolphin had started up the bay for this point several hours before.

About 8:30 o'clock the searchlights of the approaching warships could be seen on the horizon from the Cape Henry observation station, and an hour later the outlines of the four cruisers were discernible.

In the early part of the day the Colorado had been separated from the other ships by the storm. Efforts to reach her by wireless were unsuccessful for some time.

No stop was made at Cape Henry. The vessels passed in to the bay and took the bay channel, which runs to the north from the course into Hampton Roads.

All during the day the West Virginia had been in communication with the Cape Henry station, about forty messages being exchanged. Some were official dispatches in cipher, others personal messages to the President and the officers of the squadron, while others directed the movements of the Dolphin.

The voyage of the squadron from the South Carolina Coast to the capes was rough. The northeast gale pitched up a nasty sea, and off Hatteras the waves were running dangerously high. While no fears were entertained for vessels of the West Virginia's class, it was deemed wiser to give the treacherous shoals in that vicinity a wide sweep, and the cruisers went out to sea.

It was necessary for the pilot boat to go into the sheltered water of Hampton Roads, twenty miles inland, to pick up a pilot, although there were pilots ashore at Cape Henry who could not get out to the boat.

[By De Forest Wireless Telegraph.]

UNITED STATES ARMORED CRUISER WEST VIRGINIA, Off Currituck Point, Via Portsmouth, Va., Oct. 30.—From midnight till noon to-day the armored cruiser West Virginia, carrying President Roosevelt, faced a heavy gale from the northward and eastward with a heavy head sea, making it advisable to slow down from twenty to eightesn knots.

In the afternoon the West Virginia resumed the speed of twenty knots, and, against a stiff breeze from the northward and eastward, proceeded with moderate sea on her beam.

At 4:30 o'clock this afternoon the Maryland, a sister ship of the West Virginia; the Pennsylvania, and Colorado came up and after rendering the customary salute and honors to the President's flag took their position in squadron.

The President spent this morning on the forward bridge and this afternoon on the after bridge.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—A wireless message from Secretary Loeb, aboard the cruiser West Virginia with President Roosevelt, was received at the Washington Navy Yard early this evening by Operator P. S. Gcagan, in charge of the station there.

The first portion of the dispatch was unintelligible. The latter part told of the armored cruiser Maryland joining the squadron and briefly of the way the President spent the day.

The Navy Department received this afternoon from Rear Admiral Higginson, Commandant of the navy yard at Portsmouth, the following message taken at the navy yard by wireless from the West Virginia.

"Moderate gale and heavy head seas from northward to eastward until noon, when we passed Diamond Shoal Lightship. Sea and wind moderate. Steaming 18 knots. Clear weather. BROWNSON."

The Portsmouth Navy Yard wireless station also received a messags from the President addressed to Gov. Myron T. Herrick of Ohio conveying thanks for Mr. Herrick's message congratulating President Roosevelt on his escape from injury in the accident as he was leaving New Orleans. The message said:

"Many thanks. I warmly reciprocate good wishes."

Mrs. Roosevelt and her children, who on Saturday started on a cruise down the Potomac on the Sylph, returned to Washington to-day. The party was well and enjoyed the trip.

4,014,304 NEW YORKERS.

2,112,697 Are In Manhattan — State Population 8,066,672.

ALBANY, Oct. 30.—The population of New York City, as counted by the State Enumeration Bureau on June 1, and announced to-day, is 4,014,304, as compared with 3,437,202 in 1900 and 2,507,414 in 1890.

These figures show an increase in the population from 1900 to 1905 of 577,102, or 16.8 per cent., and for the same area during the preceding ten years of 929,786, or 37.1 per cent. Tbs population by boroughs in 1905, 1900, and 1890 was as follows:

Manhattan	2,112,697	1,850,093	1,441,216
Bronx	271,629	200,507	88,908
Brooklyn	1,358,891	1,166,582	838,547
Queens	198,241	152,999	87,050
Richmond	72,846	67,021	51,693

Bronx Borough shows ths largest percentage of gain. Ths increase in each borough during the five years from 1900 to 1905 and the decade from 1890 to 1900 is as follows:

Borough.	1900 to 1905.	Per Cent.	1890 to 1900.	Per Cent.
Brooklyn	192,309	16.5	328,035	39.1

The population of the city as actually enumerated was 4,000,925, but from this total there has been deducted 821 inmates of the Stats and county institutions, situated in the several boroughs of the city, which, under the plan of distributing the inmates of State and county institutions according to the city or town and county of actual residence at the time of admission to the institution, have been credited to other counties of the State, while there have been added 14,200 inmates of institutions who, at the time of their admission, were residents of New York City.

The population of the entire State is given as 8,066,672. In 1900 the population was 7,268,894, and in 1890, 6,003,174, including Indians and other persons on Indian reservations. The population of the State has increased, therefore, during the past five years 797,778, or 11 per cent., as against an increase during the preceding decade of 1,265,720, or 21.1 per cent.

THIRTEEN KILLED IN WRECK.

California Flier on the Santa Fe Derailed Near Kansas City.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 30.—Thirteen persons were killed and thirty injured in the wreck to-day of a west-bound Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé passenger train, known as the California Express, which, while running thirty-five miles an hour, struck a loose rail near the eastern limits of Kansas City.

The wreck occurred at Rock Creek Cut, on a curve, where jagged rock walls on each side of the tracks form a bluff almost 100 feet high. The locomotive was going so rapidly that it passed the loose rail in safety. The mail car, immediately behind, jumped the track and struck the side of the bluff, and the four cars following plowed through the wreckage and shot against the high stone wall. The sides of the coaches were crushed against the rough stone.

The smoking car, a chair car, and a tourist sleeping car, and two express cars left the rails. Three tourist sleeping cars, two standard Pullmans, and the dining car remained on the track. The smoking car split the baggage car ahead of it just below the floor line, and the baggage car landed on top of the crushed smoking car.

Those killed were Roy Stafford, 100 Hayden Avenue, Cleveland; Lee D. Montgomery, Linneus, Mo.; James Seymour, Richmond, Mo.; John McGregor, Fort Madison, Iowa; Max Scbneider, New York; J. F. Capps, baggageman, Chicago; Carl Emil Tornlund, 254 St. Marks Avenue, Brooklyn; Donato Depomazio, of Italy, and his son, Rosco; Adrian Peattent, Northing, Switzerland; Luther Richardson, colored waiter; William Harrison, colored porter.

James Seymour was cashier of the Ray County Savings Bank at Richmond, Mo. John MacGregor, another of the killed, was an engineer on the Santa Fé, who had been transferred to one of the western divisions of the road and was on his way to Topeka to take his new run out.

J. D. Whitemore, one of the injured, was in the smoker, which had an old-fashioned coal stove heater. He was thrown in such a way that one leg was jammed into the broken stove in contact with the live coals. He was so covered with débris that he could not get out and his foot was burned until it must be amputated.

H. G. Rust, engineer of the wrecked train, and his fireman, William De Long, escaped injury. The locomotive leaped from the rails and ran 300 feet on the ties, finally stopping upright.

BEATS THE VOTING MACHINE.

Linotyps Operator Shows How to Count Out a Candidate.

Special to The New York Times.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 30.—The standard voting machine to be used at the municipal election on Nov. 7 was tested to-day before a committee representing the Fusionists. It had been asserted that it was possible to beat tbe machine.

A linotype operator showed that by placing a small rubber band in a certain place near the name of the Fusion candidate for Mayor the machine would not register for the Mayor though it would include all the other candidates.

An expert representing the macbine company and a half dozen others were unable to make the machine register for Mayor while the rubber band was in place. This is the same machine that has been used in New York and other Eastern cities. This is the first time that it bas been demonatrated that it was possible to tamper with it to the extent of counting out a candidate.

ELECTIONS BOARD FAILS TO SUBSTITUTE JEROME

Republicans at Once Take the Question Into Court.

TO BE HEARD THIS MORNING

Board Stands 2 to 2—A Majority Necessary to Change Official Ballot.

By a partisan vote of 2 to 2 the Board of Elections yesterday failed to substitute the name of William Travers Jerome for that of Charles A. Flammer as the nominee on the Republican ticket for District Attorney. Shortly after the board had rendered its decision application was made to Justice McCall of ths Supreme Court for an order directing the Board of Elections to sbow cause why the substitution should not be made. The order was granted and made returnable before Justice Stover in Part I. of the Supreme Court at 10 o'clock this morning.

The Board of Elections met at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon without representatives of either party being present. Commissioner Page moved the substitution of Mr. Jerome's name for that of Mr. Flammer on the Republican ticket by virtus of the certificate received from the reconvened Republican County Convention on Oct. 28.

President Voorhis asksd what reason there was for making a special exception in the case. Commissioner Page replied that it was importsnt that the matter be settled without delay. Commissioner Dady seconded the motion of Mr. Page. President Voorhis objected to the substitution and said:

"These purported proceedings of a so-called convention are unlike any other proceedings that we have received this year, and I see no reason for an exception in this case. There is nothing to show that Charles A. Flammer has done anything at all to take his name off the ballot. Moreover, the Republican County Convention adjourned subject to the call of the Chair, and it might meet again to-night and take off the name of Jerome and put on that of Osborne. The Republican Party has done just as crazy things as that, and I think we ought to allow this document to go through the regular course."

Commissioner Page objected and quoted a letter received yesterday from the printer who has the contract for printing the official ballots, stating that he wished to get the printing of the ballots under way as soon as possible.

"Flammer's name is already being printed on the ballots for the Bronx and for part of Manhattan," said Commissioner Voorhis.

Commissioner McGuire, the Democratic colleague of Commissioner Voorhis, said that whils he thought there was no merit in the proposal for the substitution, he did recognize that it was important for the public to know at once the decision of the board so that any legal action which might be considered desirable might be taken.

President Voorhis called for a vote on his motion to have the certificate come up in the regular order of business. The motion was defeated. Commissioner McGuire voting with the two Republican Commissioners, Page and Dady.

The question of accepting or rejecting the certificate then came up for consideration. President Voorhis declared himself against the proposed substitution. He pointed out that Mr. Flammer was nominated on Oct. 13, and that no declination of the nomination had been filed with the board. The board required that a declination be filed in writing and acknowledged by the candidate either before a Commissioner or a notary. Mr. Flammer, he said, had not complied with that regulation, and was therefore still the Republican candidate for District Attorney under the law. He could bring an action against the board if his name was taken off the ticket, Mr. Voorhis contended.

Moreover, Commissioner Voorhis declared, the law required that all declinations of candidates must be filed by Oct. 18, and all vacancies must he filled by Oct. 23. The board, he said, had no knowledge of the Jerome certificate until Oct. 28. It was therefore plain, he said, that the board could not permit the proposed substitution without violating the law.

Commissioner Page answered the contention of President Voorhis that Mr. Flammer's resignation had not been filed with the Board of Election with the statement that the Republican Convention certified to Mr. Flammer's resignation. That he asserted ought to be controlling with the board on that point.

The vote was then taken, and resulted in a tie. As it requires three votes for affirmative action, the substitution could not be made.

STRICKEN ON A STAGE.

Woman Faints on Fifth Avenue Vehicle and Dies Soon Afterward.

Mrs. Ellen Arnold, 60 years old, of 70 West Forty-fifth Street, was taken ill on a Fifth Avenue stage at Twenty-fifth Street yesterday afternoon and died soon afterward at the New York Hospital.

She boarded the stage at Twenty-fourth Street and climbed unaided to the top seats. The stage had gone only a block when Michael Mahoney, the driver, noticed that Mrs. Arnold bad fainted. He stopped the horses and carried her to the sidswalk. Dr. Farr of the New York Hospital was called, and said ebe was suffering from an apoplectic stroke. He took her to the hospital, but shs died ten minutes after arriving there.

COUNT WITTE TO AMERICANS.

Russian Premier Thinks They Will Rejoice in Czar's Action.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 30.—Count Witte, Russia's first Premier, to-night sent this message to the American people:

"I am sure the American people, who understand what freedom is, and the American press, which voices the wishes of the people, will rejoice with the friendly Russian Nation at this moment, when the Russian people have received from bis Imperial Majesty the promises and the guarantees of freedom, and will join in the hope that the Russian people will wisely aid in the realization of those liberties by co-operating with the Government for their peaceful introduction.

"Only thus will it he possible to secure the full benefits of the freedom conferred upon the people."

McCLELLAN ODDS 2½ TO 1.

Jerome Prices Jump to 10 to 6½—Hearst Bets at 1 to 3.

The curb odds on McClellan got down to 2½ to 1 yesterday, several bets being made on that basis. When ths curb brokers quit business yesterday, the odds offered on McClellan were only 2 to 1. This is the lowest point they have reacbed. No actual bets, however, were made at this figure, but the Hearst and Ivins backers are confident thsre will be many such to-day.

Hollister & Babcock put up $1,000 to $2,500 on the field against McClellan. J. J. Judge bet $750 to $300 on McClellan, and $500 to $200 against him.

The odds in favor of Jerome once reached 10 to 6½. A. J. Cohen bet $1,000 to $650 with Bunnell. This was the only bst of this kind. Although the great majority of bets were made at 10 to 7 on Jerome, some were made at 10 to 8. Osborne money was scarce.

W. Marco bet $8,000 to $1,000 on ths field against Hearst. The Municipal Ownership candidate gained strength on the curb yesterday. The odds on his beating Ivins were 10 to 7, tbough S. Bouton placed one bet of $100 even on Ivins's polling more votes. A feature of the betting is that Ivins is being ignored. Not a single bet, as far as could be learned, was made yesterday on bis victory or defeat.

Joe Heineman bet $2,000 to $1,500 that Hearst would not get 150,000 votes.

Max F. Ibmsen, Mr. Hearst's campaign manager, said last night tbat he would be glad to place $10,000 on Mr. Hearst at odds of 1 to 2½.

BODYGUARD FOR HEARST.

Rumors Cause His Campaign Managers to Take Precautions.

It was learned yesterday that owing to reports which have reached the Hearst headquarters in tbe Hoffman House the managers of tbe Municipal Ownership campaign have decided to surround their candidate for Mayor with a bodyguard hereafter.

Just what the nature of the reports which led to tbis new arrangement was could not be learned.

BRITISH SQUADRON RACING.

Will Compare Speed with Squadron Escorting the President.

HALIFAX, N. S., Oct. 30.—The second cruiser squadron under command of Rear Admiral Prince Louis of Battenberg sailed to-day for Annapolis and New York.

An interesting feature of the trip will be a power and speed trial of the ships. It is hoped that tbe result will afford basis for comparison between the speed of the British squadron and the United States cruiser squadron conveying President Roosevelt from the Gulf of Mexico to the North.

NORFOLK, Va., Oct. 30.—The two battleship divisions of the North Atlantic fleet under command of Rear Admiral Robley D. Evans sailed from Hampton Roads this morning for Annapolis to receive the British North Atlantic squadron.

SAYBROOK TOWN SHAKEN.

Railway Man Threw Bottle of Nitro-Glycerine at a Car.

SAYBROOK, Conn., Oct. 30.—This town was sbaken as by an earthquake about 5 o'clock this afternoon by the explosion of a pint of nitro-glycerine in the railroad yards. Windows were broken, houses shook, and people rusbed out of tbeir homes panic-stricken.

The bottle containing ths explosive was found under the carhouse by Michael Murphy, a section foreman, who, not knowing what it contained, took it to Towerman E. S. Burns. Burns hurled it against the wheels of a freight car several yards away. The freight car, coal laden, went up in tbe air about three feet and came down off the tracks, while four windows of the tower house dropped out. Burns was not burt.

It is believed the explosive was left under the carhouse for future use by some burglars. Near the bottle was found a copper cap.

AMBULANCE IN SMASHUP.

Plunges Into an Excavation—Waiting Patient Dies of Loss of Blood.

Neglect to put red lights around an excavation at 130th Street and Lenox Avenue is held to be responsible for the death of one man, the smashing of a hospital ambulance, and the narrow escape from death of the doctor, driver, and horse.

Shortly after dusk a hurry call was received from 132d Street and Lenox Avenue, where Paul Callahan, a watchman, living at 405 East Sixty-first Street, was injured by the falling of a steel girder.

Tbe ambulance was moving rapidly when it neared the excavation at 130th Street, where tbe street is being repaired. A watchman rushed out with a red lantern, and the horse swerved to one side, but too late to save itself from plunging into the hole which was four feet deep and twelve feet wide. The ambulance went in with it.

The driver, John Mulligan, and Dr. Bartram were both thrown out. The ambulance had to be lifted out.

Dr. Bartram insisted upon proceeding to the place two blocks further up whence the hurry call had come. Callahan was taken to the hospital, where he died a short time latsr of loss of blood.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 30.—The people have won the day. The Emperor has surrendered. The autocracy has ceased to exist. A Constitution was signed at Peterhof at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

It is doubtful whether the grant of civic freedom, extended suffrage, a legislative Douma, and Ministerial responsibility, with M. Witte as Premier, and the consequent disappearance of the bureaucracy, which will be promulgated to-morrow, will satisfy the victorious revolutionary leaders, who demanded nothing less than universal suffrage and a constituent assembly.

It is doubtful even whether the reformers will consent to accept the concessions from tbe hands of the hureaucratic régime.

It is doubtful whether the forced surrender of the Government in the very midst of a revolutionary upheaval can be regarded otherwise than as a signal for further strife. To-morrow's manifesto, autocracy's last manifestation, will, however, bring to an end the acute stage of the Russian crisis and mark the starting point of a new era of political life.

The situation is still replete with possibilities of danger. The very success of the cause of freedom will only stimulate the reactionary elements to greater activity, and so long as the army remains under the present chiefs Russia cannot be safe from the possibility of a pronunciamento. Complete stability is not to be assured until the vast millions of untutored peasants share in the blessings of education.

The news of what was done at Peterhof to-day could not, in the absence of newspapers, be circulated generally among the inhabitants. The city continues to wear a sombre aspect. Troops still patrol the streets and the university remains closed.

The Minister of Finance was hurriedly summoned to the Imperial Bank to-day owing to a threatened strike of the employes. He assured them that if they would only have a little patience they would understand that a strike was unnecessary. Shortly afterward M. Witte telephoned him from Peterhof that the Emperor had signed a Constitution. M. Kokovtsoff immediately conveyed the news to the intending strikers, and they resumed work.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES. [Copyright, 1905.]

LONDON, Tuesday, Oct. 31.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of The Morning Post telegraphs as follows:

Count Witte's appointment was gazetted this evening. It was uncertain until the last moment, it being generally supposed that his traditional tactlessness had evoked a recrudescence of imperial disfavor and wrecksd the chances of the Cabinet project.

Much enthusiasm prevails among the Moderate Liberals, but revolutionary circles maintain an attitude of suspicion. One section demands that popular pressure be maintained until the real completion of the new régime is displayed. The other is almost hysterical over the victory for representative principles.

The immediately important question is whether Gen. Trepoff, whose energetic measures have baffled the amateurish efforts of the revolutionists, will loyally co-operate with Count Witte. Otherwise the present condition of the capital, which suggests a vast revolutionary picnic, will develop into absolute anarchy. It is too early to see absolutely what measure of support or opposition the new departure will receive from any particular faction.

I got this afternon a partial list of Count Witte's Cabinet, which, though premature, comes from a well-informed source. It is:

Privy Councilor—M. Romanoff.

Minister of the Interior—Prince Alexis Obolenski.

Minister of Public Instruction—Senator Koni.

Minister of Ways and Communications—M. Zeigle.

Minister of Agriculture—M. Kutler.

STRIKERS RETURN TO WORK.

Lines to Moscow Reopened—Factory Tie-Up Broken.

ST. PETERSBURG, Tuesday, Oct. 31, (3:30 A. M.)—Even before the manifesto of the Czar was known to have been signed yesterday the strike began to break in industrial centres here.

Following the news many railway employes went back to work. The strike has ended on the Moscow and St. Petersburg, the Moscow and Kazan, and the Moscow and Archangel Railroads.

A meeting of the Strike Committee was held last night after the coming promulgation of the Emperor's manifesto was known. The question of calling the strike off was discussed, but a decision postponed until to-day.

A damper was thrown upon the strike enthusiasm by the news that work had been resumed in a large part of the factories of St. Petersburg, including eleven of the twelve departments of the Putiloff works, and that stores had been reopened. The committeemen talked boldly of their ability to call out the men again and to intimidate the store clerks into reclosing, but to-day will probably put a good face on the situation and issue a proclamation calling off the strike until January.

The authorities asserted that only 23,000 factory hands, mostly in the Schlusselberg district along the river, were on strike to-day.

The Strike Committee has brought out the first number of the Workmen's Gazette, the "official gazette" of the strikers' organization, which was devoted to ponderous proclamations in the style of the Government documents and to news of the strike movement in St. Petersburg.

The welcome tidings of the grant of liberty by the Czar reached St. Petersburg shortly before 6 o'clock last evening. Count Witte had spent the day with the Emperor at Peterhof, going over the final draft of the manifesto to which he insisted that certain minor modifications be made. Before taking the train for St. Petersburg he telephoned to a friend that the Emperor had affixed his signature and that the imperial mandate was in his pocket.

An official announcement was issued soon after, saying:

"An imperial manifesto will be issued this evening, appointing Count Witte Prime Minister, with special authority to co-ordinate and unify the powers of the different branches of the administration. Civic liberties are granted to the Russian people and to the National Assembly is given legislative power, while the suffrage is enlarged."

Broad Grant of Freedom.

Count Witte returned to his home in the evening, and the text of the Czar's decree was made known.

A simple perusal of the manifesto shows how complete is the Emperor's abdication of his autocratic power. The very style of the document is clear and direct and devoid of the verbose, vague, and bombastic phraseology which heretofore has characterized his Majesty's decrees.

It not only betrays real authorship, but shows that the Emperor at last has irrevocably bowed to the inevitable. He does not even conceal the fact that the discontent and agitation of his subjects has driven him to take the step and practically yields everything—civil liberty, the inviolability of person, and liberty of conscience, speech, and assembly.

He not only converts the farcical imperial douma, with only consultative power, into a true legislative assembly, without the assent of which no measurs shall become law and before which all Governmental authorities must answer, but promises, eventually, universal suffrage. The title, "Autocrat of all the Russians" with which the manifesto begins, now takes its place with title of "King of Jerusalem," borne by the King of Spain and the Emperor of Austria, and with other obsolete titles of European sovereigns.

J. Pierpont Morgan, Jr., and George W. Perkins were with Finance Minister Kokovsoff when the latter received the news. It was a dramatic moment. The Minister was called to the telephone, and when he returned he was greatly agitated, and said:

"Gentlemen, the old order of things has changed. Russia has a Constitution."

First Bomb After Decree.

The news spread like wildfire throughout the city. The revolutionists, and active agitators generally, declared loudly that the Govsrnment's promises would no longer suffice, and that the strike must be continued.

In fact, an hour after the news became known the revolutionists took occasion to throw the first bomb in St. Petersburg used since the strike began. The incident occurred near the Polytechnic School, but there was no fatality.

Practically all classes, except the Socialists and the extreme Radicals, however, read the document with delight and amazement, declaring that it could not fail to rally the moderates to the support of Count Witte.

By the irony of fate, while the strikers are clamoring for a Constitution, it has been impossible to persuade the striking printers to resume work, and,

THE CZAR'S CHARTER OF LIBERTY TO ONE-TENTH OF THE HUMAN RACE

Text of the Historic Document Signed at Peterhof Yesterday by Nicholas II.

"We, Nicholas II., by the grace of God Emperor and Autocrat of All the Russias, Grand Duke of Finland, &c., declare to all our faithful subjects that the troubles and agitation in our capitals and in numerous other places fill our heart with excessive pain and sorrow.

"The happinesss of the Russian sovereign is indissolubly bound up with the happiness of our people and the sorrow of our people is the sorrow of the sovereign.

"From the present disorders may arise great national disruption. They menace the intergrity and unity of our empire.

"The supreme duty imposed upon us by our sovereign office requires us to efface ourself and to use all the force and reason at our command to hasten in securing the unity and co-ordination of the power of the Central Government and to assure the success of measures for pacification in all circles of public life, which are essential to the well-being of our people.

"We, therefore, direct our Government to carry out our inflexible will in the following manner;

"First—To extend to the population the immutable foundations of civic liberty, based on the real inviolability of person, freedom of conscience, speech, union, and association.

"Second—Without suspending the already ordered elections to the State Douma, to invite to participation in the Douma, so far as the limited time before the convocation of the Douma will permit, those classes of the population now completely deprived of electoral rights, leaving the ultimate development of the principle of the electoral right in general to the newly established legislative order of things.

"Third—To establish as an unchangeable rule that no law shall be enforceable without the approval of the State Douma, and that it shall be possible for the elected of the people to exercise real participation in the supervision of the legality of the acts of the authorities appointed by us.

"We appeal to all faithful sons of Russia to remember their duty toward the Fatherland, to aid in terminating these unprecedented troubles, and to apply all their forces, in co-operation with us, to the restoration of calm and peace upon our natal soil.

"Given at Peterhof, October 30th, in the eleventh year of our reign.

therefore, not a single newspaper except the Official Messenger will print the momentous document for distribution to-day. Arrangements, however, have been made to placard the manifesto on every dead wall in the city, and the text will be telegraphed to-day to every city, town, and hamlet with which there is telegraphic communication. It also has been ordered read in all the churches of the empire.

The foreign embassies were notified and lights are burning late at night in the chancelleries, where the news was being put into cipher. Official notifications will also be sent to the Russian Ambassadors abroad.

All Depends on Count Witte.

The effect throughout Russia is expected to be instantaneous. While the extremists threaten an attempt to keep up the present struggle, the best opinion is that the backbone of the strike is broken, but in the final analysis the effect will depend on how Count Witte will be able to execute the heavy task which he has assumed.

Some persons high in the Government believe it will still be necessary to use ball cartridge to suppress the present movement, but Count Witte appears confident. He has become the bridge whereby the people are to cross to constitutionalism.

The Count already has tentatively chosen the members of his Cabinet. He will himself hold no portfolio. All the present Ministers, except those of War, Navy, and Foreign Affairs, will be retired. Prince Alexis Obolensky, one of the Count's former assistants in the Ministry of Finance, will become Minister of Interior; M. Romanoff, another former assistant to the Minister, will take the Finance portfolio; M. Koni, at present a Senator and Russia's ablest jurist, will be Minister of Justice; M. Krosovsky, President of the St. Petersburg Municipal Council, will take the Ministry of Education, and M. Ziegler Von Schaffhausen, chief of the Railroad Department of the Ministry of Finance, will become Minister of Ways and Communications.

Rejoicing in St. Petersburg.

Late last night, after the news got abroad, crowds began marching up and down the Nevsky Prospect, singing the national hymn and hurrahing for liberty. It is significant that the great searchlight which has been lighting up the Nevsky Prospect from the Admiralty tower for three nights was turned off to-night.

A ludicrous incident occurred at midnight near the university, when newsboys with an extra edition of The Official Messenger hurried into a crowd of strikers. The instant the news became known the strikers raised an uproarious cheer, and Cossacks who were patrolling the street, misunderstanding the import of the demonstration, and thinking the cries were seditious, charged and dispersed the workmen with their whips.

At all the fashionable restaurants champagne was drunk in toasts to "Liberty and the Constitution."

Celebration of the issuance of the imperial manifesto still continues at 3 o'clock this morning in many streets of the city, where crowds are singing the national hymn, cheering for the Emperor, and shouting themselves hoarse. The restaurants and cafés were closed at 2 o'clock, disgorging their crowds, which had been drinking and making merry for hours around the tables, to augment the demonstration in the thoroughfares.

The Cossack patrols were utterly discomfited and confounded, and were wholly at a loss to understand the meaning of the demonstration or why the crowds were singing "God Save the Emperor." Russia's magnificent national anthem, instead of the "Marseillaise."

The people displayed the utmost good humor toward the Cossacks. They surrounded their horses and patted their perplexed riders on the boots, shouting:

"You can go home now. We no longer need you. We have liberty."

Then they hade the Cossacks toss their caps in honor of the Constitution. After 2 o'clock all the patrols were withdrawn from the streets, which were left in charge of the ordinary night force of policemen.

Soon after midnight a crowd of several hundred gathered in the great square before the Winter Palace and sang a chant from the church liturgy addressed to the Emperor and the National Anthem, and finished with rousing cheers for his Majesty and the imperial family.

Then they marched to the barracks of the Preobrajenski Guards and demanded that the regimental band lead the procession. Disappointed there, they continued to the barracks of the Pavlovsk Guards on the same errand, but the soldiers, misunderstanding the purport of the demonstration, threw open the gates of the court and threatened to fire unless the crowd made off at once, when the manifestants fled in terror.

In the Nevsky Prospect there was some rough play, but the bolsterous ones formed an inconsiderable portion of the crowds. There were no illuminations or other formal demonstrations, the population of the capital having lived too long under a regime under which all initiative for outward festivity came from the police.

Gen. Trepoff forbade a meeting of the Town Council called for yesterday to consider the demands of the strikers made the day before, including a Constitution and political liberty, that the city furnish food to the workmen, that they refuse further supplies to the troops and police, and that the troops be removed from the waterworks, or otherwise the strikers would cut the water supply.

A private meeting of the members of the Town Council was held last night. The Council, after reading the imperial manifesto, decided to send the following telegram to the Emperor:

"The Council welcomes with delight the long-desired tidings of freedom, firmly relying on a bright future for our dear Fatherland. Hurrah for the Emperor of a free people."

A dispatch from Warsaw says that although the streets were dark and deserted and were patrolled by infantry, the news that the Emperor had signed a Constitution spread like wildfire and created a tremendous sensation, causing a feeling of joy, mingled with the fear that the news might be premature.

Strike Committee Active.

The Strike Committee continued to restrain the people from violence, this being considered to be the best means of attaining the ends in view, but behind the scenes the members of the committee were holding constant meetings with the leaders of the various groups and seemed to be preparing for a bold stroke at the opportune moment.

The committeemen believed that the longer an open collision could be avoided the better their chances. The army they said was being gradually won over to the people's cause. Only the Cossacks, who are referred to as Emperor Nicholas's "Swiss Guard," were absolutely faithful to the existing régime.

The Ismailovsky Guard Regiment, which was reported to be disaffected during the troubles of last Winter, was reported to have refused to do guard duty and to be confined to barracks surrounded by Cossacks. An investigation failed to confirm the report.

A wild rumor was current that Gen. Rudiger, head of the guard regiments, was planning a bold stroke.

It was circumstantially reported that rich Jews are behind the strikers for the purpose of forcing the Government to grant equal rights to their co-religionists.

The news from the provinces indicates that the authorities are getting control in some sections, but generally the situation was growing worse instead of improving. In many places the students and strikers were fighting the "Black Hundred," as the bands of roughs are termed.

There appears to be no foundation for the rumors of mutiny on the vessels of the Black Sea fleet which are in circulation in Odessa, and which have been industriously propagated by the strikers here for several days. This dispatch from the Associated Press correspondent at Odessa does not even mention the alleged mutiny:

"After yesterday's exciting occurrences, when the gun shops were plundered, barricades built, and the troops in dispersing crowds were forced to fire several volleys, quiet prevailed today."

On hearing from the Minister that a Constitution had been signed, they agreed to return in a fortnight and resume negotiations.

KIEL, Germany, Oct. 30.—The Russian steamer Kurgan arrived to-day at Holenau, Province of Schleswig-Holstein, from Kronstadt, with the British Ambassador, Sir Charles Hardinge, and Charles R. Flint of New York on board. They left immediately, the Ambassador for London and Mr. Flint for Paris.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 30.—The American State Department has instructed Chargé d'Affaires Eddy, in case of emergency, to give American citizens asylum at the embassy, and if necessary to charter a steamer.

AN EXODUS FROM MOSCOW.

Little News Received from Ancient Capital of Russia.

WARSAW, Oct. 30.—A telegram received here from Moscow says the strikers have destroyed the belt railroad and two houses on Twerska Street, one of them belonging to the Governor.

Thousands of wealthy inhabitants of Moscow are leaving the city by every and any means available.

The military telegraph operators are complaining of having to operate the commercial service. They declare they are too tired to perform the work.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—The telegraph worked all the morning with St. Petersburg and the principal cities of Russia except Moscow, which for some hours was entirely out off from telegraphic connection.

SCORES SHOT DOWN AT REVAL.

People Fight Soldiers at Riga—Disturbances Elsewhere.

REVAL, Russia, Oct. 30.—The troops fired two volleys into a crowd in the market place to-day, killing or wounding over a hundred persons.

Crowds of people are parading the streets singing the "Marseillaise."

A mob last night destroyed the Hotel de France.

KIEL, Germany, Oct. 30.—The Russian steamer Kurgan touched at Reval Friday. Wild disturbances were then going on there. The city was burning in three places, all work and business had stopped and the troops when the Kurgan left were attempting to drive the people from the streets.

RIGA, Russia, Oct. 30.—During the day collisions between the troops and the armed populace continued. Many persons were killed or wounded. The strikers used knives and revolvers and killed a number of policemen. Cossacks dispersed several meetings during the night.

The people fired from windows upon the cabmen who have refused to join in the strike.

ROSTOFF-ON-DON, Russia, Oct. 30.—A mob attacked the synagogue here to-day. Two Jews were killed. Finally the rioters were dispersed by Cossacks, who used their whips.

VITEBESK, Russia, Oct. 30.—The whole population of this city has joined in the strike. The feeling is high, trade is at a standstill, the workmen's meetings are crowded to the doors, inflammatory speeches are delivered, and the banks are refusing to lend money.

KHARKOFF, Russia, Oct. 30.—The Post Office has resumed work, but no trains are running. About 30,000 passengers are held up here, costing the Government $14,000 per day.

GENERAL STRIKE IN FINLAND.

Workmen Decide to Help Their Brethren in Russia.

HELSINGFORS, Finland, Oct. 30.—The Russian railroad strike will be extended to Finland to-morrow. A great meeting of Finnish workmen held to-day expressed sympathy with the Russian struggle for freedom and appointed a committee to elaborate a programme for the Finnish people. The meeting resolved to declare a general strike, beginning to-morrow.

The workmen of Viborg have taken similar action.

This decision has caused a rush to secure supplies of provisions, as all the restaurants will be closed.

The students of the university and the Polytechnic School have decided to abstain from attendance on lectures.

VIBORG, Finland, Oct. 30.—When the express train arrived here last night an immense crowd surrounded it and demanded that the Finnish railroad men co-operate with their Russian comrades. After listening to two inflammatory speeches the crowd uncoupled the locomotive and compelled the engineer to take the engine to the roundhouse.

PARALYSIS IN POLAND.

Troops Fire in Air—Peasant Disturbances Are Reported.

LODZ, Russian Poland, Oct. 30.—All business here is suspended. About 130,000 workmen are on strike. No newspapers are published, and many of the restaurants are closed. Such establishments as opened to-day were forcibly closed or destroyed. Several thousand workmen marched through the streets.

The military, when ordered to shoot, generally fire blank cartridges or discharge their rifles in the air, but a violent collision is expected. Two workmen were killed to-day at Ola, a suburb of this city.

The shops are closed, and those whose owners refuse to shut up are destroyed. Crowds are busy tearing down Russian flags which were displayed by order of the police.

Bands of peasants in the Government of Suwalki are destroying the Government alcohol stores.

Disorders are reported to have occurred at Radom.

WARSAW, Russian Poland, Oct. 30.—The excitement in the streets shows no signs of abating. All the banks and factories and most of the business houses are closed. Every now and then the crowds overturn a street car with the object of stopping traffic, but no serious conflicts have thus far occurred.

The police are trying to induce the shopkeepers to reopen their shops, threatening to fine them if they do not do so, but the merchants are between two fires, as the Socialists promise to smash their windows if the shutters are taken down.

Telegraphic communication with Vilna has been destroyed.

BLACK SEA MUTINY REPORTED.

Rebels Said to Have Taken Fleet—Restoring Order in Odessa.

ODESSA, Oct. 30., 5 P. M.—There are persistent rumors in circulation here today that the crews of the vessels composing the Black Sea Fleet mutinied on arriving at Samsun, on the coast of Asia Minor, killed Admirals Birlieff and Chouknin, and sailed back to Sevastopol after hoisting the revolutionary flag. It is impossible to verify the rumors.

The Governor of this district has issued a proclamation announcing that he will not hesitate to adopt the severest measures to repress disturbances. The authorities are confiscating all political telegrams.

Railroad traffic is partially reopened. Two trains guarded hy troops were dispatched during the day, and one of them arrived at its destination.

A semblance of order is slowly being restored. A number of stores have reopened, but additional factories struck to-day. The schools remain closed, but it is hoped they will reopen next week.

The City Council has decided to grant pensions to the families of the killed and wounded in yesterday's fighting, and to attend the funerals of the victims. On the persistent application of the City Council the Governor has liberated 200 youthful scholars who were arrested yesterday.

It is impossible to fix even approximately the number of yesterday's victims. The officials in charge of the hospitals, cemeteries, and lock-ups are strictly forbidden to give the slightest information. The dead and wounded, whose numbers must be very considerable, have been removed hy the police and hidden out of sight of inquirers.

The infantry of whose loyalty the authorities are doubtful are kept in barracks, and the Cossacks and gendarmes, who show no disinclination to shoot down people on sight, are left to deal with the crowds.

The crowds fleeing before the charging Cossacks invade private houses and hide in garrets and on the roofs. Many private apartments, drug stores, and factories have been converted into temporary hospitals for the succor of wounded refugees.

OFFICIALS AID BRIGANDS.

Terror in Northern Caucasus—Several Bomb Factories Found.

GROZNYI, Russia, Oct. 30.—A reign of terror prevails in Northern Caucasus.

It is charged that the authorities are pursuing the policy of turning one class of the population against another and are abetting the work of the brigands, who last night robbed and sacked a train, killing twelve persons and wounding ten.

When the train arrived the crowds dragged out and killed three brigands and then drove the commander of the Cossacks out of town.

TIFLIS, Caucasia, Oct. 30.—The patrols everywhere have been strengthened, but the feeling of the people has not calmed. Firing is heard almost continuously in the streets.

All the shops and schools are closed, and no papers are published. The Treasury is heavily guarded. The Railroad Battalion to-morrow will try to take out a train to Batum.

Several bomb factories have been discovered here.

GLOOMY REPORTS IN PARIS.

Vacillating Attitude of Czar Described —Army Officers Waver.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—Communication between St. Petersburg and Paris remains uninterrupted. The people maintain an ominous silence, hut no serious disorders are mentioned in the meagre reports received here.

A St. Petersburg dispatch to the semi-official Temps published this evening, says:

"The crisis continues acute and preserves an aspect of universality against which the Government seems powerless to act. Besides the popular revolution there is reason to fear a revolution within the Palace.

"The Emperor decides at one moment to grant a Constitution and then yields in the contrary direction. His will is distracted between contending influences. He refuses to accept anything and remains inactive in an atmosphere of intrigue and hostility.

"There is much talk of an early conclusion of the strike, as it is evident that the strikers are unable to remain long without work. However, there is no evidence at present of an actual resumption of work. On the contrary, the strikers are improving the situation daily. Their delegates are entering the homes of officers of the army to advocate a revolt.

"The situation in Finland has become as critical as in St. Petershurg. The soldiers have been ordered not to approach within 300 feet of the crowds for the purpose of avoiding hombs."

ROUNDABOUT MAIL ROUTE.

German Letters Sent to Stockholm— Geese Held at Frontier.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—The German mails are being sent to Russia by way of Stockholm, Sweden. A steamer leaves there four times a week for Hangoe, on the Finnish coast. Travelers from Berlin are able to reach St. Petersburg in sixty hours going hy way of Stettin, Sassnitz, Trelleborg, Stockholm, and Hangoe, and thence to Viborg and St. Petershurg.

Oddly enough the prices of meat in Germany are sensibly affected hy the disturbances in Russia principally hecause the import of geese has been stopped. About 400,000 geese are imported weekly from Russia, and no fewer than half a million destined for Germany are now laid up along Russian points.

RUSSIANS HERE REJOICE.

Socialists Regard Manifesto as First Step to Freedom.

The Czar's manifesto liberalizing the Russian form of government was translated into Russian and read to an audience of Russian Socialists at First Street and Second Avenue last night hy Abraham Cahan, editor of Forward, a Socialist organ of New York. It was greeted with enthusiastic applause.

Mr. Cahan said that the edict might mean a great deal, and it might mean practically nothing to the Russian people.

"There are clauses which are of great importance," he said, "and if the manifesto is enforced literally its effect will be greatly toward the liberalization of the present form of government, making it representative and democratic. But who can tell how it is to be enforced? That is the important feature of the situation. If its enforcement is left to a handful of bureaucrats, the Russians will gain little.

"Its issuance proves one thing beyond doubt, and that is, that the revolutionary party has the Government just where it wants it. The Czar and his autocratic agents are at last brought to their knees. They see that they are powerless, and this manifesto is issued in the hope of stemming the popular tide against the present régime and its overthrow altogether.

"About two months ago a manifesto creating the Douma was issued. It meant nothing. It granted suffrage to a privileged class. In accordance with its provision not more than 200 or 300 people in the vast city of St. Petershurg were allowed to vote. It was a farce, and it has been rejected by the people. But according to this latest manifesto suffrage is to extend more generally. It admits of participation in the Douma by those classes of the population now completely deprived of electoral rights.

"Under the new manifesto the Douma is to be a genuine Parliament, and will he vested with proper dignity and character. But we wish there were more specifications in the manifesto. The people will demand them. They will want something more definite. 'Freedom of speech and association' means a great deal generally, hut the expression used here is indefinite. It must be detailed. No matter how much 'freedom of speech' is allowed, however, it will not equal anything like that enjoyed in the United States. It will in all probability he of a very limited character.

"My interpretation of this manifesto is that it is the true harbinger of real liberty in Russia. Time will tell in this fight we are making. The present revolution, unlike its predecessors, is powerful and well organized. It is its organization that is telling on the Czar and his bureaucrats. Heretofore revolutions have been disorganized and of a rambling and shiftless character. This one is founded on solid rock, and it means business.

"I believe that M. Witte will hold a conference with a committee of the revolutionists and seek to pacify them in the hope that Nicholas and his Court may be saved. The Czar knows little of the true situation and of what he is doing. Witte knows it all. He will probably be the intermediary and the manager of the whole affair on the part of the Czar.

"We hail with great joy one great reform which will be inaugurated through the enforcement of this proclamation, namely, the 'real inviolability of the person.' Heretofore thousands of men and women, boys and girls, have been sent to Siberia by so-called administrative process, without trial or hearing. This practice will he abolished. It is of vast importance to the people.

"The whole is but a decisive step in the right direction. The complete organization of the revolution will show those in power in Russia that they must grant a truly representative and democratic form of government to the masses. That will not be long in coming."

ROOSEVELT, JR., A HERO.

"Makes" Freshman Football Team and All Harvard Praises Him.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Oct. 30.—Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., is a college hero. He has won that title without "pull or influence." He has won it on the hardest of all battlefields—the gridiron—and under conditions that make his victory unusual. And to-day not only his fellow-freshmen, but the whole college is talking about him in terms of highest praise.

Against rivals who loomed over him physically like so many Goliaths, Teddy, Jr., has "made" his freshman football team. He has made it at left end, and is said to he the lightest player who ever held down a similar position on a Crimson freshman eleven.

This is his first year at regular football. In his last year at Groton he probably would have made the team had he been in school during the season. His schoolmates all say he was a gritty boy and had a great reputation for nerve, in spite of his apparent frailty.

SHOULD NOT RESIST DOUMA

Equality of All Men Before the Law—Emperor Ordered Report Taken as a Guide.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 30.—The recent report of Count Witte to the Emperor on the reforms necessary to pacify the Russian people was marked by the Emperor "To be taken for a guide" coincident with the issuance of his manifesto. It is as follows:

"Your Majesty has deigned to indicate to me directions for a Government in consideration of the actual state of Russia.

"The agitation of Russian society is not the outcome of partial imperfections in the social and governmental régime or of actions organized by the extreme elements. Its roots are much deeper. It took birth in the violation of the balance between the moral aspirations and the exterior forms of Russian society.

"Believing that Russia aspires to laws based on civil liberty, the chief problem of the Government consists in making effective, even before approval by the State Douma, of all elements of civil liberty in the elaboration of normal legislative measures giving quality before the laws to all Russians, without distinction of race or of religion.

"The problem ensuing consists in the establishment of legislative forms seeming to guarantee the benefits of civil, political, and economic liberty. These benefits should be extended to the masses of the people under the reserves safeguarding the laws in all civilized countries.

"It must be realized, then, that these objects cannot be attained immediately, as no Government could suddenly prepare 135,000,000 men, with a vast administration, for new liberties.

"It is, therefore, necessary to have the powers of a homogeneous government, united in its aims, taking care to put in practice the stimulating principles of liberty and to display sincerity and uprightness in its intentions.

"The Government should abstain from any interference with elections to the Douma and keep in view my sincere desire for the realization of the ukase of Dec. 25, 1904. It must maintain the prestige of the Douma and have confidence in its labors, and in no way resist its decisions so long as they are not inconsistent with Russia's historic greatness.

"It is necessary to respect the ideals of the great majority of society and not the echoes of noisy groups and factions, too often unstable. It is especially important to secure the reform of the Council of the Empire on an electoral principle.

"I believe that in the exercise of the executive power the following principles should be embodied:

"First—Straightforwardness and sincerity in the confirmation of civil liberty and in providing guarantees for its maintenance.

"Second—A tendency in the direction of the abolition of exclusive laws.

"Third—The co-ordination of the activity of all organs of government.

"Fourth—Avoidance of repressive measures in respect of proceedings which do not openly menace society or the State.

"Fifth—Resistance to acts which manifestly threaten society or the State, such resistance being based upon law and moral unity.

"Confidence must be placed in the political tact of Russian society. It is impossible that society should desire a condition of anarchy which would threaten, in addition to all the horrors of civil strife, the dismemberment of the empire."

$5,000 OR DEATH.

Coal Dealer Nelson Thinks Black Hand Missive Is a Joke.

The police of the Fifth Avenue Station, Brooklyn, are trying to find the writer of a letter received through the mail by Frederick W. Nelson, head of the firm of Nelson Brothers, coal dealers, who lives at 171 Eighth Street.

The letter is signed "The Black Hand," and the sender demands $5,000 from Mr. Nelson. He was ordered to "bring the money to Eighty-seventh Street." The letter added that if he failed to do so he would have but three days to live. The writer added proudly:

"We have killed forty-one people in twelve weeks. When we shoot we shoot to kill."

Although Mr. Nelson has reported the matter to the police, he is inclined to view the letter as the work of some practical joker.

It was only a few hundred years ago when the Pilgrims landed on American shores. The price of thousands of acres of land was then a bag of tobacco or a few trinkets. The whole Island of Manhattan was bought for $24. Within this year a piece of ground 30 x 39 feet at the southeast corner of Broadway and Wall Street was sold for $700,000.

New York City and her suburbs are growing faster now than ever before. They will absorb this year a city the size of Pittsburg. Within ten years their combined annual growth must reach the total population of Boston.

Manhattan Island is now full to overflowing and cannot expand by a foot. Five years ago rentals were 20% less; two years hence they will be 20% more, with not enough apartments to go around. New York City is the real estate hub of the Western Hemisphere. Land ONE MILE FROM MANHATTAN ISLAND is worth twelve times as much as land twelve miles away—other conditions being equal.

Palisade is the best real estate investment around New York. Its accessibility, altitude and restrictions must make all land within its limits extremely valuable. Large purchasers of lots will make fortunes.

IN HONOR OF HENRY RICE.

Thirtieth Anniversary as Head of United Hebrew Charities Observed.

Many representative Jews who give to charity did honor to Henry Rice, President of the United Hebrew Charities, last evening on the thirtieth anniversary of Mr. Rice's election as President. There were about 800 men and women present. The auditorium in which the meeting was held was tastefully decorated with flowers and potted plants.

The principal speaker of the evening was Dr. John H. Finley, President of the College of the City of New York. He read a set of ten commandments on charity, which he said were given with due reverence. They ran like this:

Thou shalt have no motive in giving before the good of him to whom thou givest.

Thou shalt not give to the beggar, for the iniquity of the gift may be visited upon the third and fourth generation of him to whom thou givest.

Thou shalt not take the name of charity in vain.

Remember the spirit of charity to keep it holy.

Thou shalt not let children dishonor father or mother.

Thou shalt not kill the soul of the beggar by feeding him.

Thou shalt not let mothers hide their shame nor fathers their greed in an orphan asylum.

Thou shalt not steal from the poor man to feed the pauper.

Thou shalt not let the giving bear false witness to thy motive.

Thou shalt not covet the name of Philanthropist for thine own glory.

Almost the entire evening was spent in speeches which were made praising Mr. Rice for the work he has done in the thirty years of his activity as President of the Hebrew Charities. These speeches were followed by gifts in several instances. They include:

A present of a check for $1,300 by the Federation of Sisterhoods to President Rice, to be used by him in charity as he may think best; a gold pen by the Second District of the United Hebrew Charities; a painting, "Charitas," by the employes of the Hebrew Charities Building; a set of resolutions from the Directors of the Montefiore Home, and a painting of Mr. Rice himself to be presented by his associate Directors when Mr. Rice will sit for it.

HAD 970 PIECES OF SILVER.

Most of It from the Waldorf, St. Regis, and Other Hotels.

While Supt. Thomas Clements of the Frank White property on Barren Island was walking through the estate yesterday afternoon he noticed a man with a bag over his shoulder walking toward the steamboat landing.

He stopped him and asked to see the contents of the bag. He found that it contained 970 pieces of silverware. Nearly all of it bore the monograms of the big hotels in this city. The Waldorf, St. Regis, Breslin, Manhattan, Algonquin, Ansonia, Netherlands, and the Fifth Avenue Hotel had apparently contributed to the collection, while the New York Athletic Club and the Arts Club were also represented.

The man was taken to the Canarsie Police Station and locked up. He said he was Tinkus Kauffman, a junk dealer, of 485 Rockaway Avenue, Brooklyn. He refused to say how he had got the silverware and what his business was on Barren Island.

Miss Curran Forfeited Her Bail.

When the case of Mildred Curran, the young woman who is accused of obtaining money from prominent persons in Manhattan and Brooklyn hy representing that the funds were for charitable institutions, was called in the Adams Street Court, Brooklyn, yesterday, she failed to appear, and her bail of $200 was declared forfeited. Miss Curran was arrested on complaint of Isaac H. Cary, a Brooklyn real estate man, and Mrs. Emma Petingill, President of the Board of Managers of the Wayside Home.

BISSELL'S CARPET SWEEPERS

If there is any one fact upon which the general public is agreed it is that the Bissell is the best carpet sweeper made. It is the one only carpet sweeper that has stood the test of time, and its superiority is fully attested by the magnitude of its sales. Over 50% of all the carpet sweepers in use throughout the world are Bissell's. Think of this when an inferior sweeper is urged upon you as "something just as good as a Bissell."

CHANCE WORD CAUSED PANIC.

Some One Overheard Talk About Fire in a Theatre.

PASSAIC, Oct. 30.—A panic was caused in the Passaic Opera House this afternoon by a cry of "Fire." Anna and Mary Simms, who live in Garfield, came to the city to attend the matinée performance. While the curtain was down they began to talk about a fire that had occurred near their home.

Some one overheard them and, misunderstanding what they said, shouted "Fire!" The house was in an uproar in an instant, and the 500 persons in the theatre made a rush to get out.

The manager appeared on the stage and assured the audience that there was no fire, and after a time he succeeded in restoring quiet and the performance was resumed. No one was hurt.

Begged for Death Sentence.

Convicted of murder in the second degree, John Shepard, a negro, yesterday begged Judge Crane, in the Kings County Court, to send him to the electric chair rather than to prison for life. Shepard shot a man in a quarrel over a game of pool in a Navy Street resort. In court he preferred to be executed. Judge was unable to grant his

Do you remember this?

IT was so successful Saturday that we are going to repeat this announcement to-day word for word.

A lounging robe for $7.50.

We have them at lower and higher prices, but how do you like the one shown in the illustration at $7.50? For comfort and wear it is certainly a great robe at the price. We show the popular thistle design just to prove that we are up-to-the-minute in this business. Just one model, though, out of one thousand of our own manufacture.

We know how they're made and what they're made of, and will say emphatically that nothing could be done to make a robe last longer or make it more comfortable — not even if the price were $15. Main Floor.

These robes are all guaranteed pure wool—medium and heavy weight blankets used in their make-up. All have piped seams inside satin yoke—broad collar and pockets, and furnished with heavy wool girdles.

The new lines comprise all the good staple wanted colors, such as gray and oxfords, navy blues, tans, browns — these in the various shades — light or dark patterns. Designs are all in new floral effects—large and small figures—makes are all extra long, full and wide. Prices on these pure wool Robes, 6.00, 7.50, 7.95, 8.95 and 10.50.

Men's Winter overcoats at $15.50

FOR this sale we have selected the value that we had the most calls for last week, when all records in our clothing department were broken. Succeeded in getting five hundred more custom-made overcoats to sell at 15.50. We sold 236 last Friday alone. Only had 247. For to-day and to-morrow we have enough to supply the demand. But this is overcoat weather, and these are the only bona fide $25 overcoats we know of at 15.50. So it is unwise to delay, especially since these are the most popular four styles of the season.

COPYRIGHT 1905 BY THE HOUSE OF KUPPENHEIMER.

THE SURTOUT—A most becoming coat—tight fitting back.
THE REGENT—A long, 52-inch single-breasted overcoat.
THE RENWICK—Medium-length single-breasted overcoat.
THE ROSSMORE—Double-breasted overcoat of fancy material.

$15.50

These are the popular styles now among the best dressed men, and we have them in all sizes. Every man may come here to-day with positive assurance of a perfect-fitting overcoat in the style most becoming to his build—stout, slender or medium—at $15.50.

The materials are kersey, melton, frieze, cheviots, vicunas and fancy overcoats.

Think of this as a serious business proposition. Give it your consideration, and remember that you cannot be disappointed, as there is not a coat in the lot for which you would not be willing to pay $25 provided you want one of the best $25.00 coats on the market. Our stocks for Saturday will be so heavy in order to supply the demand that we must clear out all of these $25.00 coats to-day at $15.50. Second Floor.

Bearing warrants issued by Judge McMahon, in the Court of General Sessions, following the finding of seven indictments by the Grand Jury yesterday, charging registration frauds, several State Deputy Superintendents of Election searched the rooms of the John F. Ahearn Association, at 290 East Broadway, last night. They say they also went through Mr Ahearn's house, at No. 296, from cellar to roof, in quest of one of the indicted men, a lawyer and Tammany Captain of the Fourteenth Election District of the Fourth Assembly District, of which President Ahearn is leader. Mr. Ahearn denies that his house was searched.

The Morgan men couldn't find the Democratic Captain, but they arrested in another place two inspectors who are involved in the charge and locked them up in the Tombs. They then set watch for two others who, with the lawyer, were missing last night.

According to Supt. Morgan, the case which resulted in the indictments is the most flagrant violation of the registration laws that ever came to his notice, and will cause the arrest of an entire board of election inspectors, as well as the election district Captain.

Seven Indictments Found.

The indictments found yesterday were against Samuel Ellenbogen, City Marshal and Tammany Captain of the Eighteenth District; a Tammany Captain of the Fourteenth Assembly District; the Board of Election Inspectors of the Fourteenth Election of the Fourth Assembly District, and the Captain.

According to affidavits made before the Grand Jury, Harris Levine, 60 years old, of 311 Madison Street, went to the polling place of the Fourteenth Election District of the Fourth Assembly to register. He is a naturalized citizen.

While he was waiting in line to register, the lawyer looked at the papers and asked him whether he had any sons. Levine replied that he had, but although they were all over 21 years of age, they were not entitled to vote, as they had never declared their intention of becoming citizens.

"Bring all the boys around," the Tammany Captain is alleged to have said, "and everything will be all right."

"One lives in an adjoining district," Levine replied, whereupon, according to the affidavit, the Tammany Captain said: "Never mind that, we'll register him from your house. You're a greenhorn and don't know anything about the laws. Now, I'm a lawyer and know all about these things, and besides, if there is any trouble, I'll take all the responsibility. Don't you worry one bit, but just go home and get your boys here as quickly as possible. They'll want to vote, all right, and we'll make good citizens of them."

This happened on the third day of registration, a Saturday and the Jewish Sabbath. Levine hurried home and got his boys. The lawyer, according to the affidavits, then took the elder Levine's citizenship papers and took the sons before the four Election Inspectors who constituted the board. They hesitated about taking the names, whereupon the Captain is alleged to have said, "Go ahead; don't be afraid. I'm doing this." They were all registered.

The affidavits declare that the four received ballots, and were instructed to put a cross under the Tammany emblem, and that then their would be good, active Democrats. The Levines said they did not object to becoming good Democrats, but they could not, under any circumstances, sign anything on the Jewish Sabbath.

At this juncture a young fellow who was in the polling place said to one of the inspectors: "Let me have the ballots and I'll fix them up." He took the primary ballots, and, without going into the booth at the far end of the polling place, put a cross under the star on each one. Then, without further ceremony, they were dropped into the box with others that were voted and handed to the inspectors.

The inspectors made out the registration cards and they were forwarded to Supt. Morgan's office. This system of writing out the registration cards was inaugurated this year, and it was due to this that the registration frauds were detected.

Penalty May Be Severe.

The Grand Jury quickly found indictments yesterday. The Election Inspectors are charged with willful violation of the election law, the maximum penalty for which is ten years in State prison. The lawyer is charged with aiding and abetting illegal registration and also with being an accessory to a crime, the penalty for which is five years.

Twelve deputies immediately started out in quest of the indicted men, and last night they arrested two of the Inspectors, Abraham Heyman and Isaac Barnett, and locked them in the Tombs.

Several deputies sought for the lawyer at his home, but he was not there. Then they went to the headquarters of the John F. Ahearn Association at 290 East Broadway, and inquired for the lawyer. Somebody connected with the club said that he was at that moment at the home of President Ahearn at 296 East Broadway. The deputies say they lost no time in getting to Ahearn's home.

They did not find the man they were looking for, but two of the deputies were placed on watch. Morgan's men say, to remain there all night, if need be. Others were stationed at the rooms of the Ahearn Association.

It was said at the office of Supt. Morgan that the other men sought probably will surrender to-day.

Ellenbogen, who was arrested in Supt. Morgan's office and held in $1,000 bail by Magistrate Wahle in the Tombs Court on Sunday, was also indicted on a charge of swearing falsely to a material fact.

Mr. Ahearn denied last night that his house had been searched by either Morgan deputies or county detectives. He said to a TIMES reporter at the clubhouse:

"This is the first I have heard of any one searching my house, and it is untrue. Two Morgan deputies did visit the clubhouse late in the afternoon. I was upstairs looking over some paper when told that they were there. I went downstairs and saw them. They said they were looking for a man named Levy. I told them to look around for him. They did walk through the clubrooms, but did not find the man. Then they went away."

LITTLETON NOT IN LINE.

The Borough President Refuses to Attend Tammany Meetings.

Borough President Littleton of Brooklyn announced yesterday that he would not speak at the meeting in Tammany Hall to-morrow night. He said he had not been invited, and if he was he would be compelled to decline.

Throughout the present campaign Mr. Littleton has steadily declined to appear at the meetings in Brooklyn, although repeatedly urged to do so by his friends. He has made it known that he is not in sympathy with the way the Democratic campaign managers are running things.

IVINS SAYS HE'LL WIN.

With Hearst Second, McClellan Third —Expects to Beat Higgins's Vote.

"Let me make a prophecy," said William M. Ivins, Republican candidate for Mayor, to the voters of Queens County last night. "When the ballots are counted I will be found an easy winner, and the Tammany ticket, headed by George B. McClellan, will be third.

"Gov. Higgins got 268,000 votes last year. That number would suffice to elect me, but I expect to get between 25,000 and 30,000 independent Democratic votes. And I want to say to you all that when I assume the Mayor's chair I will be absolutely the most independent man who ever occupied it. I don't know a boss, and not a boss knows me."

Mr. Ivins took an early start, leaving his headquarters in the Hotel Bresiin at 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon with Senator Elsberg, ex-Senator Slater, and several reporters. The party occupied four automobiles to begin with, but before the invasion of Long Island was ended one of the machines had broken down.

The business of the evening at Jamaica began with a meeting of district captains.

Only Votes Needed.

Mr. Ivins made a short address to the politicians, telling them that if the Republicans got out their full vote there was not a question as to the result of the election.

The Flushing meeting was held in the armory, where perhaps 500 persons, including many women, had gathered. Mr. Ivins received a welcome which, while not particularly enthusiastic, seemed to satisfy his managers.

"I stand before you unpledged to any man or set of men," he said. "In entering upon my duties as Mayor I will surround myself with men chosen for their character and capabilities, and not for political reasons. If you want to put an end to the greedy grafting of the Tammany Tiger, I offer this suggestion—strangle the tiger. That's a sure way to put an end to its appetite. [Applause.]

"An effort is being made by the Tiger to save itself by crying 'Wolf!' It is like saying to you, 'Your property is in danger. You will be robbed. You need a night watchman. Hire a burglar. [Laughter.] The Republican vote is plenty large enough to elect me, and Tammany knows it.

"Great as New York is, it is destined to be still greater, and the only avenue of growth now open to it is east from East River. That is where the future of the city lies.

"There will be rapid transit franchises to distribute, and they must not be let without due return. They must not be distributed to the tune of graft. What we want is less Good Ground and more good schools." [Applause.]

At Warwick Hall, Corona, the candidate received a warm welcome. The hall was packed to its doors, and there were several hundred outside who were not able to gain admission. Mr. Ivins was moved to remark that in his whole political life he had never seen a better meeting.

"All of my meetings are the right kind," he declared. "They have more brains and less wind in them than any political gatherings I have ever known.

How Much Is Egg?

"I took the liberty of wondering the other day how much of the Hearst omelet was egg and how much was souffle. I am sure that the Republican omelet is all egg. Nothing can save Tammany Hall but unspeakable and unlimited corruption. Even that won't do it, for I do not believe that the people of New York can be bought like so many cattle. I know, for I was the first to take his political life in his hands and begin the fight for ballot reform."

Mr. Ivins, in conclusion, pledged himself to good, clean roads, good gas at honest prices, and a faithful and intelligent Health Department.

The meeting at Long Island City was held at Frenz's Jackson Avenue Park. Over the door of the pavilion was a big McClellan banner. Mr. Ivins noticed it as he went into the meeting place, and said that he didn't believe in omens.

"I noticed Mr. McClellan's name in big letters over the door," he said, "and let me tell you that if it wasn't for the respectability he lends to Tammany there would be no possibility of a Murphy in Manhattan, a Cassidy in Queens, or a McCarren in Brooklyn. But Mr. McClellan's administration has been away below par. In comparison with the administration of Low, Hewitt, and Grace, it is a total failure."

Audience Not Large.

There was not much of an audience at this meeting, and many of those who were present wore McClellan or Hearst buttons.

Returning to Manhattan the Ivins party wound up its schedule by a visit to the Grand Theatre, in Grand Street. The theatre was jammed from pit to dome, and when Mr. Ivins appeared there was a demonstration which lasted seven minutes. He was introduced by Judge Rosalsky. Most of his speech at this place was devoted to the municipal-ownership issue. He declared that the city was not in a position to undertake at once the operation of all its great franchises, but said that in the next four years it could assume some of them.

Mr. Ivins spoke but a few moments, giving way to Senator Elsberg. He was tired by the many miles covered in Long Island City, and like the other members of his party was thickly coated with dust.

MURPHY OFFERS A HALL

To Jerome or Hearst or Both—Do It Formally, Jerome's Man Says.

Hearing that William R. Hearst and William T. Jerome were complaining that they could not get a hall in the Eighteenth District for a meeting, Charles F. Murphy offered yesterday to cancel any meeting scheduled for his home district so that either or both candidates could hold meetings there.

"It probably is true that neither Hearst nor Jerome could hire a hall in the district," said Mr. Murphy. "There are very few halls in my district, and we always arrange to hold many meetings each year. As a matter of fact, there are not enough halls for our own meetings.

"That there is a desire to crowd either Jerome or Hearst out of the district, however, is not so. I will promise either Mr Hearst or Mr. Jerome that if they, one or both, will send me word what hall in the district they want, and for what night or nights, to cancel our own meeting or meetings and let one or both of them have the hall or halls. I am willing to cancel one meeting and give up one hall to each one of the candidates."

When this information was taken to Secretary Murphy of the Citizens' Union, he referred it to P. J. McCook, Chairman of the Committee on Organization. Mr. McCook said that if Mr. Murphy would make his tender of a hall in a formal way, the matter would be referred to the proper committee of the Citizens' Union.

"I am absolutely confident of the success of the Democratic ticket," was the way Charles F. Murphy sized up the situation at Tammany Hall. "Things are in good shape, and constantly are getting better. The finish will be McClellan first, Ivins second, and Hearst third."

HORNBLOWER FOR THE MAYOR

John L. Cadwalader Also Pledges His Support to Mr. McClellan.

Mayor McClellan received a letter from William B. Hornblower yeaterday morning, pledging his support in the campaign.

"I am supporting your candidacy," wrote Mr. Hornblower, "and I sincerely hope that you will be successful. I believe that the best interests of the city will be furthered by a continuance of your administration."

Another letter was from John L. Cadwalader, a Republican. He says:

"Your record and your bearing in office absolutely entitle you to the support of independent citizens interested in good government, and I shall vote for you and do what I can toward your election."

At his headquarters yesterday the Mayor received a delegation of student voters from the University of the City of New York, and made a short speech to them.

RED FLAG HEARST PARADE NOT PLANNED BY MURPHY

Tammany Leader Says He Knew Nothing About It.

700 MARCHERS WERE IN LINE

Their Emblems of Anarchy Now Stored Over Saloon from Which the Parade Started.

William R. Hearst's Evening Journal declared in its editorial columns yesterday that Charles F. Murphy had instigated the parade on the east side on Friday night last, when dozens of red flags, inscribed "Hearet und Freiheit," and a lot of other Anarchistic insignia were borne by the paradere and speeches were made lauding the candidate of the Municipal Ownership League for Mayor.

"I knew nothing about the parade on the east side on Friday night," said Mr. Murphy last night, "until I read an account of it in THE NEW YORK TIMES, and that is all I know about it now. Neither I nor any one at this headquarters had anything to do with getting up the parade. To make any statement to the contrary is not only nonsense, it is a barefaced untruth.

"I make this statement not alone for myself, but for all the leaders of Tammany Hall as well. I do not believe that any of the district leaders knew anything about it, and I want to repeat as strongly as I can that I knew nothing of the parade until I read of it."

The parade on the east side, in which about 700 men participated, was held after a regularly signed permit had been issued for it by the Police Department. The permit was made out in the name of the "Polish Hearst Club," which has its headquarters in and over Kornreich's saloon, at 133 Attorney Street.

The parade started at this point, and, notwithstanding the fact that the permit allowed the paradere to march only through certain streets in the vicinity, they extended their route of march and took in a good part of the district below Grand Street.

The club was regularly organized about ten days ago and the Polish Anarchists on the East Side flocked to its standard. It is declared that it was formed by organizers of the Municipal Ownership League as a Hearst Club, but that its rabid anarchistic tendencies at that time were unknown. When the arrangements for the parade were made the club members, then numbering nearly 700, took matters into their own hands and determined to make the occasion and anarchistic parade, which they were enabled to do on account of their permit allowing them to march.

At the head of the line a big red flag of silk, bordered with gold lace, was carried, and every division of about twenty men carried a red flag tacked to a pole tipped with a gilded spearhead. On the flags were inscribed "Hearst und Freiheit." As the procession passed through the streets the east siders not in sympathy with the anarchistic element hooted at the paraders and pelted them with stones. Just before the procession disbanded in front of the saloon from which it had started, some one threw a paving block at the man carrying the red silk flag and he went down under the feet of his comrades with a wound in the head. He was picked up and carried into the saloon.

When the paraders piled into the saloon after their march half a dozen kegs of beer had been set up in the back room for their delectation, and they made short work of the refreshment. One of the leaders, whose Polish name, as nearly as it could be transcribed into English is Korobitsky, mounted one of the tables and harangued the crowd in Polish, advising them to vote for Hearst, as THE TIMES told on the morning after the parade.

The emblems and red flags with the "Hearst und Freiheit" inscription were stored away in a room over the saloon where a TIMES reporter saw them yesterday.

Not Poles and Russians?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

According to THE TIMES's report, the paradere were "Russian and Polish" Hearst enthusiasts, and they carried red flags, some of which bore the inscriptions "Hearst und Freiheit" and "Hoch für Hearst!"

This is clearly a reporter's blunder, for, undoubtedly, I need not remind you that "und Freiheit" and "Hoch für" are not Polish words, but German words, and you must know that no Pole here would march under a flag bearing inscriptions in the German language. Moreover, the flag of anarchy, the Red Flag—with or without German mottoes—is not the flag around which Poles will rally.

Whether Russians would march under flags bearing inscriptions in the mother-tongue of the Holstein-Gottorp dynasty and of the majority of the bureaucrats—the cause of the deplorable state of the Russian Empire—is also questionable.

WACLAW PERKOWSKI.

I WON'T NEED HELP—OSBORNE

Says He'll Prosecute Insurance Cases Himself, If Elected.

Jamee W. Osborne, Democratic candidate for District Attorney, issued a reply yesterday to Mr. Jerome's statement about the insurance prosecution. Mr. Osborne said:

"Mr. Jerome does not deny in his statement this morning that many of his backers are insurance officials. He practically admits it, and, apparently, glories in it, for he asks, 'Where could I get a crowd of men in better standing in the community to back my candidacy?'

"He tries, however, to impress the voters of New York with the sincerity of his intended prosecution of his friends by pledging himself to hire Mr. Hughes as a Special District Attorney, provided he can get the money to do it. I wish to ask Mr. Jerome these questions:

"First—Does he feel unwilling or incompetent to conduct these trials himself?

"Second—Is it his desire to shift the responsibility on to other shoulders?

"Third—Does he intend to abdicate his office to somebody else, as far as the insurance officials are concerned?"

In regard to the insurance prosecution, if he is elected, Mr. Osborne says:

"It won't be necessary for us to hire Mr. Hughes. I'm not afraid to do it myself. I haven't any reason for going into the background and letting another man take the responsibility for bringing those criminals to justice. I'm under no obligations to anybody but the people of this county. I'll earn my salary myself, and not under cover of another man's name. I'm not going to pass it along to somebody else."

Then Mr. Osborne repeated his Slocum and Darlington disaster charges.

The Tammany candidate sent an open letter to Jerome last night. It was, in substance, what he had said earlier in the day on the insurance question, and closed with this:

"Regretting that the entente cordiale has been somewhat jarred by inconsiderate utterances on your part, I am, in spite of everything appearing to the contrary, your well-wisher in every particular except that you be the next District Attorney of this county.

"JAMES W. OSBORNE."

Broadway glistens with anti-Hearst campaign banners. Most of the banners were put up by trade organizations. Four big ones were hung out yesterday at the corners of Murray, Thomas, Canal, and Grand Streets.

In each instance the banners consist of a huge flag with inscriptions above and below. The inscriptions read:

Grand Jury Probing Registration.

Among the witnesses examined by the Grand Jury yesterday were Attorney General Julius Mayer, three of his deputies, and six deputies from the office of the State Superintendent of Elections. Although none of them consented to tell the object of their appearance before the Grand Jury, it was generally understood that it had to do with numerous cases of alleged false registration in the Eighth and Fourteenth Assembly Districts.

BRISBANE TO MINISTERS ON CANDIDATE HEARST

Tells Them About His Private Life and His Newspapers.

THOSE McKINLEY CARTOONS?

Only Humorous and Mr. McKinley Enjoyed Them—Mr. Hearst Never Drinks and Opposes Horse Racing.

Arthur Brisbane, chief editorial writer for William R. Hearst's newspapers, addressed the monthly meeting of the Presbyterian Ministers' Association of New York and vicinity, at 156 Fifth Avenue, yesterday afternoon. Between seventy-five and a hundred Presbyterian Ministers of New York and New Jersey, presided over by the Rev. Dr. George D. Wylie of the Scotch Presbyterian Church, were there, primarily to attend to the usual routine business of the meeting, but secondarily, and, as it developed, chiefly, to hear about politics in general and Mr. Hearst in particular.

Mr. Brisbane told the ministers a great many things about the Municipal Ownership candidate for Mayor. His theme was ostensibly "The Newspaper and Religion," but he solicited questions which, when asked, evoked a running encomium of Mr. Hearst.

Indications of a political color to the meeting were given when Dr. Wylie caused to be handed about the rooms prior to Mr. Brisbane's speech, a circular invoking opposition to Tammany Hall. The circular said, among other things:

"God save New York from the Tiger."

This was termed a "practical prayer for all good people." And then followed this from Ezekiel, xxii., 30: "And I sought for a man among them that should make up the hedge and stand in the gap before me for the land, that I should not destroy it." The circular did not suggest support for Mr. Hearst or Mr. Ivins, but was against Mr. McClellan.

Mr. Brisbane talked for about ten minutes on his chosen topic of the newspaper and religion, arguing that a Sunday newspaper that printed a sermon was the only means of reaching millions of readers who didn't attend church. Then he said:

The McKinley Cartoons.

"I didn't come to discuss politics, but I will take pleasure in answering any questions that may be put to me respecting that subject."

The ministers laughed, and then Dr. S. H. Thompson of Red Bank, N. J., wanted to know about the charge that the Hearst cartoons were responsible for President McKinley's assassination.

"There has been a wide misstatement of facts here," said Mr. Brisbane. "It is true that the Hearst newspapers did print a series of cartoons at the expense of Mr. McKinley, entitled, 'Willie and His Pa,' and depicting the late President at the beck and call of the trusts. Now, these were ordinary, humorous sketches, and the fact is that no one seemed to enjoy them more than Mr. McKinley himself. In truth, he collected them and kept them to the day of his death, as Mrs. McKinley can testify. Just before Mr. McKinley met his death Mr. Opper, the artist, received a letter from Mr. Roosevelt, then Vice President, who commended him for his funny work. Mr. Roosevelt thought the 'Willie' cartoons very funny, and asked for a set of them. We did not print this letter at the time we were charged with assassination, owing to the delicacy of Mr. Roosevelt's position.

"It was during this series of cartoons that Mr. Hearst called upon the President for the purpose of organizing a regiment to fight in the Spanish war. Mr. McKinley was very pleasant and friendly to Mr. Hearst, and thanked him for his offer, declining it on the ground that an acceptance would disorganize army plans. Mr. Hearst then offered, without cost, a yacht, to be placed at the disposal of the Government for war service. Other rich men, you will recall, received money for similar gifts. Mr. McKinley was very gracious to Mr. Hearst when this offer was made, and thanked him again. Mr. McKinley and Mr. Hearst at that time were on friendly terms personally.

"When the assassination occurred, certain persons looked about for a mark upon which to stamp their condemnation; they wanted to find a provocation for the work of Czolgosz, and the thing that fixed their attention was the Hearst cartoons. They grasped the opportunity to flaunt them before the enraged country because they couldn't very well find anything else off-hand. Then some of our enemies went to the Buffalo prison and showed Czolgosz the cartoons. He was asked if he had ever seen and read them. He replied that he had not."

Opposition to the Hearst Papers.

"How can you account for the fact that so many of the best and most respectable people in the United States are down on The American and Journal and their policies?" was asked by the Rev. Dr. J. A. Hoadley.

"For the same reason that Mr. Ruskin hated a railroad," was the reply. "He condemned railroads without having tried them. He acknowledged that he hadn't at the time of his condemnation ridden in railroad trains. By the same token people decry our work. If they would read our newspapers and learn Mr. Hearst's principles they would admire them. They know not what they attack and condemn."

"If Mr. Hearst is a conscientious man, how can he put the emphasis he does upon horse racing, pugilism, and other sports demoralizing to the youth of the country?" was asked by the Rev. Dr. Wilson Phraner.

"Mr. Hearst," was the reply, "is opposed to horse racing. He has urged the passage of bills to prevent horse racing in States where he prints newspapers. He does not favor the sport; in fact, he is sincerely opposed to it. He is fighting it all the time. Racing men know this and have contributed thousands of dollars to the campaign against him. But there are many people interested in horse racing, pugilism, and other classes of sport. These readers must be reached, and if we don't print accounts of the sporting events as they transpire we cannot reach them. Is it not far better to print these accounts and reach the people who want to read them, in the hope that they may be reclaimed by other features of the newspaper which they read?"

Mr. Brisbane said that there were two classes of people against Mr. Hearst, one the plutocrats and the other the Anarchists.

"The plutocrats are opposed to him," he declared, "because they want to steal the streets and the gas franchises, and they attack Mr. Hearst savagely. The other is the class which wants no law, the class which wants to take away from some man without giving anything in return."

"The richest men of the country," declared Mr. Brisbane, "owe Mr. Hearst a debt because he is trying to solve the problems of civilization by persuasion and talk."

The Candidate's Private Life.

Prof. C. P. Fagani put this question: "Since Mr. Brisbane has referred to the matter, I wish to ask about the charge that Mr. Hearst is a most depraved man, morally. Only last night I heard a man say that he had learned, upon evidence that he deemed conclusive, that Hearst is a debauchee of a peculiarly depraved type."

Mr. Brisbane replied at some length to this charge also, in substance as follows: "I know that this charge has been widely circulated. In fact, 8,000 placards have been ordered to be posted throughout the city in furtherance of that charge. But I lived in the same house with Mr. Hearst for three years, and I know of nothing whatever to support it. He is a man who never drinks, who works hard every day until 2 or 3 o'clock in the morning. He is a big, strapping fellow, a man of domestic habits, and his little boy is a marvel of health and vigor. I will say as to this gentleman's informant, one of two things is true, if he did not see the things he tells of, he cannot know the truth, and if he says he did see those things, his word is unworthy of belief." [Applause.]

"Why is it," was asked, "that we can't get many men who read the Hearst newspapers to attend church?"

Mr. Brisbane answered that the newspapers which they read served in a measure the purpose of church attendance, and the readers were instructed by such newspapers as though each were talked to by an individual preacher.

Mr. Brisbane then talked of Mr. Hearst's work in behalf of total abstinence.

"I know it to be a fact that on account of this principle Mr. Hearst has been rejecting whisky advertisements from the counters of his business offices at the rate of $500,000 a year. He will not print them."

Mr. Brisbane's attention was not directed to a whisky advertisement that was printed in The American yesterday morning.

"Mr. Hearst," he concluded, "is doing a great work in behalf of total abstinence."

FLAMMER AT JEROME RALLY.

Austen G. Fox Also to Speak at the Lawyers' Meeting.

Ex-Magistrate Charles A. Flammer, who withdrew from the Republican ticket in favor of Mr. Jerome, will be a Vice President, and will sit on the platform at the meeting to be held Wednesday night at Carnegie Hall under the auspices of the group of lawyers headed by Joseph H. Choate, and three other ex-Presidents of the Bar Association.

The speakers at this meeting will be Joseph H. Choate, Austen G. Fox, John G. Milburn, and Mr. Jerome. The announcement of these names yesterday created some comment because of the prominence given to Mr. Fox's name in connection with the Tammany nomination for District Attorney. The distribution of boxes and platform seats has been in the hands of Frederic Coudert, Jr., and has nearly brought him gray hairs because the demand has so far exceeded the supply. The boxes have been divided so far as they would go among the leading members of the bar.

CROWDS ON EAST SIDE WILD FOR MR. HEARST

He Speaks to 20,000 at Six Meetings in the District.

500 POLICE TO GUARD HIM

Municipal Ownership Enthusiasts Jammed Around His Carriage—The Streets Aglow with Fireworks.

Red fire took the place of the red flag when William R. Hearst made his first tour of the lower east side last night. The east side streets were crowded with men and women, who hailed him with tumultuous applause as his carriage proceeded from meeting to meeting, while bands were playing and the night was red with fireworks.

Mr. Hearst addressed six indoor meetings and one in the open air. Altogether from 15,000 to 20,000 persons heard him and cheered him. It took 500 policemen to keep order and restrain the eager crowds that thronged the streets and crushed about his carriage.

The Hearst party started from the Hoffman House in four open carriages, and went to the home of Mr. Hearst, at Twenty-eighth Street and Lexington Avenue, where he got aboard the first carriage in the line with some of his campaign managers. The first stopping place was at the Progress Assembly Rooms, 28-30 Avenue A.

At that place Mr. Hearst was confronted with a hall crowded almost to suffocation with a typical east side audience. He was cheered for five minutes. Outside in the street there was a crowd several times the size of the crowd that was in the hall—a crowd that almost mobbed him in its eagerness to reach him and shake his hand.

"My friends," said Mr. Hearst, "we are fighting the bosses of both parties, the grafters of all parties. We are fighting for honesty and efficiency and decency in the conduct of public affairs. The Murphy machine has plenty of money and plenty of effrontery, but it has not got the votes, and it is not going to get them, for we are supported by the men of principle in this city in our fight, and men of principles cannot be bought."

"We will send Murphy back to Good Ground for good," shouted one man in the audience.

Continuing, Mr. Hearst said: "The other night Bourke Cockran, speaking for the Gas Mayor and the gas meter, asked me why—as long as I offer 55-cent gas, which he declared an impossibility—I did not offer 25-cent gas.

"I'll tell you why. Because I'm no little lying politician who gives promises he does not intend to fulfill. Anyhow, Mr. Cockran's business ability and Mr. Cockran's business experience have been limited to selling out his oratory to the highest bidder, and everybody knows it."

"Good! Good! Hit him again!" shouted a half dozen voices in the audience.

"When I said three-cent fares I meant 3 cents," continued Mr. Hearst. "The Metropolitan Street Railway Company has to pay interest on $151,000,000 of watered stock; that is why it cannot afford to carry you for that.

"My friends, I do not say, as does one of my opponents, that all these reforms can be brought about in thirty days, but they can be begun one minute after 12 o'clock on Jan. 1 next, and they shall be."

"They will," shouted the crowd.

When Mr. Hearst stopped speaking a roar of approval went up from the crowd in the hall. Four policemen rushed up and made a way through the crowded aisle toward the door. Others fell in and made a passage way down the crowded stairs to the carriage.

Outside about 5,000 were waiting. The crush about Mr. Hearst's carriage was such that mounted policemen had been sent for by Inspector Flood while Mr. Hearst was in the hall. The policemen on foot were not able to hold the people back.

As the procession of carriages started, several men carrying red lights fell in behind the carriages. A brass band followed, and several thousand men took up the march. In front of the carriage the avenue was filled with humanity from curb to curb. The mounted policemen plowed a way through the multitude, but the progress of the cavalcade was necessarily very slow.

At Norfolk and Houston Streets an open-air stand had been erected where Hearst orators were speaking. As the carriages reached this place the mounted policemen pressed the people back, but so dense was the throng that three Central Office detectives who were accompanying Mr. Hearst had to get out of the carriages and assist in making space enough for the carriages to pass up to the stand.

There Mr. Hearst arose in his carriage and began to speak, but the sound of his voice was drowned in cheers. Finally when he could make himself heard he spoke briefly, ending up by declaring:

"When I am elected I'll be your Mayor, not Murphy's Mayor."

The windows and fire escapes in the surrounding tenements were crowded with women as the procession went through the narrow east side streets to the Lenox Lyceum, the next meeting place. There more than 2,000 people greeted Mr. Hearst as enthusiastically as had the throngs at the other places. He repeated his speech. When he came to the part where he referred to Murphy, a man in the audience cried out:

"Everybody wolks but Moiphy; after 'lection Moiphy will have to wolk, too."

From this hall Mr. Hearst took away a large floral wreath inscribed to "Our Future Mayor." It had been provided by Mr. De Beck, a member of the Hearst Finance Committee, who presided at the meeting.

With cheering men surrounding his carriage on all sides and bands of music following it, Mr. Hearst then drove down to Jefferson Hall, at 90 Columbia Street. It was late and most of the tenement windows were darkened, but cheers and the strains of music and the clatter of hoof beats as the mounted police were clearing the narrow streets, awakened the people, and whitclad figures appeared at almost every window.

At Stanton and Columbia Streets there was an open air meeting. Tammany orators talked to a crowd from a truck. Before the tidal wave of Hearst enthusiasts the truck was cleared in a jiffy and taken possession of by the Hearst burners of red fire. There was some booing and hissing at this corner as the little procession drew past, but it was drowned out by the cheers of the men that followed the Hearst carriage.

Mr. Hearst spoke in Jefferson Hall, where about 1,500 Hungarians cheered him for five minutes or more. The balcony was occupied by a number of Columbia men, who gave the college yell as soon as Mr. Hearst appeared in the hall. From Jefferson Hall the journey continued through dark streets down to the Cherry Hill district, into the stronghold of Borough President Ahearn, the cheering crowd following his carriage throughout the warehouse district.

In East Broadway the street again was lined with red fire. The band again appeared. Fifty policemen had made an open square in front of the Terrace Lyceum at 206 East Broadway, next door to the banner Tammany organization of the district. In this building the Hearst managers had managed to get two audiences, one in a hall on the second floor, another in a hall on the ground floor. Mr. Hearst addressed both.

The last meeting of the evening was held at Clinton Hall, in Clinton Street. Mr. Hearst was greeted with volleys of cheers.

Mr. Hearst at noon yesterday addressed about 500 longshoremen, laborers, and mechanics from a truck in front of the White Star pier, at the foot of West Eleventh Street.

IRVINE IN RUSSIAN CHURCH.

Episcopalian Unfrocked by Bishop Talbot to be Made a Priest.

The Rev. Dr. Ingram N. W. Irvine, who was unfrocked by Bishop Talbot of the Central Pennsylvania Diocese of the Protestant Episcopal Church, following which he instituted a sensational proceeding in the civil courts, will be formally admitted into the priesthood of the Russian Orthodox Catholic Church next Sunday in St. Nicholas Cathedral, this city. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Dr. Eikhon, by permission of the Archbishop of the Russian Orthodox Church. Dr. Irvine said at Philadelphia last night:

"I have weighed seriously the positions of the different portions of Christendom, and have come to the conclusion that the Holy Eastern Church affords a better basis for the reunion of Christendom than any other part of the catholic Church. In her midst, I hope to be the loving friend of the Anglican Church, as well as the Roman and Protestant churches."

4,000 CHEER JEROME.

He Takes Up McGowan at Sulzer's Casino Meeting.

Since the first night when District Attorney Jerome opened his campaign at Carnegie Hall he has not addressed a larger audience than that which gathered in Sulzer's Harlem Casino last night. Estimates of the numbers crowded into that most quaint-looking of public halls varied from 4,000 to 5,000, but of the smaller figure even the most conservative seemed certain.

Mr. Jerome kept his audience laughing at his reference to "the boss." Four or five times he was interrupted by outbursts of applause lasting fully a minute each. A characteristic incident occurred when he reached the inevitable question of:

"Where did he get it?"

Having asked it first with the stress on "it" and then repeated with a comical accentuation of "get," he was met with a counter-question from some man in the audience, who asked:

"Well, where did he get it?" with emphasis on the "did."

"There, you see," remarked Mr. Jerome. "There are five different ways, and each one is equally pertinent, equally forcible. And each one fails equally to bring any answer. All we know is that he did not get it from gas—at least, that is what he says."

But Mr. Jerome had another question ready to add to the old one. It was: "Where did he find him?" And it concerned McGowan, the Tammany nominee for President of the Board of Aldermen.

"If George McClellan should be elected and go up to a higher position," he said, "McGowan would be Mayor for three years. It is within the bounds of possibility that this man may have the most influential vote in the Board of Estimate and Apportionment, a body that is to grant franchises which you and I will not live to see terminated. And who is he? Who ever heard of him? I have asked my friends of the press, who are pretty good gum-shoe men. And I have asked my friends of the district leaders. None knows and none ever knew.

"Where did he find him? In some dark place or in some light place? The man, for all we know, may be a minister of the Gospel or a bartender. You or I or your delegates did not pick him out. Charley Murphy or Johnny Oakley may have done so. Somebody found him running loose somewhere. [Laughter and prolonged applause.]

"Does it require any proofs, gentlemen, with such things occurring, that in our land liberty is practically dead?

"Now, what is the boss? Republican or Democrat matters little. It is the same breed of cattle all the world over. Growing wealth goes with growing power. And the question is always pertinent, 'Where did you get it?' And though we get no answer, we get some interesting sidelight on the question at times through discussions like that of that distinguished statesman Senator Plunkitt, who tells us about 'honest graft.' Honest graft has got no place among American institutions, if I know the American people right. [Wild cheering.]

Speaking of Leader Murphy of Tammany Hall, Mr. Jerome said:

"The first thing he said was so childlike in its simplicity that Mr. Cram jumped right out and—'Pardon me, Mr. Murphy, this way!' And they put Murphy in the cooler. (Pointing to one of the policemen:) You know what the cooler is. And I know. They locked me up once, long ago, for riding a bike on the sidewalk. (Mournfully:) I never got as far as an automobile."

Mr. Jerome then said that Mayor McClellan, Bourke Cockran, Mr. Metz, and even Mr. McGowan had failed to come out in defense of Murphy, James W. Osborne being the only one to speak. He repeated, one by one, Mr. Osborne's printed attacks on him, and then referred to Mr. Murphy's indorsement of what Mr. Osborne had said.

"I suppose Cram was away attending to some social duty," Mr. Jerome continued, "and Murphy used the opportunity to break out from the dark room where they were keeping him. And he says that he stands for what Osborne has said. And what Osborne has said is this: First, that if a man can get graft and does not take it he is a fool, and second, that I am mad because Charley Murphy has got 'it.' Those sentiments Charley Murphy indorses. Why, citizens, it needs only a week, the time he has got, to make him stand up like that brazen Tweed and ask: "'What are you going to do about it?' That is what he is about ready to do, and that, fellow-citizens, is the kind of man that I am fighting now."

The audience shouted approval for more than a minute. When silence was restored, Mr. Jerome changed to a serious note and went over the story of his campaign and the object of his appeal to the people.

A delegation from the organization of the survivors of the General Slocum disaster called on District Attorney Jerome yesterday, to obtain from him facts and figures that might be used in meeting the attempts made to make political capital out of the prosecution that followed the disaster. After the delegation had left, Mr. Jerome said:

"The matter was fully explained to the members of the committee, and they will report to a meeting of the organization Wednesday night. Before that time I shall send them a letter giving a detailed account of what this office did to bring to justice the men that were responsible for that horrible catastrophe, as well as what this office is still prepared to do."

Here are some more cullings from the Jerome mail bag:

A woman writes from Flatbush: "For the first time I long for a residence in Manhattan and a right to vote."

A Pittsburg lawyer, whose name is well known far outside that city, ends a long letter of encouragement with these words: "I find that there are hundreds of people in this city, without regard to party, who are earnestly wishing for your triumphant election."

One of the tiny members of the girls' club formed at the College Settlement in Harlem sent in a dollar yesterday on behalf of the membership (total age of the whole body about 100 years) and this letter: "The girls are 'with you' in your brave fight against the bosses. They wish to testify by adding their tiny mite to the campaign fund."

A policeman wrote to the Jerome headquarters yesterday, giving names and other details, to warn Mr. Jerome that several Police Captains had threatened to "make it hot for them (their men) if they dared to vote for Jerome."

FERRYBOATS IN A CRASH.

Hoboken Passengers in a Panic—Craft Laid Up.

Two ferryboats of the Lackawanna Line were in collision last night at the company's Hoboken slip. The Secaucus arrived from Christopher Street in Manhattan and had entered the Hoboken slip when the Netherlands, which had arrived from Barclay Street, smashed into the other boat. The accident was caused by the swiftness of the tide.

The bow of the Netherlands was badly damaged as was also the stern of the Secaucus. Windows on both boats were smashed. Each carried a big load of passengers, and there was a lot of excitement for a time, but it was soon relieved by the deckhands, who assured everybody that there was no danger. After the passengers had been landed both boats were laid up for repairs.

DEATH VALLEY MINER HURT.

Walter Scott Hurled From Automobile and May Die.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Oct. 30.—Walter Scott, the miner from Death Valley, who made a record-breaking trip by train from the Pacific Coast to Chicago recently, was hurled from an automobile to-day and so badly injured that he probably will die. Physicians say his back is broken.

Scotty bet Harry Milling, a saloon keeper, $150 that he would make a run in his automobile from Los Angeles to Pasadena, about 14 miles, and return, in forty minutes. The bet was taken.

Scotty bet Milling $50 that no accident would occur.

When the return journey was two-thirds completed the automobile broke a wheel, slewed against a stone wall and hurled its occupants over and against the wall. Scott was picked up unconscious, but murmuring "Faster, faster."

Milling and two others who were with him were badly hurt.

BEWARE OF PROMISES, M'CLELLAN'S WARNING

Says if City Spends More Money Taxes Must Rise.

COST OF LIVING TOO HIGH

The Mayor Addresses a Big Meeting in Harlem and Opens Two Church Fairs.

Denouncing demagogy and attacking, as impossible of fulfillment, the "Utopian promises" of candidates, Mayor McClellan appeared last night before an audience that crowded the Manhattan Casino at 155th Street and Eighth Avenue to its fullest capacity. The meeting, which was the last one addressed by the Mayor in his evening's tour, was remarkably demonstrative. Before this meeting the Mayor attended the openings of two church fairs and made short addresses at each place.

It was nearly 9:30 o'clock when the Mayor's automobile, its chauffeur being directed by Deputy Police Commissioner Thomas F. McAvoy, reached the Casino at Eighth Avenue and 155th Street. McAvoy, who is the Tammany leader of the Twenty-third District, where the meeting was held, escorted the Mayor and his party through a long line of cheering men and women to the stage.

For ten minutes the crowd cheered, waved American flags, and shouted, while the Mayor stood impassive on the platform. Only once did he smile, and that was when the band, in the midst of the cheering, struck up the familiar air of "Tammany." Then the chant of "Four, four, four years more!" was taken up and shouted by the crowd.

Speaking of Tammany's promises the Mayor said:

"No one will give you more or can give you more for the same amount of money. Any pledge or proposition to do so is a false promise and is absolute demagogery.

"Municipal ownership cannot produce something for nothing. You cannot get power without heat. If you want steam you must burn coal; if you burn coal you have got to pay for it in this world of ours. It follows from this that if you want more of anything you must raise and pay more money to get it. More money in this metropolis, as in every City Government, means a higher city tax rate. A higher tax rate means that you must pay more rent. If you want more from the City Government than you get to-day you will pay more rent.

"It seems to me that the rent limit has about been reached. We cannot go further without danger. The necessities of life are already too high. Must we pay more for bread or for meat or for coal? It's all very well to say that these necessities are controlled by trusts, and that trusts should be destroyed. This is not a time for the exploitation of academic questions or of theories. We are in the hard grind of practical questions. If the city spends more money the tax rate goes up. If the tax rate goes up rents rise, and all the dealers in the necessities of life and all the men in the markets must raise their prices to meet the emergency.

"Do not let us blind ourselves to this great fact. All taxes fall on the consumer. The mortgage tax comes out of the borrower, in spite of the law that the lender must pay it. I shall ask and I shall continue to ask for the repeal of that law as I ask you to. The fact that any one gives us a Utopian promise that cannot possibly be realized illustrates the value of the pledges of the demagogues and misleaders of the people. If you dance you have got to pay the piper. That is an economic law which no one yet has succeeded in repealing."

In conclusion, the Mayor said:

"I call upon you, in the city's name, to forget whether you be Democrats or whether you be Republicans, and to remember only that our city's fair fame is at stake, and to rally to her support and give to the ticket I have the honor to head the greatest majority ever received in this City of New York."

First on his tour of the town last night the Mayor went to the Carmelite Church Fair at 324 East Twenty-ninth Street, in the old Twelfth Congress District he so long represented at Washington. There he received a hearty greeting. Father Southwell, the head of the order in this city, made an interesting speech of introduction, in which he said that the "old Congressman of the district" never had failed to respond for fifteen years to any call the church had made on him, whether it was for a flag presentation, the opening of a fair, or any other appeal.

"And there is no doubt what this district will do for our old Congressman now that he again is running for Mayor," said Father Southwell. "We shall roll up a mighty vote for him over here; we all are Democrats. In fact, in this district we might as well be Chinamen as not to be Democrats."

The Mayor's address was entirely devoid of political references, and made some fun over the fact that at the fair the boys were voting on "Mayor of Irishtown" at 5 cents a vote. He praised the charitable work of the Carmelite Order. From this fair the Mayor's automobile swiftly whisked him to the fair of the Church of St. Rose of Lima, in One Hundred and Sixty-fifth Street. There he also received a hearty greeting.

The Mayor spoke at noon yesterday at a meeting of the Commercial Travelers' League, at 597 Broadway. He addressed himself to real estate men especially and spoke at length on the Mortgage Tax bill.

"We have serious questions to deal with," said he, "when we find that over $20,000,000 is annually extracted from the people of this city so as to support the unbridled extravagance of a Republican administration.

"I have no doubt as to the result of the coming election," the Mayor continued, "but in appealing to you for re-election I ask you to give me such a plurality that it will stand as a rebuke to Republican extravagance and dishonesty and rank hysteria."

Some Hearst enthusiasts caused a small riot yesterday at the noon meeting of the Commercial Travelers' League, where Mayor McClellan spoke. After the Mayor had spoken and was leaving the meeting place at 597 Broadway a man poked his head into the window of the Mayor's carriage while it was standing by the curb waiting for the police to clear the way.

"Three cheers for Hearst!" he yelled, according to Sergt. Russell of the Mercer Street Station.

There was a McClellan delegation pouring out of the meeting place, while from the opposite side of the street came what appeared to be an organized Hearst contingent. The two crowds, numbering fully five hundred each, met the carriage, and then, pushing, swearing, and shouting, started an incipient general fight.

Several policemen stationed near the carriage clubbed the men nearest them in an effort to clear the way. Sergt. Russell summoned all the policemen from the hall and got them to clear Broadway, the cars having been stopped by the mob. The man who shouted into the Mayor's carriage got away, although two men in the carriage with the Mayor tried to seize him. The Mayor smiled broadly and took the whole affair as a joke. Another man, Albert Greenblat, was arrested for disorderly conduct and was fined $2 in Jefferson Market Court.

SQUADS OF DETECTIVES IN MRS. TODD'S HOUSE

Contestants for the Old Woman's Money Employ Sleuths.

SAY SHE MADE THREE WILLS

The Last Document Drawn Up Just Before Her Death Was Unsigned —Miss Knight Reappears.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaretta Todd, who was killed by a train last Friday night near Philadelphia, was held yesterday from the undertaking establishment of Stephen Merritt, at Eighth Avenue and Nineteenth Street, and at the funeral there were developments in this case.

Mrs. S. C. Goldmark, who said she was a friend of Mrs. Todd, declared that she was out shopping with Mrs. Todd on Thursday, the day before the old woman was killed.

"She told me," said Mrs. Goldmark, "that she had to hurry away to keep an appointment with her lawyer, who was to draw up a new will, as the last one she had made had been stolen. She fell out with Ingersoll Lockwood, her old lawyer, last Summer."

Ingersoll Lockwood has declared all along that he had Mrs. Todd's last will, which was made in 1904, and an older one, which was made in 1903. He also has, he says, a trust deed which provides that he is to have charge of the Von Hoffman Hotel as long as he lives.

After the misunderstanding between Mr. Lockwood and Mrs. Todd, he left the Von Hoffman Hotel. Last week, when Mrs. Todd wished to have a new will drawn up, she sent for George Gordon Hastings, another attorney. He drew up the will; it was to have been signed yesterday.

The first two wills are said to be alike in making Mrs. Frank Tousey, only daughter of Mrs. Todd, the chief beneficiary. The new will, a detective said last night, makes Mrs. George Howse, stepdaughter of Mrs. Todd, an equal beneficiary with Mrs. Tousey. Mrs. Howse went to the hotel when she heard of Mrs. Todd's death, took possession of her rooms and belongings, barricaded herself therein to guard the place from Lockwood, and employed detectives to protect her.

Lockwood hired detectives to offset those of Mrs. Howse. Yesterday morning Mrs. Howse decided that Mr. Lockwood's detectives should be put out. They were from the Ascher agency in Broadway. Mrs. Howse called for police assistance from the Tenderloin Station. That proving fruitless, she called in men from a second agency to help those she already had there. After bickering all morning tho Ascher men were put out of the place yesterday afternoon.

Lockwood and Lawyer Hastings have agreed not to contest with one another until Mrs. Tousey returns from Vienna two weeks from now. Mr. Hastings was to meet Mr. Lockwood last night at 8 o'clock to talk about the withdrawal of all the detectives from the hotel. Lockwood's men were discharged yesterday, after they had been put out. Mrs. Howse's men are still there. Mr. Hastings didn't come to the proposed conference last night.

Miss Knight appeared at the funeral yesterday. She was the woman who rode to the ferry with Mrs. Todd when the old woman started for Philadelphia. From that time up to yesterday there had been a vigorous search for Miss Knight.

"Mrs. Todd didn't intend to go to East Orange when she left the hotel," said Miss Knight. "She told them that to throw them off the scent. She wanted to go down to Philadelphia to see a relative. I would have gone with her if a sister of mine hadn't been sick."

As to who Mrs. Todd wanted to "throw off the scent" Miss Knight would not say. Mrs. Goldmark, the woman who said she had been shopping with Mrs. Todd on Thursday, said that Mrs. Todd was suspicious of several people around her, and that she had hidden a lot of jewelry and papers.

Dr. Albert G. Webb, who for twenty years was Mrs. Todd's physician, said last night that he saw Mrs. Todd on Wednesday before her death. He dindn't think her mind was affected at all.

ADMIRAL TRAIN MOBBED, MARINES FIGHT CHINESE

Report from Shanghai Published in a London Paper.

SHOT WOMAN BY ACCIDENT

Officer Attacked Outside Nanking, Knocked Down and Disarmed and His Son Held as Hostage.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—A dispatch to The Evening Standard from Shanghai says that Rear Admiral Train, Commander in Chief of the American Asiatic Squadron, and his son, Lieut. Train, have been victims of a savage attack by Chinese outside of Nanking.

The American officers were pheasant shooting when the Admiral accidentally shot a Chinese woman, slightly injuring her. Hundreds of villagers thereupon surrounded the officers, took away their guns, knocked the Admiral down in the mud, and held Lieut. Train as a hostage.

Forty American marines, landed as a rescue party, were attacked by a mob of Chinamen, who tried to pitchfork the officers. The marines were obliged to fire twice. The Chinese officials refused to restore the officers' guns, and supported the villagers.

Nanking has been active in the movement for boycotting American goods, and is the centre of activity on the part of Japanese students.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Nothing has reached the Navy Department in regard to the reported attack on Admiral Train, and this fact causes some doubt as to the accuracy of The London Standard's report, at least as regards the seriousness of the affair. If a force of marines had to be landed to rescue the Admiral, it is unusual, and even extraordinary, that no report was made.

Nevertheless, considerable uneasiness is felt at the department, and at Secretary Bonaparte's request the State Department has ordered inquiry to be made. Consul Haines is not at Nanking and Vice Consul Gracie has been sent up from Foo-Chow with orders to investigate the report.

Naval officers say such accidents as this are not infrequent in China. It is the custom of the naval officers of all nationalities, but particularly British and Americans, on the China station to go shooting among the Chinese rice fields which at certain seasons abound with ducks and smaller birds feeding on the rice. Firing in the tall rice is frequently followed by accidents, but the naval officers say these are easily adjusted as a rule by the payment of a small sum of money to the victim or his friends.

One officer recalled shooting a Chinese babe on its mother's back. The affair was settled amicably by the payment of fifty Mexican dollars, with the result that many Chinamen were tempted to put themselves in the way of shotguns.

Rear Admiral Charles Jackson Train, the Commander in Chief of the United States Asiatic fleet, was one of the four officers who during the Spanish-American war were assigned to command vessels in the Northern Patrol squadron, organized to protect the Atlantic Coast north of the Delaware Capes. All four of these officers have since that conflict been promoted to Rear Admirals.

On the dissolution of the Atlantic Coast Patrol, Commander Train proceeded to Cuban waters, where he was the senior officer in command of the Havana blockade. In November, 1898, he was promoted to a Captaincy. On his appointment to the grade of Rear Admiral he was ordered to the Philippines, where he succeeded Rear Admiral Yates Stirling as the Commander in Chief of the American fleet in Asiatic waters.

PLEAD FOR E. F. SHEPARD.

Friends Ask Intervention for New York Man Sentenced in Paris.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—Influential New York friends of Elliott F. Shepard of New York, who was sentenced here Oct. 26 to three months' imprisonment and $120 fine and to pay $4,000 damages to the parents of a girl who was killed by Mr. Shepard's automobile in April last, are cabling for the purpose of procuring the intervention in his behalf of the American officials here.

The question is under consideration, but no step has been taken owing to the executive branch not having authority over the judiciary. Mr. Shepard's attorney has given up his intention to appeal, as the fine and imprisonment were the minimum, leaving no grounds for appeal.

BLACK HAND FITS HIS OWN.

Device in Threatening Letter May Identify Ursetti as Sender.

Frank Ursetti, who was caught a few nights ago while taking a package of marked money from an empty boiler in front of 199 Centre Street, was held in $5,000 bail yesterday by Magistrate Wahle in the Tombs Court for examination on Nov. 2.

A feature of the short hearing yesterday was the production in court of the first letter received by Michael Scaugarelle, Ursetti's employer, a real estate dealer of 142 Elm Street. Ursetti lived with him. The letter bore a fac simile of a man's left hand. It was apparent that the writer had placed his hand on the letter paper and traced an outline of it in ink. Then he had filled in the outline of the hand with ink.

Detective Sondero, who arraigned Ursetti, said Ursetti's hand had been placed on top of the "black hand" and had been found to fit perfectly. The letter demanded $500. A second letter raised the demand to $700.

A BLACK HAND THREAT.

Woodside Alarmed Over Explosion and Letter to Artist.

Albert Pannasch, an artist living at 11 Greenpoint Avenue, Woodside, L. I., received a letter yesterday threatening him with death if he does not deposit $500 at Woodside and Kelly Avenues, Woodside, by this morning. He has turned the letter over to the police of the Astoria Precinct.

About ten days ago a small frame building in the back yard of Mr. Pannasch's house was blown up. The explosion occurred early in the morning and frightened the entire neighborhood. Mrs. Pannasch is alarmed over the explosion and the letter and has taken her eight-year-old son out of school for fear that he might be kidnapped. Residents of Woodside are very much wrought up over the threat against the Pannasches.

BOOTH AT CARNEGIE HALL.

The Volunteers of America Celebrate Their Ninth Anniversary.

Carnegie Hall was crowded last night on the occasion of the ninth anniversary of the founding of the Volunteers of America. The principal speakers of the evening were Gen. Ballington Booth and Mrs. Maud Booth.

Mrs. Booth spoke, as she said, "for the persons who could not be present," the thousands of prisoners whom she has befriended.

Col. Lindsay's regimental band played during the evening, and the audience joined in the singing hymns led by Gen. Booth. Addresses were made by Major Gen. Fielding and other heads of the Volunteers of America.

LECTURE PLEASES THE KAISER

He Hears Mr. Roosevelt Praised by Prof. Peabody.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—Emperor William, Ambassador and Mrs. Tower, Baron von Richthofen, the Foreign Secretary, and Baroness von Richthofen; Dr. Studt, the Prussian Minister of Public Instruction, and many other officials, and about fifty professors and six hundred students attended the first lecture of Prof. Francis Greenwood Peabody of Harvard in the hall of the university to-day.

Prof. Peabody, whose subject was "Academic Reciprocity," spoke for forty-five minutes. The Emperor from time to time nodded approval of his utterances and joined in the applause.

Referring to President Roosevelt, Prof. Peabody said:

"Twenty-five years ago the President received his Bachelor's degree at Harvard. There he was taught to think straight and write simply, and later years have taught him how to fight in war and how to rule both others and himself in peace. From this rich experience issued into the world a man fit to meet the world problems of world power.

"It is one of the most extraordinary facts of contemporary history that an administrator who some feared might involve his Nation in a needless war should find his most permanent title to fame by inheriting the beatitude 'Blessed are the peacemakers.'".

The Professor then read a letter from President Roosevelt, which in part was as follows:

I take a very keen personal interest in the undertaking, and deeply appreciate the generosity and sympathy with which the German Government has entered into the plan. I not only hope, but believe that the interchange will be fruitful and continuous, and both of direct and indirect advantage to the peoples of the two countries.

The Emperor shook hands with the professor and thanked him for his lecture. He said he thought the interchange of professors had made a good beginning.

ADMIRES DOWAGER EMPRESS.

Miss Carl, the Artist, Holds China's Aged Ruler in High Regard.

Miss Katherine Carl, the artist, who painted the portrait of the Empress Dowager of China, arrived in New York on the Minnehaha yesterday morning. Miss Carl is to open a studio in New York. She is a native of Memphis, but has lived in Paris for eight years.

"I was introduced to the Empress Dowager," said Miss Carl, "by Mr. Conger, then the American Minister at Peking. I was in Peking eleven months and painted four portraits of the aged ruler of China. I had almost daily sittings in the eleven months I was in the Chinese capital. I was treated most courteously, and the informality with which the first woman of China greeted me was very impressive. There was no ceremony, and I wish to say that the Dowager Empress is not a cold and cruel woman, but the very reverse. She did everything to make my stay pleasant.

"Intellectually the Dowager Empress is a remarkable woman and is wonderfully well versed in the Chinese classics. She leads the simple life, and is very different from the opinion that most foreigners seem to entertain of her. I learned to speak a little Chinese and this amused her Majesty very much. The Empress is a lovable woman, and my experience, I assure you, was most interesting."

FIREMAN HAD AN $800 CLOAK.

A Parisian Creation That One of La Lorraine's Men Carried Ashore.

Customs Inspector George L. Babcock was at La Lorraine's pier on Saturday night, when he saw a fireman from the steamer, Henri Herve, leaving the ship. Herve seemed to "bulge" suspiciously and was stopped. Underneath his sweater, about his waist, it is alleged, a valuable Parisian opera cloak was found. The garment is said to be one of the handsomest ever captured, and a score or more women who called at Commissioner Shields's office yesterday went into ecstasies over it. It is trimmed with real Irish lace and is lined with white satin and white chiffon. It has heavy and deep collar and cuffs of real ermine.

Commissioner Shields, before the Government experts arrived, sent a number of the women employes to view the wonderful Parisian creation. Miss Mable Hill, Judge Lacombe's secretary, first tried it on. Then Miss Welde, Marshal Henkel's secretary, took a look at it, and it went down the line of secretaries and stenographers. They all declared that it fitted them exactly, and all hoped that the sale would come along on some rainy day, when no rich women could venture out to bid on it.

Herve told the Commissioner that a woman passenger gave it to him to smuggle ashore. The officials are inclined to believe his story. The cloak is worth $800.

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE GAINS.

23,330 for the City, but Manhattan Shows a Falling Off of 472.

Compared with September, 1904, the public school attendance figures for last month, which have just been issued by the City Superintendent, show an increase in registration in all boroughs but Manhattan. This borough has 472 less children on her rolls this year than last. This is the first time in many years that Manhattan's school register has not increased, and the officials are at a loss to explain it. The large emigration from the lower east side to Brownsville, Brooklyn, is given as one explanation of the decrease.

Brooklyn has 9,462 more children on her school rolls than at this time last year, which has caused an increase in part time of 6,857. Richmond also shows a part-time increase of 132. The other boroughs show marked decreases in the number of pupils on part time. Manhattan has only 32,633, a decrease of 8,631; Queens has 4,448, a decrease of 1,865, and the Bronx 659, a decrease of 784. The total decrease in part time is 3,741.

In September, 1904, there was a total of 80,226 pupils on part time; now there are 76,485, a decrease of 3,741. For September, 1904, the average attendance was 493,998. For September this year the attendance was 517,328, an increase of 23,330.

BLOCK SOLD FOR $750,000.

In Central Park West, Between 62d and 63d Streets—Conried's Denial.

Heinrich Conried denied yesterday a report which associated his name with the purchase of a large plot of land in Central Park West—the block front between Sixty-second and Sixty-third Streets.

This property, which embraces about seventeen lots, was sold three weeks ago by the Unity Realty Company for about $750,000, and since then the identity of the real buyer has been a subject of much speculation.

The block front is one of the largest vacant parcels, close to Broadway, anywhere south of 110th Street. The Unity Realty Company bought it two years ago from a syndicate that had intended to erect on the property a large building to provide suitable quarters for playing the Spanish game of jai-alai. This project was abandoned.

French Deputy in Pistol Fight.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—Deputy Pugliesi Conti and M. Célestine Bosc, an unsuccessful candidate for election to the Chamber of Deputies, had an encounter to-day in the streets, during which a number of shots were exchanged. Nobody was hit. Both men were arrested. The encounter followed an electoral feud.

JOINT BOARD ON TARIFF IS BUELOW'S PROPOSAL

Baron Sternburg Returns to Negotiate for New Trade Treaty.

DENIAL OF HOSTILE MOTIVE

Desire to Increase, Not Restrict, Commercial Exchanges, Says the Chancellor—Changes Imperative.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—Baron Speck von Sternburg, the German Ambaseador to the United States, who sailed for New York on Oct. 25 from Bremen on the North German Lloyd steamship Kaiser Wilhelm II., will submit to President Roosevelt the proposals of the German Government for a new trade agreement between the United States and Germany. Prince von Bülow, among other things, said to-day:

"An idea, I suspect, is abroad in America, that the changes in the German tariffs and the modifying agreements with other European countries were in some way directed against the United States, and that Germany desired to damage the trade of the United States. This, I am glad to say, was never a motive with the German Government, and the proposals that are about to be made are designed to increase the exchanges between the two countries, and not to contract them.

"Each country has special aptitudes and products of which the other may avail itself, and yet maintain the revenue and protective systems adjusted to its individual situation. Germany is as little inclined to shape its commercial policy according to rigid dogma as the United States.

"A continuation of the present conditions unchanged is not possible, if only for the formal reason that our agreement of 1900 with the United States is founded expressly upon tariff duties, under the old commercial treaties with Austria-Hungary, Italy, Switzerland, Belgium, Servia, Roumania, and Russia. These duties, in consequence of our new tariff and our new commercial treaties, will be abolished at the end of February, 1906.

"The most expeditious means for furthering the work would be that ten men on both sides, having special acquaintance with customs and tariff matters, should meet for an open and frank interchange of views and friendly explanations."

MOVE TO REVIVE RECIPROCITY.

Western Beef Men Want Relief from German Tariff Measures.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—A strong movement is under way in the West to get Congress to re-enact Section 4 of the Dingley act, which has become inoperative by time limitation, under which John A. Kasson negotiated various reciprocity treaties. Not one of them was approved by the Senate. Ex-Senator Harris of Kansas, representing the National Live Stock Association and the American Reciprocal Tariff League, is in Washington to present the plan to the Administration.

CHINA HAS REAL ARMY.

Discipline of Troops at Manoeuvres Astonished Foreigners.

PEKING, Oct. 30.—The army manoeuvres, which have just been completed, greatly impressed foreigners, especially those acquainted with the condition of Chinese troops five years ago. The opinion expressed on all sides is that China has accomplished an absolutely marvelous feat in raising an army of 40,000 men to its present efficiency.

The foreign military attachés criticised the Generalship displayed—for instance, the absence of proper support for the artillery, which they thought was injudiciously placed—but they gave unstinted praise for the complete control of the troops and the steadiness of discipline exhibited, the latter bearing comparison with that of European troops.

An observer, while riding behind some of the troops lying in cover, noticed that not a man turned his head from his attention to his work. Complete subordination prevailed everywhere.

The scheme of the manoeuvres was the assumed invasion of Chihli, by a Southern force from Shantung, whose advance was opposed by the Northern army. Roughly estimated, 30,000 men were engaged. The final parade showed 20,000 infantry, 1,200 cavalry, 1,100 engineers, 1,300 artillery, and 120 field and mountain guns. The men's queues were tucked under their caps.

The infantry was armed with Mauser magazine rifles of the 1888 pattern with a short dagger bayonet, many having been made at the Hanyang arsenal. The cavalry was armed with Mauser carbines and swords. The men were mounted on Mongolian ponies, which, though small, were in good condition. The saddlery and accoutrements were bad and the men had no spurs. This is regarded by the military observers as the weakest branch of the army, being unsuitable for work as cavalry or mounted infantry.

The troops gave many evidences of Japanese training, and one attaché remarked that he had seen twenty Japanese in Chinese uniforms.

WILL QUESTION WALLACE.

Ex-Chief Engineer to Appear Before Panama Canal Board.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—The three committees formed out of the members of the Board of Consulting Engineers to make a special study of the lock canal, the sea-level canal, and the unit price for both have nearly completed their work, and a meeting of the full board will be held on Friday.

Mr. Wallace, the former Chief Engineer of the Isthmian Canal, will appear before the board on that day, and the members will have a chance to question him on any subject on which they desire further explanation. The appearance of Mr. Wallace before the board meets with the full approval of the Administration.

MORE ARRESTS NEAR IN SUIT CASE MYSTERY

Morris Nathan Tells All He Knows to Pittsburg Police.

Chorus Girl's Fiance to be Charged with Being Accessory—Will Waive Extradition.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURG, Oct. 30.—Morris Nathan, secretary of the manager of "The Shepherd King" Company, who is held here in connection with the murder of Susannah Geary, the Boston suit case victim, to-day told Thomas A. McQuaide, Superintendent of Detectives, of his relations with the girl previous to April, 1905, when she obtained a place in the chorus at Rocky Point, and he worked during the Summer at Nantasket.

When "The Shepherd King" Company assembled for rehearsals in August, they were both in that organization. When he left here on the night of Sept. 9, he directed her to a surgeon, whose name the Superintendent refuses to make public.

McQuaide says the case is now clear, and it only needs an arrest or two by the Boston police to settle the whole mystery.

Detectives Smith and McGarr of Boston are expected here in the morning, and the whole "Shepherd King" company will be summoned before Superintendent McQuaide to tell what they know. Two of the chorus girls—Rita Marie and Eleanor Barren—have given Superintendent McQuaide information of value, which has been communicated to the Boston police.

Nathan will return to Boston to-morrow without requisition papers. He is almost in a state of nervous collapse since his incarceration, and has not slept or eaten. The members of the company believe him to be innocent of complicity in the murder, and will aid him in every way possible.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Oct. 30.—No arrest had been made up to a late hour to-night in the suit case affair as the result of Nathan's confession. An inspector and a State police officer have been sent to Pittsburg to fetch Nathan, who will be charged with being an accessory before the fact.

The police this afternoon searched the office of a woman doctor on Tremont Street, where it is thought the operation on Susannah Geary may have been performed, but no arrest followed, and what, if anything, was learned is kept secret. A physician reported to be connected with that establishment is missing from the city, but his friends declare that his absence is due to another cause.

Capt. Hurley and Inspector Nelion of Cambridge had a long talk with Mrs. Geary, the dead girl's mother, and Miss Evelyn Geary to-day. Both maintained strongly that Nathan was innocent of murder.

The officers in going over with Mrs. Geary the movements of Nathan and the company which played a week in Lowell, followed by three days in Salem and three days in Lynn, learned that Nathan did not communicate with them during that time. Mrs. Geary went to Lynn on the Saturday night the company played there and saw Nathan. The latter told Mrs. Geary he did not know where Ethel was.

AMERIKA STEADY IN GALE.

Wireless Message Says Heavy Seas Leaves Her Decks Almost Dry.

This wireless message was received today from Capt. Sauermann of the new steamship Amerika, dated Oct. 26, at noon, south of Sable Island, which is 1,000 miles from Sandy Hook:

"The steamer has thus far encountered strong winds and heavy seas, in spite of which hers is very little motion, and hardly any spray taken on the forward decks.

"The passengers are exceedingly pleased with the excellent sea-going qualities of the Amerika, and all on board are well."

The Amerika, which has the greatest displacement of any craft afloat, is now making her first eastward voyage.

CHALLENGE TO MARCONI BY DE FOREST WIRELESS

American Manager Offers to Treble Distance Over Sea or Land

CRUISER'S FEAT A RECORD

Sharp Letter to Italian Says False Comparison Was Made—Messages Taken at 1,200 Miles.

Lee De Forest, Vice President of the American De Forest Wireless Telegraph Company, sent this letter to Signor Marconi, care of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company, yesterday:

"You are quoted in yesterday's New York papers as saying that the recent feat of receiving messages 1,100 miles from the President's cruiser West Virginia was not uncommon; and to back up your statement you cited the Lucania's receipt of wireless signals, when in mid-Atlantic, from both shores.

"You should know that the De Forest transmitting apparatus on board the West Virginia is not of high power, being but two kilowatts, while the messages received by the Cunarders are sent from Poldu and Cape Cod stations, of from twenty to fifty times that power. Yet a layman, unacquainted with electrical matters, would be led from your interview to believe that a fair comparison had been made between the unparalleled feat of small apparatus on the West Virginia and the distances attained from your enormous 'thunder factories.'

"The records recently made by the De Forest system on board ships equipped with but one kilowatt transmitters, however, may well be compared with any claimed for Marconi high-power stations. Last Friday night a message was received at New York from the steamship Havana, 1,030 miles south, direct and without delay. This boat carries a one-kilowatt transmitter. The same message was received at our Savannah station (of two kilowatt capacity) and transmitted thence to Cleveland. It is a common thing for Cleveland to read aerograms from one kilowatt transmitters on ships 100 and 200 miles at sea off Hatteras. Last week New York received several messages from the cruiser West Virginia, which was anchored off the mouth of the Mississippi, the 1,200 miles being almost entirely overland.

"Last Sunday night the United States Signal Corps at Fort Leavenworth, Kan., using De Forest receiving instruments, read a complete wireless message from the Concho, equipped with a one kilowatt De Forest transmitter, when that boat was off Key West 1,100 miles, two-thirds overland. Fort Leavenworth also interrupted messages from the West Virginia.

"Versed as you are in wireless telegraphy, no one knows better than yourself that these performances are absolutely without precedent or comparison in Europe.

"To the best of my information, the above-cited distances are from three to ten times greater than any covered by Marconi apparatus of similar power, on shipboard or on shore.

"In view of these established facts, and your apparent attempt to minimize the credit which all Americans can justly feel in the remarkable wireless work from the President's cruiser, I hereby publicly challenge you to demonstrate that vessels equipped with Marconi apparatus of like power can successfully transmit to stations using Marconi receivers, legible messages at any speed whatsoever, over distances one-half or one-third those negotiated by the apparatus on board the West Virginia, either over land or sea."

AMERICAN MALTING FIGHT.

Stockholders Organized to Oppose the Jenkins Reorganization.

That the plan for reorganizing the American Malting Company, proposed by the Jenkins committee, headed by John G. Jenkins, will be contested at the meeting of the stockholders on Nov. 9, was foreshadowed by a meeting held yesterday at the offices of Max Morgenstern, at 68 Broad Street, at which a committee was appointed to oppose the proposed plan of reorganization. A Stockholders' Protective Committee was appointed, including Mr. Morgenstern, John A. Stelcher, and J. S. Fay, Jr. This notice was sent out to the stockholders of the company:

The proposed plan of reorganization is unfair to both classes of stock. According to the annual report nearly 3 per cent. was earned on the preferred during the past fiscal year, though it was a bad year. Many large shareholders are opposed to the proposed plan of reorganization. We ask you not to deposit your stock with the Jenkins committee or surrender your proxy.

The opponents of the plan of readjustment believe that a more equitable plan can be devised than that proposed by the Jenkins committee, which provided for the surrender of old preferred stock for 62 per cent. of the new preferred. It is pointed out that the holders of the preferred are entitled to 42 per cent. of accrued dividends unpaid, which they will surrender or forfeit if they deposit their stock with the Jenkins committee.

UNIQUE MASONIC CEREMONY.

New York Masons Send a Trowel to Visit All Lodges in America.

A silver trowel, after being dedicated with elaborate ceremony in the presence of many members of the Masonic Order, was started on a long journey last evening. To Justice Lodge, No. 753, W. C. Glenn, Master, is due the conception of the idea, and before the trowel returns to that lodge it will have been used in every Masonic lodge in the United States. Its travels, which will be recorded in a bound volume which accompanies it, may occupy ten years. On its return it will be placed with the record of its travels in the archives of the Grand Lodge of the State of New York.

The ceremony, which took place in the Grand Lodge room in the Masonic Temple, was conducted by Frank Hurd Robinson, Grand Master. Nearly 1,000 Masons were in attendance. The Grand Master, Frank H. Robinson, was assisted by the officers of the Grand Lodge.

AN INSULTER JIU JITSUED.

He Winked at Miss Marten, and She Sent Him Sprawling.

Miss Emelie Marten, an athletic young woman living at East Elmhurst, L. I., applied the jiu jitsu system to an annoyer with decided effect yesterday. Miss Marten left a trolley car at the Flushing Road and started to walk to her home late in the afternoon. She had not gone far when she noticed that a man was following her. A few moments later the man passed her, and, turning around, he lifted his hat and winked one eye. The next instant he was up in the air and fell sprawling on his back.

Miss Marten had caught the man by the lapel of his coat with one hand, and with the other had seized one wrist, then with a quick twist she threw him. Several men saw the scuffle and they ran toward the young woman. The man picked himself up and tried to say something, only to go down a second time. That was enough for him, and he got up and took to his heels.

TEAM OWNERS COMBINE UNDER FEDERAL LAWS

Chicago Example Followed to Head Off a Strike.

ORR BUSINESS INCORPORATED

Other Employers Take Stock In His West Virginia Company — May Join Chicago Owners.

A move was announced yesterday by the New York Team Owners' Association which completely changes the situation in the strike of the Truck Drivers' Union against Thomas Orr for the closed shop. The strikers are out now not against Thomas Orr, but against the Inter-State Teaming Company, which has been incorporated under the laws of West Virginia and has taken charge of Mr. Orr's business. Mr. Orr will have a large share in the management of the new corporation, and will be protected against all financial loss arising from the strike.

To-day the ore trucks, instead of bearing his name will bear the name of the Inter-State Teaming Company. The organization of the company was contemplated a month ago, when the possibilities of a general strike of the truck drivers were discussed, and for the last week Henry C. Hunter, Secretary of the New York Team Owners' Association, has been working to perfect the organization. It was incorporated with a nominal capital of $5,000, which was increased yesterday to $100,000 at a special meeting of the New York Team Owners' Association. The money was subscribed in fifteen minutes. The list of Directors includes the names of the largest team owners in New York and New Jersey.

In this course the team owners here followed the plan adopted by the employers in the teamsters' strike in Chicago. When that strike was at its height the employers incorporated under the laws of West Virginia as the Employers' Teaming Company of Chicago. Blanket injunctions were then obtained from the Federal courts which prohibited the employment of pickets or interference of any kind with the men at work. That ended the strike.

The Inter-State Teaming Company, being a corporation and operating in more than one State, can follow the same course. This is not necessary at present, but the employers here want to be prepared. The new move of the employers removes the contest from the influence of local politics.

It was reported last evening that a movement was on foot for an affiliation between the Employers' Teaming Company of Chicago and the Inter-State Teaming Company. Thomas B. O'Connell, Secretary of the Chicago company, arrived here yesterday, and it is believed it is in reference to a proposed amalgamation of the two bodies.

BLANKENBURG ARRESTED.

Candidate on Weaver Ticket Is Accused of Libel.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—Rudolph Blankenburg, City Party candidate for City Commissioner, was arrested to-night on the charge of criminal libel preferred by Felix Isman, a real estate operator of this city, and the head of the Mint Realty Company. Mr. Blankenburg entered bail for a hearing Thursday.

The arrest grew out of a campaign speech made by Mr. Blankenburg last week.

It was intimated to-day by James Gay Gordon, special counsel for Mayor Weaver, that the report of Major Cassius E. Gillette and John Donald MacLennan, the expert engineers employed by the Mayor to investigate the filtration plant contracts, would be followed by additional prosecutions.

THERE is some difference in the quality of all Turkish Cigarettes. If you were to bring each different brand to me, I could show you by comparison with the Murad, in just what point they differ. Some are too strong; and some are too mild. The strength of the finest Turkish leaf used in has been so perfectly tempered by expert blending that it becomes an exquisite richness. So perfect again is this blending, that, while retaining all the body of the leaf, the Murad offers an unequaled mildness. The Murad really stands midway between extreme strength and mildness, and represents sixteen years' effort to reach just the right point. This point is fine quality, the distinctive character of the Murad.

WM. W. MACFARLAND, NOTED LAWYER, DEAD

He Was at One Time Candidate Ivins's Partner.

APPEARED IN FAMOUS CASES

He Was Recently Retained by President Paul Morton to Aid in Equitable Prosecutions.

William Wallace MacFarland, a former law partner of William M. Ivins, in the firm of Tracy, MacFarland, Boardman, Ivins & Platt, and one of the foremost lawyers in this city, died yesterday at his home, at Arrochar, S. I. He was counsel in many celebrated cases in his time, among them the suits against Jay Gould in behalf of the Erie Railway stockholders to recover $13,000,000; the suit in behalf of August Belmont growing out of the treasurership of the Fenian Fund, and the celebrated case of the prosecution of Dan Noble by the Royal Insurance Company. He was one of the founders of the Bar Association, and one of the few honorary members in this country of the Cobden Club of London.

Mr. MacFarland was born in Chenango County July 22, 1834. He soon became dissatisfied with farm life and set out for Hartford, Conn., where he went to work as salesman in a dry goods store. All his spare moments he devoted to reading Blackstone. Even before his admission to the bar he had established a local reputation for the lucidity which characterized legal papers which he drew up and because of his success in petty collection cases.

Young MacFarland made the acquaintance of Judge William D. Shipman of the United States District Court, and so favorably was Judge Shipman impressed with the young lawyer that he made him clerk of his court. MacFarland next became District Attorney of Hartford, and later entered into a partnership with former Gov. Hubbard of Connecticut. In 1869, at the death of Jeremiah Larocque, who had been one of the most brilliant lawyers of his time, Mr. MacFarland entered the firm of Bowdoin, Larocque & Barlow. After that Mr. MacFarland was connected with several leading legal firms in this city, among them MacFarland, Boardman & Platt; Tracy, MacFarland, Boardman & Platt, and Tracy, MacFarland, Boardman, Ivins & Platt.

Mr. MacFarland was always a commanding figure in court. His briefs were a marvel of clear and vigorous expression, and were often held up as models by the Judges to whom they were submitted.

In 1899 Mr. MacFarland was appointed by Gov. Roosevelt a Special Commissioner, with Austen G. Fox, to inquire into the canal contracts let under Superintendent of Public Works George W. Aldridge. He lately became counsel to Paul Morton, again with Austen G. Fox, to aid in any prosecution which Mr. Morton might wish to bring in the Equitable case.

Mr. MacFarland was intensely devoted to his profession, and saw in it not only a means of earning a livelihood, but an opportunity for intellectual combat with other strong minds, which he keenly enjoyed. Because he would not be denied this mental exercise he declined other honors, among them an appointment to a Judgeship of the Court of Appeals.

Mr. MacFarland was a life member of the Manhattan and Knickerbocker Clubs, and one of the original members of the Metropolitan Club.

Mr. MacFarland leaves a widow and two daughters, Mrs. Frank J. Lord and Miss Effie MacFarland.

LATEST CUSTOMS RULINGS.

Consul's Certification Makes Date of Exportation—Other Decisions.

In a decision by Judge Somerville the Board of United States General Appraisers yesterday overruled claims filed by John T. Bailey & Co. of Philadelphia. The dispute had to do with the legal date of exportation of merchandise, and the valuation to be placed upon the Indian rupee. The currency of the invoice being stated in the rupee, the board holds that the certification of the invoice by the United States Consul made Oct. 11, 1900, must be taken as conclusive evidence of the time of exportation, by virtue of Section 25 of the Tariff act of 1894, which expressly provides that the date of exportation and the actual shipment of the goods at an earlier date will be immaterial. With reference to the valuation to be placed upon the rupee, Judge Somerville holds that it must be estimated, in the case at bar, at 32.4 cents, as provided by circular of the Treasury Department of Oct. 1, 1900, and not at 20.8 cents, as provided for by the circular of July 1, 1900.

General Appraiser Sharretts wrote a decision sustaining the contention of Stern Brothers that certain imitation pearl strands are not dutiable at 60 per cent. as "jewelry." The board finds that the articles are properly assessable at 45 per cent. Protests by the H. B. Claflin Company and Louis Auerbach of New York were also sustained.

The board overruled these claims: Estate of C. B. Rouss, Lindon W. Bates, Hirschbach & Smith, Henry Small, Eulor & Robeson, C. B. Richard & Co., New York; G. W. Sheloon & Co., International Harvester Company, and Carson, Pirie, Scott & Co., Chicago; American Express Company, Boston; A. G. Spalding & Brothers, Chicago; Cuban-American Manufacturing Company, Tampa; the Thayer Dry Goods Company, Kansas City, Mo., and John Ginzel & Co., Detroit.

BUSINESS TROUBLES.

ALFRED GUGGENHEIMER.—A petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday against Alfred Guggenheimer, dealer in jewelry and novelties at 529 Broadway, by Adolph Strauss & Co., $733; Henry Rosenstein, $87, and Jacob Busch, $73. It was said that the alleged bankrupt had transferred property to certain creditors with intent to prefer them over other creditors. Alfred Roelker, Jr., was appointed receiver.

FRANK TONKS.—Frank Tonks, proprietor of restaurants at 6 Park Place and 22 to 26 West Houston Street, filed a petition in bankruptcy yesterday, with liabilities of $16,084 and assets of $1,508, consisting of real estate, $100; stock, $200; fixtures, $1,200, and cash, $8. The largest creditor is Helen Tonks, borrowed money, $5,900. Other members of the petitioner's family are creditors to the amount of $1,200. The petitioner holds leasea on the properties 6 Park Place and 22 to 26 West Houston Street, the value of which he does not know. George W. Alger was appointed receiver. Mr. Tonks began business in 1894 at 380 Canal Street.

The Gambler

From the "Cleveland Leader."

GLORY BE, she has done it again!

Who?

Katherine Cecil Thurston, author of that fascinating story, The Masquerader.

In Heaven's name, what has she done?

She has written THE novel of the year again.

What is it called?

The Gambler.

And why do you grow thus hysterical over it?

Because of its pull on the sympathies. When a woman in a book comes out of its pages and grips you like one in real life; when you get all a-tremble for fear she may do this thing and groan and moan because she does do that; when, in a word, she seems so real that your interest is personal and you worry over her, then there is every reason to exult. — Cleveland Leader.

"Bound to be the literary sensation of the hour."—N. Y. Sun.

"It deserves a wider and more enthusiastic circle of readers than The Masquerader. The reader is led from situation to situation with an unflagging eagerness to know 'what next?'"—N. Y. Times.

A History of Our Own Times

In these new volumes (IV. and V.) Justin McCarthy carries his admirable history to completion, from Queen Victoria's Diamond Jubilee to the accession of Edward VII. This is one of the very few histories that deserve a place also as literature. The author, widely known as a historian and scholar, is especially happy in his portraiture of the various statesmen, reformers, authors and scientists whose lives figure prominently in the times of which he writes.

"LIBERTY TO ALL THE LAND."

The "effacement" of the autocracy, "inviolability of person, freedom of conscience, speech, union, and association," no law to be enforced "without the approval of the State Douma," (House of Commons,) "real participation in the acts of the authorities appointed by" the Czar to be lodged with "the elected of the people"—these are the essential elements of the Constitution which "NICHOLAS the Second, by the Grace of GOD Emperor and Autocrat of All the Russias," has proclaimed. And this amazing proclamation he makes avowedly to save "the integrity and unity of our [his] empire," practically at the dictation of Count WITTE, as the indispensable condition on which the Count would take charge of the Government, and therefore as the sole means of restoring peace and order and the safe and regular course of daily existence for the millions of the Russian people.

On the face of it, the revolution is unprecedented. Never before has it been in the power of one man, the loyal subject of an absolute monarch, to demand such changes; never before has there been found a statesman ready to bring about at one stroke such tremendous changes. And, to the infinite credit of the Czar be it said, never before has a ruler with his prerogatives, with a past such as his, with such a training in absolutism, been willing to lend his authority, even under compulsion, to such changes. For it is plain that in principle here is the substantial surrender of au cracy. For the sovereign and undisput , uncontrolled will of one man is substituted the authority of the "elected of the people." And the elected of the people are to be chosen "so far as the limited time before the convocation of the Douma will permit," from "those classes of the population now completely deprived of electoral rights," while "the ultimate development of the electoral right in general" is to be left to "the newly established legislative order of things."

It does not lessen the real significance of this marvelous revolution that it will be physically and morally impossible fully to realize it in practice. The qualifying phrases occurring in the manifesto, and apparently inserted in it as an afterthought, are indications of the influences that will at once and persistently be brought to bear to prevent the application of the principles announced and to trouble Count WITTE and his associates in the administration of the new order of things. Nor can we possibly ignore the obvious fact that there is only a very small proportion of the Russian people who can know how to use the liberty won by them. From the very initiation of attempts at self-government there will be deception, intrigue, corruption, appeals to prejudice and selfish interests, and all the devices of a rotten Court applied to confuse and wreck the Government of the people. The most advanced republican nation in the world has experienced and at this moment is in a thousand ways experiencing the difficulties and defects of popular rule, which will be the greater and more troublesome in the ratio of the ignorance and backwardness of the people themselves. But back of all this lies the supreme fact that the most powerful, the most completely autocratic ruler of the modern world finds safety only in surrendering the autocratic principle and passing to his people the burden he cannot longer carry. It is a proclamation of the most solemn and, at the same time, of the most practical and concrete nature, that, difficult and risky as is popular representative government, it is the only one now possible, and must be better than the despotism that has failed.

That, from the start, has been the only reasonable answer to the critics of free government. Only in the earliest days, when popular rule was of necessity but a dream, did the dreamers imagine that it could be perfect. The moment it was put in practice on any considerable scale it suffered from the weaknesses and the vices of human nature, and from these in greater or less degree it must always suffer. But it remains proved, and the proof strengthens with the progress of time, that in popular government is on the whole the greatest safety and hope. And it is the lesson of history for at least two centuries that once popular government is set up in any substantial form, it grows steadily in force and ultimately in stability, so that in this sense there can be no turning back. So, we are convinced, will it prove, whatever troubles may arise, in the vast Empire of Russia.

THE ELECTION OF A MAYOR.

It is time for the property owners, the business men, and serious-minded voters to take thought concerning the political transaction in which they are at present engaged. On Tuesday next something over 600,000 voters will go to the polls and deposit the ballots indicating their choice for Mayor. It is a choice to be made between three candidates—Mr. MCCLELLAN, the regular Democratic nominee and present incumbent of the office; Mr. IVINS, the candidate of the Republican Party, and Mr. HEARST, candidate of the new organization calling itself the Municipal Ownership League. Which of these three candidates do the voters whose property interests, whose annual contribution to the tax fund, whose opportunity to earn an honest living through the gains of trade or by regular and well-paid labor is affected or influenced by the character of the municipal administration, believe would be the best Mayor of New York? That is a question to be answered next Tuesday, and it is a question which every voter should consider seriously and try to answer with intelligence.

Mayor MCCLELLAN we all know. The city has made a trial of his capacity. His fitness has been demonstrated. Everybody knows that he has made organization appointments which have been justly criticised. But his faithfulness to the public trust reposed in him, his energy in carrying out municipal undertakings, his insistence upon the performance of duty by those about him, and his independence of spirit and action have been recognized and are appreciated by those who have taken the trouble to gain their knowledge of him by accurate observation, not by hearsay and the parrot-like repetition of old slurs. Mr. MCCLELLAN has been a good Mayor, and every candid man knows it. He would be a better Mayor in his second term than he has been in his first—of that THE TIMES has no doubt. Mr. MCCLELLAN is not a demagogue, he is not an agitator, he will not as Mayor initiate new, dangerous, and revolutionary policies. Every taxpayer and property owner, every man who carries on a business or practices a profession in New York will know from day to day, from week to week, and from month to month just where Mayor MCCLELLAN stands upon the established principles that underlie human society in this Republic.

Mr. IVINS is altogether unique. Through his intimate and accurate knowledge of the machinery of the City Government he is doubtless the best-equipped man in New York for the office of Mayor. He is also about the most independent man in the city. No boss would have the hardihood to approach him, and should he be elected grafters of all sorts would have a very unhappy four years before them. But Mr. IVINS cannot be elected, his party does not intend to elect him, it has not treated him seriously as a candidate. He is making his canvass alone. It is the shameful fact that his organization is giving him no help. Therefore, while his election would be a cause of rejoicing, in the circumstances the vote cast for him is wasted.

Finally, there is Mr. HEARST. It is exceedingly difficult to speak temperately of his canvass. The very audacity of the man in putting himself forward as an aspirant for the chief place in the Government of the chief city of the United States is startling, and the fact, for it is now a fact admitted by everybody, that he is to have a large vote is simply shocking. The incapacity of Mr. HEARST for administering the affairs of this municipality is well understood by those who know much of him; the trouble is that there is a vast multitude of voters who know nothing of him or of any candidate. He has attracted to himself all the strange and uncouth part of the electorate, whose principles are past understanding and who are beyond the reach of appeal and of reason. Anarchists and Socialists and violent ranters against the existing order naturally flock to his standard. But beyond that it seems that a very considerable part of the wage-earning class has yielded to the strange delusion that Mr. HEARST is a fit man to be a Mayor of New York. Discontent has taken him for its candidate, and discontent it appears includes not merely those who are discontented with their lot—at a time when all labor is employed at high wages it would seem that there would not be much discontent of that class—but those who are disgusted with the insurance exposure, who have become convinced that Mr. LAWSON is an apostle of financial purity, who have become imbued with the spirit of sullen hostility to all wealth.

During the past four years wealth and property and their rights and interests have been under a pretty steady fire, and some of the guns have thundered forth from high and conspicuous emplacements. Many men of great fortunes, and those who are seeking great fortunes, have, it must be acknowledged, done what they could to swell the tide of popular dislike of great accumulations, insomuch that thousands of fairly intelligent citizens of this community doubtless believe that all fortunes have been brought together by processes allied to "graft." Mr. HEARST profits by the existence of this feeling. Without taking the trouble to inquire how his own fortune was amassed—indeed, without taking the trouble to make any inquiry at all about their candidate—men who have become hostile to or envious of every person in good circumstances are wearing the "Hearst button." This may mean much or little. For ourselves we have too much confidence in the native good sense of an American electorate to credit the wild stories about Mr. HEARST's great vote. But he is going to have a great many votes—far too many for the good of the city.

It therefore behooves every man who has any stake in the continuance of good administration and in guarantees of public security to do all that it is in his power to do this week to swell the vote of GEORGE B. MCCLELLAN for Mayor. The good name of the city, the pride of self-respecting New Yorkers, and the wish to avoid an example of hideous electoral folly should prompt the supporters of Mayor MCCLELLAN to labor diligently in his behalf during the few remaining days of the canvass. This is the time for respectable and self-respecting men to show that they have some sense of public duty, some willingness to make contributions of time and labor for the city's welfare. Conservatism is on trial.

PURIFYING THE SUFFRAGE.

Mr. Low and his companions in the association to prevent corrupt practices at elections have gone about their work in an intelligent manner by asking the candidates for the Legislature for information as well as for expressions of opinion. They have sent out four questions, relating first to the propriety of forbidding campaign contributions by corporations; second, as to detailed publication of accounts by candidates and committees; third, as to court procedure relative to contributions, and finally as to limitation of expenditures and defining those that are legitimate. After replies to these questions have been received and studied, a bill will be drawn up to be submitted to the Legislature in January, and it is understood that D CADY HERRICK will be Chairman of the committee for this purpose. No better man could be secured, and he will have able associates. The movement is heartily supported, not only in this city, but in other parts of the State, by such men as Mr. MARCUS T. HUN of Albany, Mr. ANDREW D. WHITE of Ithaca, Dr. SCHURMAN of Cornell, and Mr. ANSLEY WILCOX of Buffalo.

The time is certainly ripe for successful effort in the direction of purifying the suffrage and raising the standard of political life generally. So sound is the real sentiment of the people that the best means of accomplishing this end is the most thorough and detailed publicity. If this can be secured, the penalties provided by law are of minor consequence. The people will find an adequate remedy for themselves.

ADMIRAL TRAIN'S MISFORTUNE.

There is no occasion for any American to become excited over the misadventure of Admiral TRAIN. It by no means rises to the dignity of an "international incident." It does not even appear, though it is doubtless true, that the Chinese mob was actuated by "anti-foreign" feeling. An American automobilist might be similarly mobbed in a New England village, if he had run over one of the villagers, and the other villagers could catch him, though in such a case there would obviously be no international element.

Of course the slight injury to the Chinese woman, which we may be sure nobody regrets more than the Admiral himself, with the possible exception of the woman, was a pure accident. But at the same time we may regret that an Admiral of the United States Navy should go shooting when it appears that he cannot tell the difference between a Chinese woman and a Chinese pheasant. The confusion is not creditable to our boasted naval marksmanship.

When the Admiral has "squared" the woman by paying her doctor's bills, and the local Mandarin has apologized to the Admiral, the incident will without doubt be closed. But we can tell the Chinese Government that it is very lucky for them that it was an American and not a German Admiral that took the notion to go ostensibly Chinese pheasant, but really Chinese peasant shooting. Everybody remembers the extravagant amount of "water," including, in fact, the whole Shan-Tung Peninsula, that Germany put into the capitalization of two mere German missionaries. What would Germany have demanded if an actual German Admiral had been rolled in the mud? Nothing less than half the Flowery Kingdom would have wiped away that stain on the dignity of a proud empire.

SUNDAY CAMPAIGNING.

It is a very rare, if not a quite unprecedented, thing that a candidate for public office should be invited to pursue his campaign on Sunday, and in a church, in the City of New York. And yet, in the case of Mr. JEROME, nobody finds any incompatibility. The pastor of a church invites Mr. JEROME to occupy his pulpit of a Sunday. Mr. JEROME accepts the invitation. Nobody perceives any incongruity in the matter. It is received on all hands as an arrangement equally creditable to both parties. The fact is auspicious for Mr. JEROME and ominous for the machines which are his opponents. He took advantage of the occasion in an admirable manner and in perfect taste, dismissing for this occasion the quips and the personalities which enliven his week-day discourses in secular places, and making a plain and impressive statement of the principle involved.

It is on account of that principle that his canvass is so exceptional that it can be carried on in church without exciting any sense of incongruity. For the canvass is a concrete illustration of the idea of civic righteousness which every, even the most conservative, preacher feels himself at liberty to commend in the abstract. It is an appeal to the moral sense of the community as well as an appeal to that sense of political independence which has the force of a religious sentiment to many Americans who are by no means in complete sympathy with the religious organizations. Such an appeal to the moral sense of the community, if it be well taken and plainly put, has never yet failed to succeed. We are confident that it will not fail this time.

CITY OWNERSHIP EXAMPLE.

Considering the prominence of municipal ownership in this campaign, it is a pity—or a delight, according to the point of view—that the experiment New York is making with its municipal ferry does not start more auspiciously. Before the boats began running many old and efficient employés were discharged. Then the operation when begun left nearly everything to be desired. And Sunday there was a strike, or rather would have been a strike, if the demands had not been granted, to avoid tying up the entire service. However, it is promised that all will be well, next week, after election, in fact. We hope so, but as matters stand remark that things are not altered by altering their names. The Staten Islanders wanted and want better communications, not another name for their ferry.

Municipal ownership is not a conjurer's wand.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Sermon on the Equitable.

It is the greatest of pities that Dr. STIMSON did not, if he could, tell in greater detail the story about a conference between high insurance officials which formed such a remarkable part of his sermon on Sunday. And apparently he could have done it if he would, for had he learned the facts in circumstances which imposed any obligation of secrecy, of course he could not have revealed even as much as he did in regard to a scene which, if his informant described it accurately, deserves a very prominent place in the insurance history of the day. According to Dr. STIMSON, President ALEXANDER made his now famous attack on Mr. HYDE only after he had failed to secure the approval and assistance of those whom he invited to the conference in the execution of a plan vastly greater than that of transferring the control of the Equitable from one faction among its officers to another. What he wanted, we are asked to believe, was a moral reform in the methods and management of insurance companies in general—a reform of such a nature that the officers would no longer have to steer their great ships with compasses deflected by a huge mass of gold, exactly as real compasses are deflected by masses of iron. The financiers present, Dr. STIMSON said, were content with things as they were, and warned Mr. ALEXANDER that he was inviting personal ruin—which warning he scorned and proceeded to light the fuse which has since caused such a long series of reverberating and shattering explosions. This thrilling narrative, unfortunately, fits in considerably better with the first interpretations of the Alexander-Hyde controversy than with those which have since been forced into public acceptance by the revelations of the legislative inquiry. Now, as a matter of lamentable fact, it cannot be fitted in at all without more severe straining than any really good and interesting story ought to be subjected to, and one's interest somehow wanders from the tale itself to the identity of the man who told it to Dr. STIMSON. We all would like to know who he was—would like to know the names of those who were present at that strange conference, the speeches they made while it was in progress, and most especially how, if interviewed to-day, their versions would differ from that which reached the pastor of the Manhattan Congregational Church, and was by him transmitted to his flock. To be quite frank, the story had certain peculiarities of the "well found"—but not too well found—as distinguished from the "true," and the fear will arise that Dr. STIMSON was bewrayed by an artistic appreciation of the beautiful. For the anecdote certainly is beautiful.

Home News from Abroad.

A wise Britisher develops in The London Globe the pretty theory that the language talked by the inhabitants of the United States is not, as commonly and uncharitably supposed by Britishers less well informed, a perversion or corruption of English, but a new and separate language, standing by itself and worthy of study and judgment as such, like any other. And for the support of his pretty theory he has found and used a very pretty illustration of real Americanese. "When, for instance," he says, "we overhear such a conversation as 'Say, Mister, can you dahnce?' 'I can't now, but I useter could,' we are apt to wince unless we realize that we are listening to a foreign language." Here, now, is a man who knows us. Perhaps he wasn't in this country more than a few weeks—possibly he has never been here at all, and yet how well, how accurately he has put his finger on a characteristic locution! Never a one of us, now that the matter has been brought to our attention, can deny the constant employment of "useter could" or fail to recall that all his friends do it, too. Doubtless there are many more phrases of the same kind, and the wonder is that we did not long ago notice that there are enough of them to disprove the existence of anything more than a remote relation between English and the American tongue. We shall not ourselves hereafter say that we "useter could" do this or that without a clear knowledge that we are talking a language of our very own—which we useter hadn't. Thus are we again deeply indebted to The London Globe for that most valuable of possessions, self-realization. That paper is intensely interested in things American, and what it doesn't know about them it will soon learn. And then we will be all right, for a fact.

Messages That Go Too Far.

Evidently the people engaged in the transmission and receiving of "wireless" messages have not yet learned to regard them as possessing any such rights as an ordinary telegram has, for they do not all yet recognise that each of the queer things is somebody's private property, though they are all well aware of the fact that a round price is paid for the sending of each. A certain Miss MAMIE FISHER, for instance, while on a steamer that has just rounded the end of Florida, confidingly intrusts to the atmosphere the news that she will reach Galveston the following morning. Sbs intends it only for "ber folks," but some scientific army officers up in Leavenworth, Kan., find the news of Miss MAMIE's expectation ticking out of their receivers, and immediately they proceed to demonstrate the wonder of the new system by telling the reporters all about it. Then the message gets into the papers all over the country, as an interesting detail of the efforts to keep in constant communication with ths seafaring Presidents! But perhaps Miss MAMIE doesn't like to serve as an illustration of what can be done by the wireless people—perhaps when she sends a dispatch to her friends at home she prefers that they alone should get it and they alone give it such distribution as in their judgment it needs. But there—of course there will hs an end of all this as soon as the new system gets more familiar. Meanwhile, with experimenters in scores of places fishing in the air for any words they can catch, one can conceive that while Miss MAMIE will only be gently annoyed, other people may—have reason for excitement if their more important messages are to be captured and divulged in this free-hearted manner.

The Wooden Pavement.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Thirty years ago when the Nicholeon wooden pavement appeared in Brooklyn, C. Crozat Converse, the attorney, then residing there, on being offered the Secretaryship of a pavement company for the introduction of the Nicholeon pavement to our city authorities, refused it, pronouncing ths pavement defective, becauss it did not afford a foothold for horses. Hs then invented and patented a wooden pavement, the essential feature of his device being an intermediate strip of wood between every two rowe of blocks, the abrasion of this strip ever affording thie foothold, and the early laying of his pavement in Chicago, beginning with the space between the rails of the street railways there, established its efficiency.

As his patent died about fifteen years ago, after yielding him thoueande of dollare in royalty, THE TIMES ehould commend his invention to present city powers, who find that the wooden pavement as laid in Cortlandt, Liberty, and other city streets affords no foothold.

McClellan Republicans.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Saturday evening I was looking at the "yellow peril" poster depicting Hearst getting away from the bomb, when a gentleman who was also looking at it remarked: "I am a Republican, hut I am going to vote for Mr. McClellan, and I know a good many Republicans who are going to do the eame thing, for we are afraid that Hearst may slip in between the other two candidatee." Thie ie a nice thing for Republicans to do. They have for a good many years back tried to "slip in a candidate between the other two"; vide Rooseveit, Erhardt, Einstein, and others. Looks like a case of hiter bitten. C. W. H.

Would Petition Osborne to Withdraw.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Ae a possible means foward the accomplishment of an end devoutly to be desired in this political campaign, I suggest for your consideration and that of the leadere who are seeking ths retention in office of William Travers Jerome the idea of holding a public mase meeting, at which prominent citizens, independent of all affiliations, ehall epeak, and the eigning of a monster petition asking Mr. James W. Osborne to withdraw his candidacy for ths office of District Attorney in favor of Mr. Jerome. PUBLICIST.

New York, Oct. 29, 1905.

Will McClellan Vote for Jerome?

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I am very much inclined to vote for the retention of Mayor McClellan, hut I cannot do so unless I know what candidate he will support for District Attorney. If he is for "Jim" Osborne, that'e too much for me.

But is McClellan going to vote for Jerome? It will make a difference of 15,000 in hie own vote if he saye yes. GEORGE W. BLUNT.

A Suggestion.

From The Boston Tranecript.

If Bernard Shaw wants a ready made character for a new play he could not do better than adopt Mr. Anthony Comstock. Ths attitude Mr. Comstock has taken toward the latest Shaw play must make the playwright itch to do eomething with him or to him. And yet, as he turne the whole matter over in hie mind, he may reflect that Comstock does help to advertiee a thing and make it "good" from the box offics point of view. He might then, after thie reflection, decide to make him a passionate press agent and build a play around him; it would he easy for him to set the public to asking, after seeing the play, whether Shaw really and truly thought the preee agent a desirable member of eociety or only a necessary evil.

The Football of Fate.

From The Washington Star.

"You are always having more or lese trouble, aren't you?" said the sympathetic friend.

"You are mistaken," answered the Czar with hauteur. "We never have lece."

The Penalty.

From The Galveston Daily News.

Senator Platt of New York hae reached the age at which, if he talke, he is charged with the garrulity of old age, and if he is silent he is said to have loet hie mind.

Sunday Eggs.

From The St. Lonie Repnhlic.

The good women of the Bethel Presbytery of Harrodeburg, Ky., are going to give all the Sunday eggs laid by sacrilegious hens to the cause of foreign missions. Disputants interested in the tainted-money theory, please take notice.

MODERN PERILS OF THE DEEP.

"We are loet!" the Captain shouted
As he took the elevator,
For a storm had swept the vesse
All the way to the Equator.

"Now the telephone ie busted,
And the steam heat's swept away,
While the patent pianola
Only funeral hymns will play.

"Swimming tank is leaking badly,
And ths ice plant'e put to soak—
Cannot get our Wall Street prices,
For the wireless mast is broke.

"Manicure and masseur missing—
Open plumbing can't be found.
Printing presses all are broken,
And the incubator's drowned!

"Ship is just as good as ever,
Engines sound and working well—
But we're shy on several features
That become a good hotel.

"So we're lost," the Captain shouted
"It's a cinch we've got to drown."
Elevator boy then murmured
Opportunely, "Going down!"

OPEN THE CAMPAIGN BOOKS!

Let Each and Every Party Tell Where the Money Comes From.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

I have read with great interest the communication in to-day's issue signed "Ignoramus." I think it strikes the right key. Graft is the issue. Open the campaign books should he the immediate and universal demand on all parties.

A VOTER.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

"Ignoramus" strikes it right. Don't let go on them—Republican, Democratic, Municipal, or Socialist. Answer the question, Where did you get it? Open the hooks. HUGO PICK.

New York, Oct. 30, 1905.

Socialist Books Are Open.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The books of the Socialist Party do not have to he opened, because they never have been closed. From the very beginning of our movement it has been the uniform practice of the Socialist Party to publish, through the party preee, full and detailed reports of all receipts for its campaign and other regular and special funds. Also twice a year we publish a full report showing how these funds have been expended.

During the present campaign the Socialist Party of this city has published its campaign fund report weekly in The Worker and The Volkszeitung, its English and German organs. I would gladly furnish you with copies for republication should desire it. But I am sure you would not find space for it. Although the total amount is less than $4,000, the lists would probably fill half a page in your smallest type, for the reason that nearly the whole amount has come in small sums—nickels, dimes, quarters, some dollars, a few fives, still fewer tens—mostly collected in shops and workingmen's meeting places, with a few donations from trade unions and other workingmen's societies. It would he safe to say that this $4,000 represents the contributions of at least 10,000 individuals. ALGERNON LEE.

ACT NOW, SAYS BELMONT.

Wants Immediate Action with Regard to Corrupt Practices.

Perry Belmont, who drew up the Corrupt Practices bill which was before the Legislature at ths session of last Winter, said yesterday that he considered that the movement headed by ex-Mayor Low for such legislation next Winter was entitled to hearty support. He offered a few suggestions, the most pertinsnt of which was that ths present campaign be included in the scope of the proposed reform. Mr. Belmont said:

"Any organization headed hy ex-Mayor Low is entitled to respectful consideration. I have written to the three candidates for Mayor, and their responses warrant the belief that they will favor the proposed legislation.

"It appears to he tbe intention of the gentlemen forming this organization to wait until the meeting of the Albany Legislature and have their bill ready hy the 1st of January. It may be pointed out, however, that there is a most fruitful field for immediate action during the present campaign in this city. All the contending parties and organizations in the pending municipal campaign are receiving and expending very large sums, the source of which is unknown and the disposition of which is unaccounted for. These amounts may not be as large as are disbursed during Presidential campaigns, hut they are undoubtedly excessive, and it would throw a very practical light upon the necessity of the proposed legislation to obtain as a result of pledges exacted during tbe pendency of the present campaign a detailed statement of the campaign receipts and expenditures of the municipal candidates and their responsible committees.

"I know of a certain candidate in this election who has received many contributions, some of them under the pledge of secrecy. Undoubtedly the individual, in the absence of any law requiring publicity, may bs considered as having a certain right to ask that his contribution be kept secret, but the very absence of a legal requirement for publicity in contributions and expenditures hy political committees has brought about ths present absurd condition and furnishes the basis for false views upon the subject.

"Those who find no merit in the publicity laws adopted in other States and especially those of Massachusetts and of Missouri, which are operative and effectual, claim that this individual has an inherent right of secrecy in regard to his contribution to his party or political organization, and that it is no one's business how campaign funds are either contributed or expended. This view disregards the fact that political organizations are recognized hy law and are subject to the regulation of law.

"In the State of New York political managers while held to rigid accountability by law in many essential respects, yet in the important matter of the receipt and expenditure of money are subjected to no supervision whatever.

"Candidates under the law of New York have already an accountability to ths public. The law requires publicity in regard to the amount of their expenditures, but the source and purpose of such expenditures should also be, as in other States, subject to the same publicity."

TO COST $1,000 A VOLUME.

Suit Discloses Plan to Publish Costly Reproductions of Paintings.

In a suit brought yesterday in the Supreme Court by Charles Ls Barbisr, as attorney for William A. Cooper, the fact developed that certain persons had arranged to publish photogravuree of various paintings now in the galleries of New York'e art collectors. Thers were to have heen fifteen volumes, to he sold at $1,000 a volume.

Cooper asked the court for a permanent injunction restraining William G. Gray and Maud Hegger from disposing of certain photographs or carbon copies of paintings made under the terms of a contract which Cooper had entered into with Merrill & Baker, the puhlishers.

Cooper asserts that he made a contract with Merrill & Baker to make photographic negatives of pictures which were to be reproduced in a work to he edited hy John La Farge. Among the paintings so photographed, he declares, were paintings in the art galleries of George Vanderhilt, T. M. Davis of Newport, Perry Belmont, George Gould, A. A. Pope, the late John Hay, Senator Lodge, Sir William Van Horne, Mrs. Jack Gardner, P. A. B. Widener, and the late William L. Elkins. The plaintiff adds that he employed Gray to make carhon prints from the negativee and that "Gray did appropriate to his own use carhon prints on glass."

Cooper also charges that Gray sold many carbon prints of Millet's "The Sower," a picture valued at $25,000, to the defendants, who did business under the name of "Hegger," at 288 Fifth Avenue, and to Fischel, Adler & Schwartz of 313 Fifth Avenue.

They, with the other persone named, were ordered by Justice McCall to show cause why a permanent injunction should not issue Thursday morning. In the meantime the court granted a temporary injunction.

McLANDBURGH WILSON.

CABINET PUT ON RACK BY KEEP COMMITTEE

Astounded at Questions Asked by Subordinate Inquisitors.

PRESIDENT DICTATED SOME

One Member Admits He Was Flustered—A Few of the Queries That Jarred Him.

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Members of the Cabinet have something besides the President's recent muzzling order to worry them now. Ths Kesp Committee has started in to call tbe members of the Cahinet to the stand and put them through the third degree on departmental administration. By arrangement, no member of the Cabinet knows long beforehand just when hs will be called.

Ths members of the Keep Committee are all subordinates of the various Cabinet members whom they examine, and it is said that the questions they put would sound impertinent, if not insuhordinate, were it not for a tacit understanding that some of them, and enough to leaven the whole series, were dictated by the President.

It is certain that those members of the Cabinet who have thus far appeared before the committee have expressed surprise at the character of the questions put to them hy the young men who constitute the Keep Committee. If the thing were a joke they would relish it, but the whole transaction is in dead earnest. Not a single committeeman has been known to crack a smile during any of tbe hearings when their official chiefs were being interrogated.

A member of the Cabinet said to-day that he was astonished at the kind of questions put to him. Here are some of them:

How old ars you? Are your Bureau and Division Chiefs older or younger than you are?

How do you communicate with your subordinates? How often do you see them? Do you hold conferences with two or more of your subordinates? Do you hold such conferences often? Do you hold them regularly? Do you have anything like a Cabinet meeting junior in your department?

Do you find women make good clerks? Ought women to he advanced to the position of Bureau Chief or Division Chief?

In signing up your mail each day how many letters are purely red tape? What portion could he dispensed with for the improvement of the service?

Is there any particular ceremony or regulation or order about your Bureau Chiefs getting access to you on public business?

Do your subordinates keep you fully informed as to all details of public business in their control? Can they conceal from you facts that you ought to know? Is there any part of the department over which you preside whose business you do not understand? Would it be an advantage to the country and to public business if your department were cut in two and another department created?

"I could not begin," said the member of the Cahinet who had these questions put to him, "to tell you how I answered. I confess that I hardly remember how I got through my examination. I don't know yet whether I passed or not, or what my marks were."

The Secretary of the Interior in a recent letter to the President said he was convinced that defects existed in tbe organization and business methods of a number of the hureaus connected with his department, and suggested himself that the matter bs referred to the Keep Commission for investigation.

Ths President has requested the commission to enter upon the investigation at its earliest convenience, and that special attention be given to ths methods of business employed in tbe general and local land offices, the offices of Surveyors General, the Reclamation Service, and the Indian Service.

FAVOR GOOD ROADS PLAN.

Farmers and Automobilists Hope $50,000,000 Amendment Will Be Adopted.

One of ths most important Constitutional amendments to be voted upon at the coming election is that which provides for the bonding of the State to the extent of $50,000,000 for good roads. The proposed amendment is generally regarded as a sop to the agricultural element of the State to allay their resentment over the adoption of the amendment which provided for the issuance of honds to the extent of $101,000,000 to improve the canals. It is very much desired by up-Stats Repuhlican leaders.

The farmers, as a rule, favor the good roads proposition, hut they are not a unit as to the manner in which the money appropriated for good roads should he expended. In the session of 1905 there were repeated attacks on the Highie-Armstrong Good Roads act, and attempts were made to repeal it. The opponents of the law, although favoring good roads, did not believe that the law gave everybody a equare deal. They said that the contractors got too much and the taxpayers too little.

Automohilists are strongly in favor of the good roads honding proposition. They have been among the active agitators for road improvement for the last two years. The farmers expect to get considerable support for the amendment in the cities through the influence of automohile manufacturers and owners.

NEW FIRE INSURANCE PLAN.

The Real Estate Owners' Company to Classify Its Risks.

The Real Estate Owners' Fire Insurance Company of New York was incorporated on Oct. 25, and held the first meeting of its Board of Directore yesterday. These officrs were elected: H. A. C. Anderson, President; P. B. Armstrong, Vice President; William C. Pratt, Secretary.

Ths business will be conducted on a profit-sharing basis, wherehy ths real estate owners will receive 75 per cent. of the underwriting profit, and the remainder of ths profit, togsther with all interest received from invested funds, will be paid to the stockholders. The company will confine itself to two classes of risks, designated as "A" and "B," in which neither the loss nor the expenss of ons class is chargeable to the other. Class "A" will be confined exclusively to brick, stone, and iron buildings, occupied for non-hazardous purposes. Class "B" will be confined to propertries protected with automatic sprinklers, which will include both buildings and contents.

POSTER ORDINANCE A LAW.

Mayor McClellan Approves the "Public Morality" Measure.

Mayor McClellan approved yesterday the "public morality" ordinance which seeks to regulate bill posting. It says:

No person shall post any placard, poster, bill, or picture of any show, exhibition, theatrical or other performance, in or on any building [illegible] or upon any public place in the City of New York which shall be of lewd, indecent, immoral, immodest, vulgar, or suggestive character, calculated to debauch the public or shock the sense of decency or propriety.

The penalty for violation of the ordinance is fixed at "not less than [illegible] more than fifty dollars fine or by imprisonment in the city prison or [illegible] such imprisonment not to exceed [illegible] days."

The ordinance does not say by whom the objectionable advertisements are to be judged, so it will be another duty added to the regular work of the police.

SHAW'S PLAY UNFIT; THE CRITICS UNANIMOUS

Police Called to Handle Crush at "Mrs. Warren's Profession."

McADOO SAT IN A BOX

Thinks Shaw Wise in Putting Play in Unpleasant List—Comstock May Get Warrants To-day.

Crowds began struggling to get into the Garrick Theatre as early as 6:30 o'clock last evening to see the first performance in this city of George Bernard Shaw's play, "Mrs. Warren's Profession," by the Arnold Daly Company. When the curtain went up there was not a vacant seat in the house, and as many as the management would allow to do so stood back of the rail. Between 2,000 and 3,000 persons had been turned away at the door. Extra police were ordered out to handle the crowd.

It was an audience that had paid for its seats, and many of the typical first-nighters were absent. Knowing that the demand would be great, the speculators got to work early. As much as $30 each was paid for orchestra seats and $5 was the prevailing price for the top gallery. The tickets were eagerly snapped up at these prices.

Dense crowds thronged Thirty-fifth Street between Fifth and Sixth Avenues from 6:30 to 8:30 o'clock, and when those who had tickets began to file in, it was almost impossible for a carriage to force its way to the curb in front of the building. There were as many women as men in the throng. Several policemen were on duty in the lobby and street, but they were powerless to keep the crowds moving.

A slim young man stood in the street and bawled out at intervals: "I have the only unsold ticket for this show in New York, ladies and gentlemen, but I won't have it long."

"How much?" yelled a dozen voices at each announcement.

"Only fifteen dollars?" replied the young man.

He did not seem to have any competitors; and after a time his voice was silenced. He probably got the fifteen. Three policemen in the lobby took turns in declaring to the crowds:

"There ain't no tickets; there ain't no seats on sale; there ain't no admission nor no standin' room on'y."

When the policemen got tired, the man in the box office stopped counting money long enough to emphasize their remarks. He counted money with exasperating coolness, and wrapped up dozens of parcels of it with red strips of paper, on which were printed the inscription, "$100."

McAdoo Saw the Play.

One feature of the audience was the presence of a number of young girls. This fact was commented upon by Police Commissioner McAdoo as he stood watching the theatre squad take care of the crowd that poured out of the house and got into the waiting carriages that stood for a block in each direction in Thirty-fifth Street.

Mr. McAdoo saw the play from start to finish. He occupied one of the upper boxes on the right-hand side of the house. Inspector Brooks was there, too, and so were several of the Headquarters staff. Two of these, at the instance of the Commissioner, went back on the stage after the play was over and Mr. Daly showed them the original prompt book of the play and the cuts he had made in the original business and dialogue.

Anthony Comstock was not in the theatre, but it was said by the management that he had two of his agents there who would make a report to him this morning. It was said that these agents would apply for warrants to-day, and that an effort would be made to have the show stopped to-night. This information came from the management, but how they got it they would not say. It was said for Mr. Daly that he was prepared to meet any of these attacks, and would argue the matter out in court if such a proceeding became necessary.

Many Young Girls There.

Police Commissioner McAdoo refused to say anything when he came down stairs after the third act. When the play was over he said:

"I will not say now what I will do, if anything. It appears to me, however, that this is not the usual first night audience at a New York theatre. Most of these people came in their own carriages, and it looks like an opera first night. I don't think that this is a good test of trying it on the dog. The dog in this instance is rather high bred, and the ordinary run of dog may have different ideas." Then looking over the crowd, Mr. McAdoo said:

"Remarkable, isn't it, what a lot of young girls there were in the house to-night? It was also rather interesting for me to find out that there were Raines law hotels in Budapest and several other places on the Continent.

"At least Mr. Shaw is frank when he puts this play in his book among his 'plays unpleasant.' Mr. Daly sent for me to come back on the stage, but I sent word that I couldn't see him this evening."

Mr. Daly's Speech.

At the end of the third act, in response to repeated calls, Mr. Daly came before the curtain. He said:

"So much has been said—too much has been said—about 'Mrs. Warren's Profession,' so that I do not intend to go into an ethical discussion as to its fitness or purpose, further than to say that, in my opinion, we should be able to face the problems of life when we attain our majority, and willingly cast off illusions and youthful legends to do our day's work. But I also believe that the person who attempts to disillusionize a child, or to take from them their legends—as of Santa Claus and our revered Washington and his little hatchet—is a brutal and conscienceless destroyer of all that youth owes us. We have many theatres devoted to plays appealing to the romanticist or child. New York has even provided a hippodrome for such. Surely there should be room in New York for at least one theatre devoted to Truth, however disagreeable Truth may appear.

"If public opinion forces this theatre to close and this play to be withdrawn it will be a sad commentary indeed upon twentieth century so-called civilization and our enlightened new country."

It was said at the box office last night that nearly every seat in the house for the week has been sold. Should the play be stopped the money will be refunded.

The Audience Polled.

At the door last night the agents of The New York World gave every one who went in this card:

> In your opinion is "Mrs. Warren's Profession" a play fit to be presented on the American stage?
>
> Erase one { FIT. / UNFIT.
> This card will be collected as you leave the theatre.

According to The World's poll, there were 963 persons in the theatre and 576 voted. Of these 304 voted "Fit" and 272 "Unfit."

PLAY STUPID AND VICIOUS.

A Performance About as Elevating as a Post-Mortem.

Sir George Crofts	Fred Tyler
Mr. Preed	George Farren
Rev. Samuel Gardner	John Findlay
Frank Gardner	Arnold Daly
Mrs. Warren	Miss Mary Shaw
Miss Vivie Warren	Miss Chrystal Herne

Arnold Daly has made a serious mistake. "Mrs. Warren's Profession," whatever its merits or demerits as a play for the closet, or as an exposition of the author's views upon a sociological question, has absolutely no place in a theatre before a mixed assemblage such as witnessed it at the Garrick last night. The post-mortem and the clinic undoubtedly have their place as utilities of scientific investigation. But they would lose their value if permitted to become subjects of general and morbid curiosity.

"Mrs. Warren's Profession," as an acted play, bears about the same relation to the drama that the post-mortem bears to the science of which it is a part. Mr. Shaw takes a subject, decayed and reeking, and analyzes it for the edification of those whose unhealthy tastes find satisfaction in morbific suggestion.

As a play to be read by a limited number of persons capable of understanding its significance, of estimating Mr. Shaw and his themes at their full value, and of discounting them through their personal knowledge of him and their general knowledge of the life he seeks to portray, it undoubtedly has a place. But as a play to be acted before a miscellaneous assemblage, it cannot be accepted.

If there had been any doubt upon that subject it was dispelled after seeing the performance last night. "Mrs. Warren's Profession" is not only of vicious tendency in its exposition, but it is also depressingly stupid. And those who would be likely to condone the first fault will find it extremely difficult to forgive the latter. Lines that impressed themselves upon the mind as one read the play, and whole passages that impressed one in the reading as examples of Mr. Shaw's brilliant capacity for argumentation, when delivered by the actors became simply long, dry, tedious shallows of nugatory talk. The fact that the dialogue had been pruned to some extent was hardly apparent in the actual effect of the representation. The whole thesis involving Mr. Shaw's value as a moralist, of "Mrs. Warren's Profession" as a moral treatise, becomes ridiculous in the consideration of it as acted drama.

As it stood revealed last night, it was neither drama nor moral. It failed to qualify as the one primarily by reason that in its writing no attempt has been made to mould it to any sort of form suggestive of a play to be acted, beyond the fact that it is divided into scenes and its dialogue is framed in the familiar manner of the theatrical manuscript. It failed to qualify as the other by reason of the fact, first, that its lesson, if any, is not conveyed in such a way that it is readily received by an audience; second, by reason of the fact that the audience which had assembled to see it was not prepared to recognize or accept any lesson.

In these matters there is always this element of the audience to be taken into consideration, and here it is that Mr. Shaw in his larger way, and Mr. Daly in his lesser one, have failed to take account of the conditions that exist, that up to the present have always existed, and will probably continue to exist. The persons in the Garrick Theatre last night represented an average theatre assemblage. There was so far as could be determined no preponderance of any one class such as might have been expected under the circumstances.

It was, on the other hand, an audience of average intelligence and of average quality. But when it laughed—and the laughs were few enough—one had the uncomfortable feeling that it was a moment that might better justify tears, and when it applauded one knew that the sentiment would have been more properly met with silence or some show of disapprobation.

While we do not admit that Mr. Shaw's works are as inscrutable or triple-plated with meanings as some of his critics would have us believe, and while there is every reason for attributing much credit to his magnificent powers of mentality, and while we feel that tragic seriousness, not wilful flippancy, may be the motive for his work, we must exclude Mrs. Warren from our theatre—reject her, as a moral derelict. She is of no use to us as a lesson or a study.

When she becomes a subject for laughter and amusement, as occurred last night, she is something more than useless—she is vicious. She may serve a purpose when we are free to ponder over her under our own vine and fig tree, without the uncomfortable conviction that others, not, perhaps, so earnest as we, are gaining a certain amount of unholy enjoyment from the utter profundity of the horror.

In the acting of the chief rôle there was exactly the overemphasis of its more repugnant features that might have been expected. Mary Shaw, an artist of broad experience and undoubted ability, has been successful in the theatre exactly in proportion to her knowledge of theatrical needs. In playing such a rôle as Mrs. Warren she approaches it primarily from the point of view of the actress who knows when and how to get her effects. As a result we find Mrs. Warren depicted from the very outset in the broadest tints.

Miss Shaw lays on her colors too heavily, and the result is that, while giving us a portrait of a person who undoubtedly has existed and unfortunately does exist, she fails to impress us as reproducing the particular type that Mr. Shaw has in mind. Mrs. Warren's exact status would have been at once patent to her daughter and to every one else had she been the sort of person shown to us by Mary Shaw.

Viewed merely as an exhibition of theatrical characterization, however, Miss Shaw's performance justifies a share of appreciative comment. She reflected to an astonishingly offensive, natural degree the abandoned creatures after whom she has evidently modeled her study. It is not the creature of the text, but it is true to the type it seeks to reproduce, so true in fact that it contributes to the generally revolting picture another and a nauseating quality. But, though it was for the most part highly colorful acting, it was acting of a most uneven character. As an artistic achievement it did not approximate her performance in "Ghosts."

Mr. Daly's fault in the exploitation of "Mrs. Warren," however misguided it may have proved itself to be, can in no wise be laid at the door of personal vanity as regards the hope of distinguishing himself in the rôle of Frank Gardner, for it is a part about which he can have had no beforehand delusions. He is perhaps the more to be pitied—that his aim in producing it was so single. There are only two possible exculpating reasons for the acting presentation of the play—a blind, unreasoning desire to revolutionize the moral state-of-being, or else a wholly unnatural and somewhat disgraceful attempt to win much tainted notoriety. Personally we believe Mr. Daly has simply made the error of attaching to this work of Mr. Shaw's an artistically dramatic value which it does not possess.

Of the actors in the cast, Chrystal Herne, though temperamentally opposed to the rôle of Vivie, and generally unable to realize it, had occasional impressive moments, and the others acted as well as could be expected under the circumstances.

CRITICS' VERDICT HOSTILE.

Opinions of the Newspapers, by Which Daly Said He Would Abide.

From The Herald.

"The lid" was lifted by Mr. Arnold Daly and "the limit" of stage indecency reached last night in the Garrick Theatre in the performance of one of George Bernard Shaw's "unpleasant comedies" called "Mrs. Warren's Profession"—a profession, by the way, which is the occupation of a certain class of female harpies.

"The limit of indecency" may seem pretty strong words, but they are justified by the fact that the play is morally rotten. It makes no difference that some of the lines may have been omitted and others toned down—there was superabundance of foulness left.

The whole story of the play, the atmosphere surrounding it, the incidents, the personalities of the characters are wholly immoral and degenerate. The only way successfully to expurgate "Mrs. Warren's Profession" is to cut the whole play out. You cannot have a clean pig sty. The play is an insult to decency because—

It defends immorality.

It glorifies prostitution.

It pictures children and parents living in calm observance of most unholy relations.

And, worst of all, it countenances the most revolting form of degeneracy by flippantly discussing the marriage of brother and sister, father and daughter, and makes one supposedly moral character of the play, a young girl, declare that choice of shame, instead of poverty, is eminently right. If New York's sense of shame is not aroused to hot indignation at this theatrical insult, it is indeed in a sad plight.

From The Sun.

All New York will now discuss the hitherto unspeakable—race suicide is for the moment back numbered.

The opening act was all but over before people seemed convinced that nothing would happen to make Mr. McAdoo pull the joint. There was none of the languorous enticement of "Sapho," never a touch of the suggestion of "Orange Blossoms." Except from the advertising of mistaken Comstockers, the occasion would probably have been rather a funeral—with no flowers.

At the end of an hour many an aspiring "rubberneck" must have felt that the poverty of those on the sidewalk was more blessed than that of a mendicant friar. And this was not due to the cuts which Mr. Daly has made in the text. Nothing worse was sacrificed than Miss Warren's Scotch and her cigar, while one really objectionable passage, in which her young lover makes eyes at Mrs. Warren and is kissed by her, received all possible prominence.

The play is, in fact, little more than the dramatization of a tract on the social evil.

From The Tribune.

What the verdict should be the performance last night left no doubt. Advertised as the play has been by the most glaring and exciting methods, bearing the ban of two censors—the royal play reader of England and the Mayor of New Haven—decried as indecent by those who knew and (most loudly, perhaps,) by those who did not, the audience which entered the theatre last night was not of the kind properly to appreciate the serious drift of the drama, and before such an audience it should never have been presented. Such will be the audiences of the next week, if the performances go on, and the continuation of "Mrs. Warren's Profession" before them can do no possible good to anybody. It is an affront to decency and a blot on the theatre. Mr. Daly owes it to his profession and the public to remove the drama from the boards.

From The World.

"Mrs. Warren's Profession" from any point of view which it may be judged is a frank, brutal, and wholly nasty justification of prostitution. The question that presents itself, however, is not so much one of good morals as of good taste. Bernard Shaw has portrayed with rarest fidelity and minutest detail a form of social ulcer the existence of which is perfectly well known to all persons. But the theatre is not the place for its exhibition. It belongs to the moral clinics.

From The American.

"Mrs. Warren's Profession" is an intellectual and unnecessary but cold-blooded discussion of a pestilential issue.

It is an effort to set before unthinking men and women, by means of the footlights, the putrefaction of social life. It is illuminated gangrene. It is the suppuration of a plague spot. It is undoubtedly a true picture, but it is the sort of picture that few want to look at, and that many should not be allowed to look at—on the stage.

From The Press.

In sight of one of the most representative audiences New York has seen in many years the "red light" was bung high, and the Drama, that the other week was honored in Westminster Abbey, was dedicated formally to the glorification of the "Scarlet Woman."

Many doubtful points were settled to general satisfaction. No doubt was left that in "Mrs. Warren's Profession" Shaw has written his best play. The plot held every auditor, there was directness in every spoken line. The play was well staged, and on the whole well acted.

SUNSHINE IN "MOONSHINE."

Marie Cahill Pleases Big House in New Musical Play.

The still, small confidential voice that calls Miss Marie Cahill its ample tenement returned to amuse New Yorkers last evening at the Liberty Theatre, where the cacophany that wraps the Rogers Brothers as a cloak gave way before a big house, to an unclassified entertainment that from an unpromising beginning found its way to a rather merry conclusion.

Edwin Milton Royle, author of "The Squaw Man," collaborated in the book with George V. Hobart, than whom is no more industrious manufacturer of words for actor persons to speak and sing up "on top of the stage," while Silvio Hein, a sort of musical Locbinvar, furnished the music.

In "Moonshine," for so the piece is called, the plot survives the incidentals rather better than in most musical plays of the moment, and perhaps it deserves to, since it gives Miss Cahill and her capable and occasionally clever company an opportunity for such diverting nonsense. He who would expound the plot of a musical comedy is first cousin to him who would explain a joke.

Suffice it to say, therefore, that Miss Cahill appears as an ex-Secret Service Agent who utilizes her detective ability to save the reputation of the man she loves. But be not anxious—she does it smilingly, and you smile with her.

It wouldn't be accurate to say that the book of "Moonshine" puts the laurels of Mr. W. S. Gilbert in peril, but, on the other hand, it is rather superior to the goods usually put on the market by the well-known libretto factory of H. B. Smith, Glen McDonough, and other word-makers.

Several of the lyrics are dainty and tuneful, while others were apparently written under the impression that a lyric is anything that can be sung if you try hard enough. On the whole, though, Mr. Hein's music is a creditable effort, a bit above the level of mere jingles. Miss Cahill's singing of "Robinson Crusoe," "Don't Be What You Ain't," "Conjure Man," and "Foolish," was of the sort that only she can do, though, truth to tell, there is no "Nancy Brown" in the piece.

No musical comedienne on our stage furnishes more satisfactory amusement to intelligent people than Miss Cahill, and she was at her best last evening on several occasions. Her description of a Suburban in which the principal contestants were thoroughbreds called Jaundice, Bad News, and Rag Time elicited roars of laughter, as also did the doings of George Beban, who insisted on looking like Napoleon Bonaparte.

He earned all the applause he got. As that much-abused stage figure, a juvenile member of the British nobility, Dick Temple managed in some fashion to be attractively débonnaire and graceful. But the best is saved for the last—there is not tenor love song in the piece. In fact, there is considerable sunshine in "Moonshine."

MANTELL AS RICHELIEU.

Mr. Brady's Second Week's Offering at the Garden.

At the Garden Theatre last night William A. Brady presented Robert B. Mantell in another of the rôles made already more or less illustrious by the late Sir Henry Irving. The play was Bulwer Lytton's "Richelieu," and to tell the honest truth Mr. Mantell made no contemptible figure as the Cardinal Duke. There were times when his rendering of the part was excellently effective, and that especially in those droppings into the plain (if sometimes cynical) truth which relieve the large bow-wow style of the main declamation. As these are the only places in the famous piece where the human element shows at all strongly they have frequently on the best lips been the most telling speeches. Much of the bow-wow (for that matter) was well read, and a house of agreeable size and every appearance of intelligence was manifestly not altogether disappointed.

There was plentiful applause—some quite spontaneous—and Mr. Mantell was called before the curtain and made a little speech quite in Sir Henry Irving's manner and almost in his customary words. The remaining parts were, it must be confessed, rather wooden—with the exception of Joseph the Capuchin, very well played by Giles Shine, and François, the page, rendered with real enthusiasm by Devore Parmer. King Louis (Franklin Bendtsen) was, on the whole, the woodenest. Marie Booth Russell, as Julie de Mortemar, was a handsome figure of woman. Her stature and style of dress rather suggested Mrs. Patrick Campbell. Emily Dodd, as Marion de Lorme, was equally handsome and rather more flexible. The whole performance, after all is said, must be allowed to reflect credit upon Mr. Brady, and may be trusted to provide a very pleasant evening's entertainment.

ANDRE MESSAGER'S "VERONIQUE" PLEASES

MUSIC DELICATE AND FLUENT

Brought to This Country After Two Years in London—A Good Company of English Singers.

Florestan de Vallancourt	Lawrence Rea
M. Loustot	Aubrey Fitzgerald
Seraphin	Ralph Nairn
M. Coquenard	John Le Hay
Ermerance, Countess de Champ Azur	Miss Lena Maitland
Agatha, Mme. Coquenard	Miss Kitty Gordon
Aunt Benoit	Miss Emmie Santer
Denise	Miss Valli-Valli
Helene de Solanges	Miss Ruth Vincent

It might be a little difficult to determine whether Mr. André Messager's comic opera "Véronique," after its two years of success in London, is more an English or a French piece. Mr. Messager is and has been active as a composer, a conductor, and a manager in London, and his comic opera has received some violent maltreatment at the hands of its English adapters. And its English players manage to get an effect that is tremendously English. But whatever its present nationality, "Véronique" is charming.

It was produced at the Broadway Theatre last evening for the first time in this country, having been brought over here with the English company that has been playing and singing it for so long in London. They and the work itself seem to have grown together so as to fit each other like a glove, and the performance is in many respects a very smooth one; it will be smoother when the New York orchestral players become a little more familiar with the characteristics of the music. Mr. Messager himself conducted the performance last evening.

The story is a pretty one of a young noblewoman, Helène de Solanges, who has been betrothed to a young nobleman in the French fashion, "sight unseen"; the young nobleman, Florestan de Valliancourt, has been amusing himself with the pretty wife of a Parisian florist, who has a large staff of uncommonly pretty salesgirls. To satisfy herself in regard to him, Helène takes employment in the shop as Véronique, and induces her duenna and aunt to do the same, whereupon she immediately falls in love with the young man and be with her without knowing who she is.

The proper solution of this complication is duly brought about in the course of three acts—that really have some action and some consistent development. There are, certainly, some arid spots in them, in which some very conventional and well-worn devices are used to fill up the time. And the English adapters, as has been observed, have produced some awkward and commonplace lines in dialogues and lyrics.

But Mr. Messager's music gives charm and vivacity and variety wherever it has the chance. It is full of flowing melody and sprightliness. It characterizes the situations. It is not always of the highest originality and not all the tunes will haunt the memory.

But such distinction and facile grace, such delicacy and certainty of touch, such fine musicianship, are grateful to the ears wearied of the commonplaces and vulgarities that have done duty so long on Broadway as the substance of "comic opera." The score is well written for the voices. The choruses are spirited and effective, especially those which open the first and second acts.

There are a number of pretty songs and duets, and some captivating dances. Mr. Messager has scored his music with much taste and skill. The orchestration has finesse and delicate effects of color; it is full of instrumental touches that set off and beautify the whole effect—touches of the sort that give pleasurable surprise. The effect is on the whole one of gayety and sparkle.

Miss Ruth Vincent is an embodiment of archness and humorous grace in her impersonation of Véronique. She is of the winsome English type to look at, and sings with an agreeable voice and nice taste. Miss Kitty Gordon, with a voice of much less beauty, make an attractive figure as the florist's flirtatious wife. Not much can be said of the voice of Lawrence Rea, who takes the part of Florestan, but he acts it with intelligence and ardor.

The central figure among the men is John Le Hay, who has a genuine comic vein, and makes of the florist Coquenard an extremely amusing personage. Unctuous is an abused word, but it is rightly applied to his action and his delivery. A somewhat elaborate form of humor is exemplified by Aubrey Fitzgerald as M. Loustot, a nobleman reduced by too much attention to "slow horses and quick ladies," to the position of a bailiff.

The chorus of girls is attractive to the eye and the ear alike, and the costuming of the piece, which belongs to the period of 1840 in France, is quaint and pretty.

The reception of "Véronique," which is a true comic opera on lines that have been sadly lost sight of in recent years, was enthusiastic. The audience was large and somewhat cool at first, but it was soon interested.

"THE MERCHANT OF VENICE."

Mr. Sothern and Miss Marlowe Revive the Shakespearean Comedy.

At the Knickerbocker Theatre last evening E. H. Sothern and Julia Marlowe appeared in "The Merchant of Venice" before a large audience, which apparently appreciated to the full the rich stage pictures provided in this production and the acting of the two principals in the familiar Shakespeare comedy. The performance will be reviewed in THE TIMES to-morrow.

The Ben Greet company began its season at Mendessohn Hall last evening with a performance of "Henry V.," in the Elizabethan manner. The Game and the Candle

By Frances Davidge

Is the crime committed in this book murder?

This question results from a tale of New York society. From drawing rooms we are transported to the roughest West; thence to the South; and finally, in the last pages, we face the problem which the author has solved so boldly, Is it murder? Is it justice? Or is it fate?

Kipling

Many writers have attempted stories based upon the navigation of the air. Rudyard Kipling, in the November McClure's, with the practical methods for which he is famous, simply takes a trip with the night mail packet from London to Quebec in eight hours, and describes what happens. As you read it, it is hard to believe that this is not the actual, technical language of the hardy crew which guides this swift vessel through the air at the rate of a mile every sixteen seconds.

BATTLEAXE STOPPED; AND CURLY JIM WON

Whitney Colt, at Odds On, Was Beaten a Head by Outsider.

HANDZARRA TOOK THE STAKE

Filly Was One of Four Favorites Successful at Jamaica—Druid First All the Way.

Promising as prospective winner to such a degree that he carried the burden of public confidence in addition to the top weight, Battleaxe once more disappointed at the Jamaica track yesterday, when he failed to live out even the shortest distance that two-year-olds have been required to run at the meeting. As the strongest favorite that started in the course of the afternoon, Battleaxe, with the prestige he earned when he won an important stake at the Saratoga Summer meeting now much tarnished, began to stop in the final furlong of the five and a half furlongs race, and in the final jump let up the long-chance outsider Curley Jim, which beat him a head on the post, in one of the most aggravating finishes that betting racegoers have witnessed this Fall.

At odds on, Battleaxe broke out of the crowd the moment the barrier was raised in the fifth race and galloped easily in the lead to the turn into the short stretch, with Curly Jim, a 15 to 1 chance, the only one of the field of six anywhere near him. On the straight, Battleaxe, as usual, gave it up when Curly Jim went after him, and though Curly Jim was under the whip for nearly all the last furlong, while the favorite seemed much the better horse, Battleaxe was beaten once more. In losing the race Battleaxe also lost his place in the Harry Payne Whitney stable, for it was decided to sell him by auction, at a date still to be fixed, in the course of the races at the Aqueduct track.

The one other favorite to fail the betting crowd in the course of the afternoon was Incantation in the six furlongs handicap, first on the card, she starting as the best backed of the nine that ran. Incantation broke best of the lot, but was outrun from the first jump by the fast filly Druid, which slipped to the front in the first strides, and holding the lead for the remainder of the distance, won ridden out from Zeala, which closed at the end and beat Incantation for the place.

In the four other races, backers and the form followers had plain sailing, as the post choices were first in all these.

For the stake feature of the card, the Richmond Handicap, with nine horses running, Handzarra started a positive choice over Aeronaut, and justified the betting by jumping to the front at the start and winning all the way. At the end she was hard ridden to keep her place in the lead, Race King, which closed from far back in the crowd, forcing her to do her best in the last half furlong, while the two-year-old Hermitage, well up all the way, was a close third. AUTO ECONOMY TEST BEGUN.

Machines Filled with Passengers in Run to Philadelphia.

Nine automobiles, ranging from the eight-horse power Oldsmobile to the twenty-four-horse power Frayer-Miller touring car, started yesterday morning in the first day's run of the week's economy tour that is being held under the auspices of the New York Motor Club. The start was made from the Smith & Mabley garage, Broadway and Fifty-sixth Street, and the run was to Philadelphia, ninety miles, by way of Staten Island, Perth Amboy, New Brunswick, and Trenton. The Frayer-Miller car, driven by Lee Frayer, was the first to leave shortly after 8:30 o'clock, but all got away before 10 o'clock.

Every car was filled with passengers, including the sixteen-horse power Reobus. The total weight carried by this car was 1,698 pounds. The wheels are equipped with 3½-inch tires, but as the roads to Philadelphia are good it is believed he big omnibus will have no difficulty in completing the trip. Whether it will be so successful in the run to-morrow to Albany has occasioned some speculation among automobilists.

The cars will remain in Philadelphia until this morning, when the return trip will be made. To-morrow and Thursday the run will be to Albany and back, and on Friday and Saturday the cars will go to Southampton and return. The total number of miles to be traveled during the week is 682.

A strict economical watch will be kept on each car, the cost of the gasoline, lubricating oil, all repairs, and even stops for whatever cause being carefully noted. Prizes are to be awarded to the cars making the best economical showing, and the one burning the least gasoline will receive a special prize. An economical automobile run of such length and under rules so strictly drawn has never been attempted before. The competing cars and passengers are:

Frayer-Miller, 24 horse power, driven by Lee Frayer; passengers, E. S. Williams, H. H. Knepper, R. Atkinson, and J. P. Walker.

Marmon, 20 horse power, driven by A. L. Lergenson; passengers, O. H. Slacer, Theodore Schultz, and C. Levine.

Red omnibus, 16 horse power, driven by R. L. Lockwood; passengers, C. H. Croft, Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Curry, Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Enders, R. H. Montgomery, Mrs. Leary, John C. Wetmore, and Mrs. Hodgdon.

Red runabout, 8 horse power, driven by C. C. Singer; passengers, J. C. Cochrane, F. O. Edwards, and R. M. Owen.

Compound, 15-20 horse power, driven by D. F. Graham; passengers, A. E. Schwartz, A. Lazzaro, J. L. Alexander, and F. X. Brown.

Compound, 15-20 horse power, driven by F. C. Carter; passengers, R. D. Palmer, S. F. Gallaher, V. M. Coyne, and H. Kelly.

Compound, 15-20 horse power, driven by C. P. Hatch; passengers, George A. Banker, Mrs. C. P. Hatch, and J. W. Hatch.

Oldsmobile, 8 horse power, driven by F. Munroe; passengers, W. C. Hancock, W. H. Harrison, and T. Gleason.

Wayne, 20 horse power, driven by A. L. Kull; passengers, E. G. Ferguson, F. Gremmell, J. G. Moore, and A. F. Comacho.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—Nine automobiles of moderate power and moderate cost started this morning from New York to this city on the first loop of a six-day test. Eight of the nine finished in good order, and with records of economy which astonished the board of judges who sat at the Hotel Walton to-night and received the reports of the official observers. C. H. MACKAY STUD DEPARTS.

Entire Breeding Establishment Shipped to New Home in Kentucky.

The thoroughbred horse breeding establishment, founded only two yeaors ago by Clarence H. Mackay and installed then on the Silver Brook Stud farm, near Red Bank, N. J., and near the old Monmouth Park race course, yesterday was shipped as a whole to Kentucky, where the stallions and mares are to be quartered for the future on the Kingston Stud Farm, near Lexington. The movement was one of the biggest that has taken place in recent years, all the horses, with their stud manager, the grooms and farm hands and the private equipment of the stud going on a single train, which was sent out as a special over the Pennsylvania Railroad. The train was made up of ten horse cars, a baggage car and a single private car for the use of Charles Hill, stud manager, and his family. The horses, sixty head in all, with their score of attendants, were loaded on the train in the forenoon, and the journey to the new home of the Mackay stud was begun early in the day, the schedule on which the train is to run being such that the stock will be unloaded at Lexington this evening.

The most noted horses of the big shipment were the successful sire Meddler, for which Mr. Mackay paid $60,000 at the dispersal of the William C. Whitney stud, and the stout race horse and promising sire Banastar, which, in Mr. Mackay's colors, and trained by his present stud manager, Charles Hill, won the Metropolitan Handicap after having won a Brooklyn Handicap for a previous owner, the late W. H. Clark. The best known of the brood mares in the shipment were Trigger and Kamara, both of which raced successfully for Mr. Mackay.

The movement to Kentucky of his breeding interests was made by Mr. Mackay in the belief that he would meet with more success in Kentucky than was possible at the New Jersey farm, which he had leased from L. O. Appleby. After the lease was made Mr. Appleby sold the farm to W. S. Fanshawe, who intended the place as a breeding farm for his son, whose recent death changed all the plans formed by the father.

It was stated a week ago that the yearlings of James R. Keene's stable would be wintered at Silver Brook, but this Trainer James Rowe yesterday said was an error, as he has arranged to winter at his regular quarters at the Sheepshead Bay track, and will break and try his yearlings there.

Columbia Rowing Cost Over $11,000.

Manager Walter E. F. Bradley of last year's Columbia 'Varsity crew has made public his report for the season of 1905. The statement shows a balance in the treasury of $86.91, as against 84 cents a year ago. The total receipts were $11,224.62. Of this amount $4,675 was contributed by graduates and $1,881.48 by undergraduates. The freshman subscriptions were $2,068.91. The largest item of expense is set down as the salary of the coach, which is placed at $2,500. The cost of the training table and quarters is given at $2,214.17. The sum of $1,464 was spent for new shells.

FOOTBALL WORK LIGHT AMONG LEADING TEAMS

Practice Will Be More Strenuous To-day for Saturday's Games.

COLUMBIA MEN A BIT STIFF

Harvard's Captain Returns to Active Work—Yale's Defense to be Stronger—Cornell Worried.

Practice as a rule was light among the big football elevens yesterday, the coaches evidently being of the opinion that another day's rest after the hard struggles on Saturday would put the players in a better position to indulge in more strenuous work for the games scheduled next Saturday. All the Columbia men did yesterday was to indulge in a walk. At New Haven the Yale team showed the effects of the game with West Point, and consequently very little work was performed. But, beginning to-day, the wearers of the blue will be put in shape to make their best stand against Columbia next Saturday.

Columbia's football warriors rested yesterday, the men not doing anything more than walking. They were a bit stiff after the hard game with Princeton, but no one was seriously injured in that contest. To-day the players will probably run through signals, but it is unlikely that there will be any scrimmage work. In fact, there will be little or no scrimmage practice during the remainder of the week.

After an absence from practice of nearly a month and a half on account of a bad thigh, Dan Hurley, Captain of the Harvard football eleven, yesterday returned to active work on Soldiers' Field. He took no part in the scrimmage, but got into signal practice and showed that he is again in fighting trim. Another veteran cripple who returned after a long absence yesterday was Beaton Squires, right tackle. Singularly enough, his reappearance is simultaneous with the retirement, on account of injuries, of Dan Knowlton, the All-America tackle in 1903, who has been playing his place during his absence. Knowlton has water on his knee as a result of a bad strain in the Brown game Saturday, and will be out of things for two weeks. Nesmith broke a bone in his leg Saturday, and will be out of the games probably for the rest of the season.

The West Point game wearied Yale's team badly, and yesterday there was only the lightest work for the Blue players. Flanders, Tripp, and Bigelow were the only veterans in their places in the secret half. In the open half the 'Varsity scored a touchdown easily on the scrubs. This is Columbia game week, and Yale will spend every minute stiffening up the defense. The two weak places in the line are right tackle and left guard, although neither of these will see new men. Heffelfinger, the 1891 guard, is due to-day, and he will put his time in showing the line how to stop a play through centre. Metcalf, the 1903 half back, was a new coach at the field yesterday.

Through necessity the Princeton coaches were compelled to resort to a novel idea of training yesterday afternoon which did not prove so acceptable to the squad. Because of the fact that the 'Varsity training quarters were burned to the ground Friday night the players found themselves in the cold. They were taken down to the field in buses, but after the practice the coaches made the men run back to the gymnasium, a distance of three-quarters of a mile, for fear of catching cold if they rode through the streets in their heated condition. The work was the lightest of the season, as no scrimmage was allowed, and the players simply ran through signals.

The Army team had light work yesterday afternoon, but expects to settle down to something more serious to-morrow. The men are stiff and sore from Saturday's game. The first team men simply ran through the signals in their ordinary trousers and football shoes. The men who did not play Saturday had harder practice. The second squad is getting ready for their game Wednesday with the Cornwall Preparatory School. All the first team are out of the hospital ready for work. The players will devote their attention to defensive work in the future. They will not be allowed to carry the ball any more until they show themselves capable of stopping the rushing of the second team.

Some of the Navy football cripples were on the field in uniform yesterday afternoon, while others came out but did not put on football clothes. Half Back Bernard went in the scrimmage and Spencer was in football togs, but limped badly and did not get in the game. Capt. Howard also did not get in the scrimmage, as his shoulder is not yet strong. Douglass, Doherty, and Welch were on the side lines. Charles Gould, ex-Captain and end of Yale, was an addition to the coaching staff. No score was made in twenty minutes of fierce work against the scrub, the first team being drilled mainly on defensive tactics.

Coach Warner told the Cornell football men yesterday that they would have to hustle to beat Columbia this year, let alone Princeton. He had just returned from seeing the Columbia-Princeton game at New York. Cornell plays Princeton on Nov. 11 and Columbia a week later. All around, the day was one of the most discouraging of the year. Full Back Halliday, the strongest man in the back field, went to the infirmary sick. After a preliminary formation practice the 'Varsity went up against the freshmen for a scrimmage and got the worst of the argument, being scored upon by the first year eleven. Next Saturday's game with Swarthmore is causing much worry.

With high hopes of defeating Harvard next Saturday the Carlisle Indians began the week's practice yesterday afternoon in the best condition they have been in this season. They were not dispirited over their defeat by Pennsylvania. The practice was lengthy and the first part of it consisted of kicking and signal work for the four practice teams that were out. Assistant Coach Kinney worked the line for speedy starting, and showed the men several new ways of passing the ball. At the usual time for scrimmage work the first eleven was excused from duty and the second and third elevens lined up for thirty minutes. Their scrimmages were fierce in intensity.

"TOM" THORP AT VIRGINIA.

Columbia's ex-Captain Played on "Scrub" in Yesterday's Practice.

Special to The New York Times.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va., Oct. 30.—University of Virginia football stock took a jump to-day when there appeared on Lambeth Field this afternoon a new applicant for the 'Varsity team in the person of "Tom" Thorp, ex-Captain of the present Columbia University eleven, New York City. Thorp, it will be recalled, was dropped from Columbia because he failed to conform to certain Faculty rules regarding the passing of three conditional examinations.

From New York he went to Cornell, but because they would not grant him advanced standing there he came on to Virginia, where he will enter the engineering department.

Thorp played at right guard on the scrub eleven this afternoon and tore great holes in the opposing line. His appearance on the gridiron attracted a crowd to the field and served to put new life in the practice of the 'Varsity. The crowd in the bleachers cheered as if a match game were in progress. One touchdown was scored by the 'Varsity. The squad remained on the field until dark.

Rutgers Prep. School Bars Football.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Oct. 30.—On account of the many accidents football players have met with here this season, the football game on Saturday between the Rutgers Preparatory Academy and the Mount Pleasant Military Academy was the last game that the former school will play this season.

Dr. Eliot H. Payson, the Rutgers Preparatory School Headmaster, on last Friday delivered a very strong address on football, in which he stated that he would not allow any more games to be played by the school. He stated that there is more and more resentment against this sport every day.

DUFFEY ANGERS ATHLETES.

Not Willing to Rest Under Stigma Sprinter Has Put Upon Them.

That the Duffey sensation merited the characterization of James E. Sullivan that it was the most startling confession ever made in athletics, is being more clearly demonstrated by every day that passes. The Amateur Athletic Union officials are being deluged by demands from all parts of the country for the summary punishment of the self-confessed trickster, but by far the larger interest is being displayed in the charges Duffey makes, rather than in his own misdoings. His personal side of it is of small importance compared with the question of whether or not athletics "reeks with rottenness," as the sprinter says, and all those who have the interest of the game at heart are eager that the statement that the pure amateur is the exception rather than the rule shall be probed to the bottom.

There are few of those who have made the closest study of sporting conditions who will for a moment accept Duffey's statement of the case. All of them say that they knew of isolated instances where men are probably deriving pecuniary benefit from their athletic participation in an indirect way that does not admit of the offenses being fastened upon them, but that in the main the athletes in sport are bona fide and above all subterfuge and unfair practice. That the whole fabric of the sport should be tainted by the wholesale accusations of this malpractitioner is bitterly resented. If anything could emphasize the necessity of a change of rule to increase the authority of those in command so that all shady athletes might be summarily disbarred upon suspicious circumstances, this one incident will do it. At once the objection is made that increased power means an increase in the chances that partisan interests will favor those with influence at court. This must be met by the adoption of some such plan as the "supreme court" of athletics proposed recently. The power must be vested in men who are so far above the possibility of question that their very names shall guarantee their integrity.

As to the investigations, what form they will take has not been determined. The first step will be an inquiry into all Duffey's transactions. After this is finished, some idea of how to proceed further will be formed.

As for the prosecution of Duffey, Bartow S. Weeks, who has occupied the position of virtual legal adviser of the Amateur Athletic Union, said yesterday: "As to the advisability of proceeding against Duffey, I do not care to speak, as I am on the board which must decide the question and do not wish to be put in the position of anticipating its actions. As to the possibility of proceeding I will say I certainly think there is ground for action and reason to believe that it could be successfully prosecuted.

"There are two possibilities. Civil action could be brought to recover all prizes and medals unfairly won. I am satisfied this could be done on the strength of the confession Duffey has made. Whether the prizes would be actually forthcoming or not is another question, but I believe a judgment could be obtained.

"As to any criminal action, more specific evidence would have to be secured before Duffey could be reached on that line. If he obtained articles of value under false pretense he can be prosecuted criminally, but there will have to be evidence submitted of such a character as to show that such was the case. What evidence we can secure must determine what course we will pursue in that matter.

"The question of whether or not we can recover at law, or secure the punishment of the deception practiced against us, is a very different one from the question whether or not it is advisable to do it."

LOCAL SCRIBES WON AT GOLF.

New York Newspaper Club Defeated New England, 7 Matches to 3.

The New York Newspaper Golf Club yesterday defeated the New England Press Golf Association in the third annual contest over the Fox Hills Golf Club course by a score of 7 matches to 3. The team match was played in the afternoon, the morning being devoted to a qualifying round for the individual newspaper championship of the East, and W. C. Freeman of the American, Jason Rogers of the New York Globe, W. W. Harris of the New York Telegram, and F. P. Sands of The Meriden (Conn.) Journal will meet to-day for the semi-final and final rounds.

The local players also held a handicap event, in which more than two-score newspaper golf players competed. The best score of the day was made by A. G. Lockwood of the Boston Journal in his match with W. C. Freeman of the American, his card of 77 nearly equalling the amateur record of the course. Summary of the intercity team match:

Notes of the Thoroughbreds.

The Stewards of the Jamaica meeting have added one other to the remarkable list of suspicious races under investigation, and are making inquiry into the circumstances attending the race run by R. E. Watkins's filly Swell Girl, ridden by Martin, when she was beaten by Communs in the last event of Saturday's programme. None of the officials would state yesterday what had been found or what action would be taken in the matter. The Stewards also have under advisement the cases of Jockeys Davis, beaten on Ormonde's Right, and Shaw, beaten on Dreamer, aside from the several instances where jockeys have been reprimanded for bad or ill-judged riding in the two weeks that the meeting has been in progress.

Suspicion that a "ringer" had found entry to a Jamaica race took the Stewards at Jamaica into the paddock yesterday while examination of a horse, entered as Cataract, bay gelding, three years old, by Niagara-Cheriotte, with M. L. Mitchell named as owner and M. Steel as trainer, was in progress. It was asserted that the horse was not registered with The Jockey Club as required under the rules, and as that in itself made the animal ineligible to run, he was ordered withdrawn from the sixth race. The Stewards still were not satisfied, and the horse was held in the paddock after the races, while horsemen were requested to look him over and if possible identify him. No light has been thrown on the animal's identity as yet.

The racing stable owned by Harry Payne Whitney will weed out a number of horses that have not raced well enough to satisfy the owner that they are worthy of being retained in his establishment, and in addition to Battleaxe, which has been a source of much disappointment to Mr. Whitney, Midas, Commune, and Israfel, all winners, and Vanguard, still a maiden, will be offered at auction. The date for the sale has not been fixed, but the offering will be made some time in the course of the Aqueduct meeting.

W. A. Porter, agent for S. S. Brown, made the statement at the Jamaica track that Capt. Brown, who has been a chief figure in the American Turf Association in its fight with the Western Turf Congress, had decided that he would not permit himself to be used to aid Edward Corrigan in his personal fight on the Western Congress, but would withdraw from the contention and permit the rival racing bodies to do their own battling. Capt. Brown went into the American Association in good faith, and in the early part of last season gave all the help in his power to the new body, in the belief that be was working for the good of the turf. He is not satisfied, however, to continue a fight which seems to have resolved into a conflict between Edward Corrigan and John Condon, with utter disregard of the interests of racing in the West.

Roycroft, entered in the last race at Jamaica yesterday by J. G. Lyman to sell for $500, was bid up to $1,205, at which price he was bought in by his owner. Roycroft and Geranium recently were bought by Owner Lyman from T. C. McDowell for a price said to be $6,000.

A reduction sale by the stable racing in the name of Sydney Paget, with horses in the main bred on the J. B. Haggin farms, has been announced for Saturday, Nov. 11, at the Aqueduct track. The horses catalogued, nineteen in number, include the Carter Handicap winner, Ormonde's Right, Zeala, sister to Waterboy, the stake winner Belle Strome, and the big two-year-old winner Jacobite.

Douglas Grand, who imported the yearling filly by Melton-Dainty, half sister to the winner Santa Catalina, owned by H. T. Oxnard, has sold the filly to Mr. Oxnard on private terms.

Jockey Miller for the sixth day in the course of the Jamaica meeting rode two winners yesterday, his total of winning mounts at the track being fourteen. Miller's winners yesterday were Curly Jim, at 15 to 1, and Roycroft, at 7 to 2.

AMERICA'S CUP RACES UNDER THE NEW RULES

New York Yacht Club Ready to Change the Conditions.

UNIVERSAL RULE CONFERENCE

Delegates Will Be Sent to England to Secure Uniform Regulations for International Contests.

The meeting of the Long Island Yacht Racing Association, held at the Hotel Astor last evening, while in itself unimportant and perfunctory, developed much of interest to yachtsmen throughout the country. The President of the association, Oliver E. Cromwell, and Chairman of the Regatta Committee of the New York Yacht Club, made the statement that in his opinion the next America's Cup race would be held under the new measurement rule, which differs from the old rule in that it places a premium on displacement and tends to produce a serviceable cruising boat instead of a mere racing machine. As this is the assurance for which Sir Thomas Lipton claims to be waiting before challenging for the cup, its import will be understood. While President Cromwell expressed this as a purely personal opinion, still his influence in shaping the policy of the New York Yacht Club is so potent, and he voices the general sentiment of the active yachting men in the club so thoroughly that it may almost be taken as an official statement.

The discussion of the working of the new rule in last night's meeting was unqualifiedly favorable. The yachtsmen are delighted with the performances of the one-design class of thirty-footers of the New York Yacht Club, with the twenty-two foot class of the Atlantic Yacht Club, and with the work of Doris, the forty-eight footer owned by S. Reed Anthony. All are anxious, however, to see the operation of the rule in the larger classes. Mr. Cromwell stated that he believed a seventy-footer built to the new rule would beat Mineola, Yankee, and the present seventies twenty minutes in thirty miles, while a new Reliance would beat the old Reliance and her kind ten minutes in thirty miles, while after the races the boat would be worth something. He is anxious to see the experiment tried, and thinks it will be shortly, leading to the adoption of the new rule for America's Cup races.

The meeting appointed a committee to meet a committee of the New York Yacht Club on Nov. 20 at the New York Yacht Clubhouse to consider the question of a universal rule, in accordance with an invitation from England to participate in an international conference. The Yacht Racing Association of England has invited delegates to a convention to secure the adoption of one rule for all countries. Henry Howard, who was in England last year, reports that the English are favorable to the general adoption of the present American rule, and that there is a splendid chance of its being made universal. This will mean many international races in all classes of boats.

The meeting also appointed a committee to meet the New York Yacht Club committee to consider the reduction of the present scale of allowances to 60 per cent., and other questions concerning the conduct of racing. The same men compose both committees. They are Oliver E. Cromwell, Charles P. Tower, Edward B. McClellan, T. T. Hill, G. P. Granbery, J. Wilmer Hanan, and H. de B. Parsons. The second meeting will be held at the New York Yacht Club house on Nov. 26.

Ward Dickson, E. C. Seward, Charles F. Kirky, Willard Fisher, and Harry Stevenson were appointed a committee to nominate officers for the association for next year, to report at the March meeting.

ST. MARY'S C. C. SMOKER.

Mixed Boxing and Wrestling Programme Enjoyed by Big Crowd.

The semi-annual smoker of the St. Mary's Catholic Club was held at the clubhouse, 012 East 151st Street, last night, when an interesting programme of boxing, wrestling, and singing was enjoyed by a big crowd of members and their friends. The boxing was confined to exhibition bouts of three rounds in each class. Andy McGarry and J. Reilly of the Mott Haven Athletic Club put up a lively bout in the opening event. They were followed by Eddie Boyleston and J. Callahan, Union Settlement Athletic Club, and J. Hickey and E. Armstrong, Mohawk Athletic Club, both of which were enjoyed by the spectators. The wrestling bouts brought together W. Dorn and J. Keating, Mohawk Athletic Club; D. Wolkins and J. Bradshaw, Boys' Club, and D. Devlin and P. Weiss, Mott Haven Athletic Club. The wrestling was of the catch-as-catch-can style. The musical portion of the programme was furnished by Billy Rieger, blackface; Jack Tierney and Phil Kearney, comedians, and Gene Gossen, vocalist.

THE COMMERCIAL WORLD

GRAIN.—WHEAT—Selling orders poured into the wheat market at the opening yesterday and prices gave way 1⅝c on the May option at New York in consequence. Almost immediately, however, there was a rally which grew in importance as the day progressed until before the close the loss had been fully regained, and the market was selling within about half a cent of the season's highest point. Last prices were ½c above Saturday, having reacted slightly from top. Most of the early depression was due to a break of 1¼d at Liverpool, which was supposed to represent heavy world's shipments and more reassuring news from Russia. Subsequent private cables on the other hand failed to indicate that the Russian outlook was very much improved, and this with advices to the effect that incessant rains had caused damage in the Argentine, gave the leading Chicago bull an opportunity to run in the shorts. Some of the late cables said there was a chance for shipments of wheat from Odessa being stopped by Tuesday; Broomhall cabled that in Southern Russia land owners and big farmers had marketed about all of their wheat. Liverpool also rallied somewhat on this news, and at the close was only ¾ to ⅝d net lower. At the same time Budapest closed 12 points down. Exporters were conspicuous again, taking 30 loads of wheat, while it was reported from Duluth that the export sales of flour on Saturday were the largest ever made in one day. According to Broomhall world's shipments were 12,128,000 bushels, including 3,232,000 bushels from Russia. Last week's shipments aggregated 12,016,000 bushels. In the visible supply there was an increase of 1,132,000 bushels, compared with 1,840,000 bushels a year ago. Interior receipts were about 100,000 bushels ahead of last year, but seaport clearances proved to be fairly liberal of both wheat and flour. The cash market in New York closed steady with prices as follows: No. 2 red, 96¾c, elevator, and 98¼c, free on board, afloat; No. 1 Northern, Duluth, $1.01⅝, and No. 1 Northern, Manitoba, 99⅝c, free on board, afloat.

CORN—The local corn market was somewhat less active, and at first showed a declining tendency, but in the afternoon rallied with wheat and closed ⅛c lower to ¼c net higher. Bull houses were buyers of May in Chicago, but the crowd sold on larger carlot estimate, rather liberal receipts, and the decline of ½ to 1d at Liverpool. In connection with world's shipments of 2,775,000 bushels, compared with 1,902,000 bushels the previous week. The visible supply decreased 346,000 bushels, and seaboard clearances amounted to 290,000 bushels. On export account the sales were 56 loads. No. 2 corn was quoted at 62c, elevator, and 61¼c, free on board, afloat; No. 2 white, 63¼c, and No. 2 yellow, 64½c, free on board afloat.

COTTON.—After some early irregularity the cotton market ruled generally firm on the bullish crop estimate by a prominent English authority, Mr. Buston, and predictions for unfavorable weather in the Northwestern belt. The close was 2 or 3 points off from the best, under realizing, but at a net advance of 15@18 points. Sales were estimated at 450,000 bales. The market opened firm at an advance of 4@7 points, and in the first few minutes sold up to a net advance of 7@9 points on covering of shorts who had probably sold last week, in the expectation that Russian news would become worse instead of better, and who were consequently disappointed over the reports from abroad yesterday morning, showing a stronger market for Russian securities. Around 10.58 for January, however, offerings increased, owing to the big estimates for to-morrow's receipts at New Orleans and Houston, and during the middle of the morning the market declined to a net loss of 4@5 points, or around 10.45 for January. At this figure covering by early sellers was attracted, and toward noon the market rallied on the unfavorable weather forecast calling for lower temperatures and possible snow in the Northwestern belt and the estimates by the English crop expert placing the yield at 10,250,000 bales. This estimate was expected to influence the Liverpool cables this morning, and during the afternoon there was a fair demand, with the market ruling generally firm, and while the close was called barely steady, prices were not far from the top. Southern spot markets were somewhat irregular, ⅛c lower to 1-16c higher, but the tone was firm on the average, and sales were moderately good at the important point. Port receipts for the day overran expectation, but the pointing showing of Liverpool futures was modified to some extent by the good demand for spot cotton at a decline of 2 points.

LIVERPOOL, Oct. 30.—Spot cotton—Good demand; sales, 10,000 bales; speculation and export, 1,000 bales; American, 9,000 bales; receipts, 16,000 bales, all American; middling upland, 5.70d. Futures opened quiet and steady, 1 to 3 points lower; closed barely steady, at a net decline of 3@5 points. October and October-November, 5.58; November-December, 5.63; December-January, 5.66; January-February, 5.68; February-March, 5.70; March-April, 5.71; April-May, 5.73; May-June, 5.74; June-July, 5.76. Manchester—Yarns dull; cloths quiet.

COFFEE.—The coffee market showed renewed weakness under scattering liquidation in the absence of bull support, and after opening quiet at a net decline of 10@15 points, closed easy at a net loss of 20 points. Sales were reported of only 40,250 bags. The initial loss was in line with lower French cables, which reported a decline of ½f in the Havre market, and the full receipts at primary points, together with the barely steady appearance of the primary markets. Rio was 50 reis higher, but the rate of Brazilian exchange was 1-32d lower, and Santos declined 100 reis. Receipts at the two ports were 22,000 bags in excess of the same time last year, or 63,000 bags against 11,000 bags, and while the total Brazilian movement so far for the season is still about 220,000 bags behind that of a year ago, it is evident that it would not require many days of such comparisons as are now made to cut down the deficiency, after which any continued gain would be added to estimate of the current crop. The interior movement showed indications of an immediate falling off, the Jundiahy reporting 36,000 bags, against 21,000 last year, while Sao Paulo receipts were 47,005 bags, against 31,300 last year.

The market for spot coffee was easy, with quotations ranging from 8¼ to 8⅜c for Rio No. 7.

The total warehouse deliveries in the United States for the week were 197,813 bags, against 142,385 last week and 195,263 last year. Of the former amount New York reported 123,440 bags. Santos receipts for the week aggregated 290,000 bags, against 247,000 last week and 258,000 last year. Receipts at Rio were 111,000 bags, against 112,000 last week and 77,000 last year. Rio cleared 142,000 bags to the United States during the week and 31,000 to Europe; Santos cleared 46,000 to the United States and 176,000 to Europe. Receipts at Bahia for the week were 9,700 bags; present stock, 38,000 bags; to Germany, 4,100 bags, and to the rest of Europe, 2,900 bags.

We, the undersigned, all being persons of full age and citizens of the United States, and at least nine of us being residents of the State of New York, desiring to become a corporation under and by virtue of the provisions of the Railroad Law, for the purpose of building, maintaining, and operating a railroad, do hereby certify and state as follows:

The kind of railroad to be built and operated shall be an underground tunnel railroad of standard gauge, with approach to surface at or near the eastern terminus, and also at points between termini, and with surface and other occupancy of land thereat, for necessary and convenient buildings, stations, fixtures, machinery, and access to the surface, and with all other necessary facilities and appurtenances; and said railroad is to be occupied by electricity or other suitable power.

THE FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Advance; Call Money Rates, 4@5½ Per Cent.

More Hopeful Russian Position a Favorable Factor—Money Higher.

The absence of any serious culmination on Sunday in the Russian disorders exerted a favorable influence yesterday on the financial markets of Berlin and London, and the note of hope in the London market, which sent over higher quotations for American securities before the opening of the local Exchange and followed this with buying orders in moderate volume, found reflection here. There were, however, other factors at work on prices which brought about a dip by the general list to a point well below Saturday's level, and not until the closing hour were the losses recovered and modest gains substituted for them. One of the matters offsetting the cheerfulness growing out of the better news from Russia was the further sharp break in Metropolitan Street Railway shares, which had declined nearly 10 points, reckoning from yesterday's low price of 117¾, without important rallies. One of yesterday's periods of weakness was brought about by the slump in these shares from 119¾ to 117¾. Like previous declines of the same nature, yesterday's drop was explained on the floor of the Stock Exchange as being due to the bogy of municipal ownership, but this is not, perhaps, altogether satisfactory. The subsequent recovery in the stock, accompanied as it was by a similar upward turn in Rock Island shares, was not without influence on sentiment. While the final gains in the general list were measured in fractions there were exceptions, notably so in American Smelting, which rose 3⅝ points, and in Canadian Pacific, where the advance was 2⅛ points, and in American Locomotive, St. Paul, Tennessee Coal and Iron, Reading, and People's Gas. Atchison shares were unaffected by the news of the serious accident near Kansas City.

As a result of the preparations under way for the Nov. 1 disbursements and the calling of loans incident to the shifting of Japanese funds, which have been out at interest, call money rates moved up to 5½ per cent. yesterday, and the bulk of the day's loans was arranged on a 5 per cent. basis.

Indications that rates may be temporarily, at least, firmer were found in the renewal of the interior demands on this centre. Through the Sub-Treasury $500,000 was transferred to Chicago, making $1,000,000 sent to that point since the last bank statement was made up, and in addition $200,000 was in like manner shipped to St. Louis yesterday. In their operations with the Sub-Treasury thus far the banks have lost $1,280,000, this comparing with a gain of $472,000 a week ago. Following the higher rates for call money demand sterling eased off yesterday, quotations declining some 10 points. No engagements of gold for export were announced, although these seemed probable at the end of last week. The Bank of France has been unwilling, so far, to pay interest on gold in transit.

The exchange situation, and in fact the financial position abroad, may be affected favorably if the cables received after the close of business yesterday regarding the reforms now granted by the Czar are confirmed. It is as yet uncertain in what position this surrender leaves the abandoned loan negotiations.

STERLING EXCHANGE EASIER.

20-Point Reaction Prevents Gold Exports for the Present.

A reaction of 20 points in sterling exchange rates prevented yesterday the export of gold, which was considered imminent at the close of last week. The direct cause of the easier exchange situation was the advance in money rates here, due to the preparations for end-of-the-month payments and to the resumption of shipments to the West through the Sub-Treasury.

Demand sterling, which sold at 4.8715 at the close of last week, declined yesterday to 4.8690, and sales were made for next Saturday's steamer at 4.8685. There was no decline in the rate of sterling exchange at Paris to offset the reaction here. Call money was lent yesterday as high as 5½ per cent., and closed for the day at that figure.

There was transferred to Chicago, through the Sub-Treasury, $500,000, making $1,000,000 sent to that city in the last two business days, and $200,000 was sent to St. Louis. It was said in Wall Street that further sums were likely to be sent to Chicago before the close of the week.

Advices received by some New York bankers yesterday indicated a freer movement of cotton at the South and larger exports of that staple. An increase in cotton exports would, of course, increase the supply of bills and serve, to some extent at least, to bring about lower rates of exchange.

North American Co.'s Inspection.

Charles W. Wetmore, President of the North American Company; Edwin M. Bulkley, of Spencer Trask & Co., a Director, and C. D. Smithers, of F. S. Smithers & Co. returned Saturday from a trip of inspection of the properties of the important subsidiary companies of the North American Company—the United Railways, Union Electric Light and Power, and Laclede Gas Companies of St. Louis; the Milwaukee Railway and Lighting Company and Milwaukee Light, Heat, and Traction Company, and the Detroit Edison Company. All were found to be in greatly improved condition.

MONEY AND EXCHANGE.

Money on call loaned at 4@5½ per cent., closing at 5½ per cent. Most of the day's loans were made at 5 per cent.

Time money rates, 4½@4¾ per cent. for all periods.

Mercantile paper rates, 4¾@5 per cent. for sixty to ninety days' indorsed bills receivable and choice four to six months' single names, and 5@5½ per cent. for others.

Clearing House statement: Exchanges, $161,183,023; balances, $6,222,142. The Sub-Treasury debit was $81,412.

Foreign exchange was slightly easier. Nominal rates were $4.84½ for sixty days and $4.88 for demand. Rates for actual business were as follows: Sixty days, $4.8340; demand, $4.87; cables, $4.8765; commercial bills, $4.83@$4.83¾.

Commercial bills were quoted: Francs, 5.19 and 5.16; reichsmarks, 94⅛@94 9-16 and 95 3-16@95 7-32; guilders, 39 15-16 and 40 1-16.

Exchange on New York at domestic centres: Boston—Par. Chicago—10c discount. New Orleans—Commercial, 50c discount; bank, $1 premium. Savannah—Buying, 50c discount; selling, 75c premium. Charleston—Buying, par; selling, 1-10 premium. San Francisco—Sight, 2c; telegraphic, 5c. Cincinnati—Par. St. Louis—25@10c discount.

LONDON STOCK MARKET.

LONDON, Oct. 30.—In the market to-day the supplies of money were abundant and rates were easier than last mid-week. Discounts were firm. Bar gold was in much Continental request.

Trading on the Stock Exchange opened with a fairly good tendency as a result of the calmness on the Continent, the Russian situation being regarded more hopefully. Prices rallied in many directions. The ease of money was also a bull factor. A small failure was announced, but it did not affect the market. Consols were fairly supported though slightly easier owing to stiff contangos. They closed firmer. Home rails mostly had a better tone.

Americans opened dull, rallied soon to above parity on New York buying; afterward became unsettled and easier on realizations and New York selling and closed weak. Grand Trunk was flat on the disappointing revenue statement.

Foreigners improved. Russians hardened considerably, but closed weak on Paris selling.

Japanese Imperial Sixes of 1904 were quoted at 101¾.

Bar silver steady at 28⅞d per ounce.

Gold premiums are quoted as follows: Madrid, 28.82; Lisbon, 5.50.

Bar gold, 77s 9⅝d. American eagles, 76s 4⅝d.

Bullion amounting to £27,000 was taken into the Bank of England to-day and £50,000 was withdrawn for shipment to the Continent.

In Continental Centres.

PARIS, Oct. 30.—Prices on the Bourse to-day opened with an upward tendency owing to the satisfactory reports from Russia received here early in the day.

Later reports, including the rumor of an attack upon Emperor Nicholas, caused prices to weaken. Russians were much depressed, Russian Imperial fours going down to 90 and Russian bonds of 1904 to 514.

At the close the market was feeble.

Three per cent. rentes, 99f 52½c for the account.

Exchange on London, 25f 14½c for checks.

BERLIN, Oct. 30.—Prices on the Boerse to-day were firmer on account of the receipt of no very bad news from Russia.

Exchange on London, 20 marks 45½ pfennigs for checks.

Discount rates—Short bills, 6 per cent.; three months bills, 1⅜ per cent.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Officials of the principal money-lending institutions in Wall Street comment privately upon the increased amount of high-priced stocks appearing in large speculative loans. This bears out the assertion so often made of late by conservative commentators that there has been, and is still in progress, an accumulation of high-priced stocks in the hands of a few aggressive speculators. It proves, also, that the investor, instead of buying such stocks on this advanced level of prices, has been tempted to sell. In no other way than through the selling of investment holdings could the speculative supply of certain stocks have been so materially increased. It has been supposed for some time by experienced observers of the market that various pools operating in high-priced stocks were being compelled to increase their lines in order to keep control of a certain percentage of the floating supply. It appears that they have been doing precisely that. Anybody who has followed the market closely in the last few weeks has known that such securities were not being distributed by the speculative public. There has not been any public in the market to speak of.

* * *

In a 5 per cent. money market interest charges begin to eat upon an account that is loaded up with high-priced stocks. To carry New York Central at 150 in a 5 per cent. money market costs 7½ per cent. on the par value of the stock, and the holder receives in dividends only 5 per cent. on the par value, a difference to the disadvantage of the account of 2½ per cent. To carry St. Paul at 180 with 5 per cent. money costs 9 per cent. on the par value of the stock, and the dividend return is 7 per cent. on the par value, a loss of 2 per cent. To carry Reading at 125 in a 5 per cent. money market costs 6¼ per cent. on the par value, and the stock yields 4 per cent., a difference of 2¼ per cent. To carry Canadian Pacific at 175 with 5 per cent. money costs 8¾ per cent. on the face value of the stock, and it yields 6 per cent. Comparisons of this sort lead sooner or later to Steel preferred, a seasoned 7 per cent. stock, which is selling out of line with other established dividend payers, either among railroad or industrial securities. To carry Steel preferred at 105 with 5 per cent. money costs 5¼ per cent. on par value, and the stock yields 7 per cent., a difference in favor of the account of 1¾ per cent.

* * *

The position of those operators who have advanced a number of dividend paying stocks to prices at which they no longer appeal either to investors or careful speculative buyers is made more difficult by the fact that Wall Street and the public at large are in a critical mood. In the excitement of a broad and active general speculation such disparities between the cost of money and the dividend yield of securities are largely lost sight of, or, at least, may be offset by rumors of deals, increased dividends, concealed assets, &c.; but with the market dull, with the public holding aloof, and with Wall Street at leisure to look over and under and all around every question presented for consideration, such things are dwelt upon unfavorably. Any pool or combination of operators that has been responsible for producing a striking inequality in the market becomes then a target for criticism.

* * *

The wide publicity given to the last annual Wabash report and the unfriendly criticism based upon the figures therein presented have failed to bring Wabash securities upon the market in any volume. The reason that a showing so highly unsatisfactory at first glance has not produced more liquidation probably is that Wabash securities are held largely by persons who are incapable of reasoning backward. Perhaps their association with the property has developed that faculty. At all events, it is said by some of them that the annual report, upon examination, will be seen to wear a worse face than is warranted by the condition of the property. They allege, in short, that the report took the worst possible aspect for the purpose of discouraging tired holders of the company's securities. If that really was the object of making such a report, it has been defeated by the patience of the security holders. It is said that in order to bring operating expenses up to 83 per cent. of gross earnings heavy charges which should properly have been made to capital account were included in operating expenses. Persons familiar with the Wabash property believe that it can be operated from 65 to 67 per cent. of gross, and that consequently there is a difference of more than 15 per cent. between what was charged to operating expenses on $24,000,000 gross and what should have been charged to that account. The recent Gould-Ramsey contest showed that actual control of the Wabash property did not rest in the hands of the Goulds. They had to borrow stock and bonds in the open market and canvass Wall Street for proxies in order to control the meeting. It is argued that sooner or later the Goulds will have to acquire actual control of Wabash securities in order to protect themselves against the Pennsylvania or some other rival that might unexpectedly make an offer which the holders of a majority of Wabash stock and bonds would be tempted to accept. If the Pennsylvania, for example, were to offer a 3½ per cent. bond in exchange for the Wabash debenture Bs the outside holders of Wabash Bs might find the temptation irresistible, as a 3½ per cent. Pennsylvania bond would be worth probably par.

* * *

The Wabash earnings soon will cease to compare with those of the World's Fair year, and then, it is said, the freight business ought to show increases. The World's Fair business cost the Wabash about all it got out of it, owing to the large expenditures that had to be made in and around St. Louis to take care of it. It was chiefly valuable as an advertisement.

It is positively and authoritatively denied that Southern Pacific will be placed on a dividend basis in January.

* * *

The Tammany crowd has been heavily long of Metropolitan Street Railway.

* * *

The heaviest calling of loans reported yesterday was by Kuhn, Loeb & Co., who were said to have withdrawn from the market during the day about $10,000,000. This was supposed to be the Japanese money. The National City Bank and J. P. Morgan & Co. were reported to be lending freely.

* * *

American Smelting and Refining common makes new high records these days without attracting much attention. It touched 136⅝ yesterday, and closed at the highest eighth. It is a stock that has no very persuasive influence upon the general market.

* * *

The more cheerful feeling pervading foreign markets yesterday had its direct effect upon this market through a higher range of quotations in London for American stocks. On the opening of this market traders who had carried short stocks over the week's end covered their contracts at very moderate profits, if any, and stood by to await developments. Slight advances seemed to be bringing in stocks, brokers reported from the floor, and the market degenerated after the first hour into a perfunctory traders' affair. There was very little commission house business. Various pools made pretense of keeping up the activity, but they accomplished very little. The commissions they paid out doubtless were charged up to expense, with little or nothing to balance them on the other side. The only exhibitions of aggressive activity in the forenoon were in American Smelting and Refining and Kansas City Southern preferred. Support appeared through the general list as often as it was needed. Steel common was strongly supported again on the level of 37. It sold at that price, but did not go below it, and closed at a recovery of ⅝ per cent. Union Pacific, which has been supported several times in a very aggressive manner on the level of 131, sold in the first hour at 131¼, and rallied in the last hour to 132⅝.

* * *

In the last half hour a general and fairly effective demonstration was made against the short interest. The movement started in a few stocks, notably Tennessee Coal and Iron, Canadian Pacific, Reading, American Locomotive, and American Smelting, in which the activity of the forenoon was resumed, and gradually extended so as to include practically the entire list. The buying on this recovery was rather aggressive, but as to its general character there could be two opinions. The Gates crowd, which had not appeared openly in the market for several weeks, was reported in the forenoon to be supporting various stocks, notably Union Pacific, with orders so distributed as to have the appearance of other and stronger origin.

* * *

After two days the selling pressure upon the Rock Island issues was renewed yesterday, the common stock declining to 28¾, the lowest point so far reached on this movement. The first transaction in the preferred stock occurred long after mid-day. This recent selling of Rock Island securities has also included St. Louis and San Francisco second preferred, which touched 64 yesterday. It is a 4 per cent. stock. The principal members of the Moore crowd returned to Wall Street yesterday, but, although they were seen by a number of persons anxious to know how the weakness of the Rock Island issues could be explained, nobody seemed to get much light on the subject. Along with the member of the Moore crowd who has been in the West came President Winchell of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway Company (not the Rock Island Company, nor the Rock Island, Chicago and Pacific Railroad Company,) and he participated in the conferences that were held during the day. The principal support for Rock Island common on yesterday's further decline appeared to come from the short interest.

The Importance of Precious Metal Values in Copper Ores.

The Greene Consolidated Copper Company's report for August shows that its copper costs it about twelve cents a pound. This is probably nearly the present average cost of copper production.

The SAN LUIS MINING COMPANY and the George A. Treadwell Mining Company have such large gold and silver values in their product that the entire cost of production is paid by the precious metals, and the copper is all profit. It costs nothing.

With copper selling at seventeen cents a pound there is a handsome profit upon a cost of twelve cents, but it is only a short time since copper was selling at eleven cents, and in the swing of the pendulum it is likely to go back there again, and perhaps to nine or ten cents. Everybody makes money when prices are high. The test comes when prices are low.

The San Luis and the Treadwell Companies both have copper properties as large as the largest. They can go on producing copper longer than any of their present stockholders can live to enjoy their dividends. They are making good all that has ever been claimed for them, and are already producing and making handsome earnings, which will soon take the form of dividends, and which will increase as their development and equipment increase.

The strength of their position is that while they can earn as much as any other copper producers while copper is high, they can keep on earning and paying dividends when other copper producers may have to shut up shop because copper is low.

This is something that investors who are buying copper stocks cannot afford to overlook.

The SAN LUIS MINING COMPANY offers for sale the balance of its Treasury stock to provide additional funds for betterments which will still further largely increase its production and profits.

Prices will be quoted on application.

Boston Copper Only Active Copper Stock—It Gains 1⅜—Heavy Trading In Albany and Susquehanna Bonds.

Sluggishness characterized the trading in curb stocks yesterday. There was little movement, and the volume of sales was small. Standard Oil again advanced sharply, and closed at 700. It is up 36 points within the last three weeks. Chicago Subway, of which 900 shares were sold, showed weakness in the forenoon, but closed exactly where it opened, at 46¼. Mercantile Marine preferred fell off ¼. Nearly all the copper stocks were stationary. Greene Consolidated's high and low prices differed only ⅜. United lost ¼. Boston Copper was an exception to the general dullness, rising 1⅜ on transactions in 12,000 shares. There was continued activity in Albany and Susquehanna bonds.

The principal transactions reported yesterday in the outside market, with high, low, and last prices, were as follows:

Boston Consolidated was the feature in the local market to-day, advancing to 14¼ on large transactions. The buying in this issue is by the same parties who have been so persistently acquiring the stock of late. North Butte gained a point in the early trading, selling at 58, but later lost the advance. Atlantic and Isle Royale lost about a point each on stop orders. There was more or less realizing in evidence in the afternoon trading, but prices held very well, and the undertone is good. The close was steady.

TRADING IN BALTIMORE.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Oct. 30.—The feature of the trading to-day was the Maryland and Pennsylvania Railroad income bonds, which sold up to 68. This is a jump of 7¾ since last Monday and an advance of 3 points over the last sale on Saturday. Reports of a deal for the property are generally credited with being responsible for the rise.

It is said that an investigation of the property has been in progress for some time, though it is still stated by Alexander Brown & Sons, who, with associates, control the property, that nothing is known of any deal for the road. Very little of this stock has been offered for sale recently, and the last sale recorded was at about 24. The Maryland and Pennsylvania is an independent line with an entrance into Baltimore.

Western Maryland common stock sold down to 14¾, the decline being accredited to the downward trend in the New York market. This stock has been very active of late and sold up to 17 a week ago.

There were fractional declines in a number of other issues. The close was dull, but steady. Shares, 1,235.

Swift & Company's sales of fresh beef in New York City for the week ending Saturday, Oct. 28, averaged 5.98 cents per pound.—Adv.

PHILADELPHIA PRICES.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Oct. 30.—The local feature to-day was an advance in Lehigh Coal and Navigation Trust certificates from 113 to 117⅝. The movement was based upon the announcement that arrangements are being made in New York for the absorption of the property, but by whom it has not been divulged. It was acknowledged to-day that three different interests want the property—the Goulds, a syndicate of German bankers, and an unknown interest. The German syndicate only took up the proposition last Saturday, but its representative is known to represent powerful moneyed interests. Lehigh Valley was also strong and effective, support was given Philadelphia Company, renewed liquidation in United Gas Improvement sent its price down to 90½, but inside support was then forthcoming, and the price rallied to Saturday's level.

Total sales, 35,938 shares.

Regiment to Seek Less Costly Site—Ground Worth Nearly $1,000,000.

The city practically has decided to sell the Twenty-second Regiment Armory property, covering the entire block bounded by Broadway and Columbus Avenue, Sixty-seventh and Sixty-eighth Streets. No definite price has been fixed, but through the Controller's office it has been made known that bids between $925,000 and $1,000,000 will be entertained. Within a few days the property has been brought to the attention of many of the realty corporations and individual operators, although so far as can be learned no formal offers have yet been submitted.

The determination to sell the block is based on the recent large increase in its value, making it advisable to erect another armory for the regiment on some less costly site. It is also thought that the establishing of the regiment at some other point will cause it to be recruited more rapidly.

The block, which was bought by the city about twenty years ago, comprises about 22 lots, with frontages of 225 feet on Broadway, 200 feet on Columbus Avenue, 224 feet on Sixty-seventh Street, and 327 feet on Sixty-eighth.

IOWA CENTRAL REPORT.

A Deficit of $77,073—Bright Prospects for This Year, Hawley Says.

The net receipts of the Iowa Central Railway Company for the year ended June 30 were $551,855, an increase of $85,700 over the previous year. Additional income from interest on investments, rentals, and miscellaneous sources made the total income $753,074. Deductions of $830,148 leave a deficit of $77,073. When this is subtracted from the surplus left on June 30, 1904, the present surplus amounts to $1,839,871.

"Prospects for traffic for the ensuing year," says President Edwin Hawley in his report," are most favorable. The crop of small grains, which has already been harvested, is largely in excess of the yield for the preceding year. The maturity of the corn crop is much further advanced than at the corresponding date twelve months ago, while the prospective year's yield promises to be the largest for some years past, and of a more satisfactory quality.

"Since the close of the fiscal year there has been a general stimulation in trade conditions, which is indicated by increased earnings for the three months ending Sept. 30, 1905. For that period receipts from freight traffic show a gain of $47,750, and from passenger traffic $14,201. At the same time economies in operations and increased facilities for handling traffic should add materially to the net returns for the year."

Northern Securities Stock Round-Up.

The officers of the Northern Securities Company are making a special effort to reach all the stockholders of the company who have not yet presented their certificates in exchange for the Great Northern and Northern Pacific stocks to which they are entitled. Unless this Northern Securities stock is deposited before Nov. 8, the holders of it will not be able to participate in the new issue of Great Northern preferred. There is but a small amount of Northern Securities still out.

HUGHES DECLINES TO AID INSURANCE PROSECUTION

It Would Hurt the Investigation if He Agreed to Do So.

HE MAY CHANGE, FRIENDS SAY

Situation Will Be Different When the Inquiry Ends—More Light on President McCurdy's Salary.

Charles E. Hughes, counsel for the Armstrong Investigating Committee, issued this statement yesterday with reference to District Attorney Jerome's declaration that he would ask to have Mr. Hughes appointed special prosecutor for the insurance cases when they go to the Grand Jury:

"As I was one of Mr. Jerome's nominators, it is proper for me to say that I shall vote for Mr. Jerome, and that I hope he will be elected; but I wish to make it clear that I have no idea of taking charge of any criminal prosecution which may grow out of the pending inquiry. That is farthest from my thought.

"I say this because I believe it would be a misfortune if the idea were to go abroad that I was conducting the investigation, or doing my part in it, with the object of making it a preliminary to a criminal trial. It should be clearly understood that it is not my function or purpose in this investigation to prove men either guilty or innocent of crime.

"It is my purpose to elicit the facts unsparingly but impartially, to be dealt with according to their merits, and, so far as possible, to uncover whatever abuses exist, to the end that the important business of life insurance may be properly safeguarded. This is my sole duty and my sole aim. It is essential to the success of the investigation that this should not be obscured."

It is understood, however, that Mr. Hughes's statement does not preclude his serving in the capacity suggested by Mr. Jerome. Mr. Hughes's friends say that his present idea is to make it absolutely plain that Mr. Jerome's suggestion will not influence him with regard to the present investigation. After the investigation of the Armstrong Committee is done, it is believed that Mr. Hughes will consider a proposal for him to become special prosecutor for Mr. Jerome.

More details came to light yesterday as to how President Richard A. McCurdy of the Mutual Life got his salary increased from $100,000 a year to $150,000 two years ago. It seems that when this fact was disclosed by Mr. Hughes it was as great a surprise to many of the Mutual Trustees as to any one else. This is supported by the statement made to Mr. Hughes by George G. Haven, who asked to be called as a witness that he might testify that he was not a member of the Salaries' Committee when Mr. McCurdy's salary was increased the last time.

It is learned that the question of salaries has not come before the Mutual's Directors recently in definite form. It has been customary for the Salaries' Committee to report that on a certain date it met and fixed salaries for the ensuing year and to have its report approved without giving details. This explains the statement of several Trustees before the Armstrong Committee that they did not remember that the board had taken any action on salaries of officers.

The issue is being sharply joined between the members of the Mutual's board who believe that the affairs of the company should be sifted, and those who propose to stand by President McCurdy's administration regardless of the report of the investigating committee. The belief has been expressed by some of Mr. McCurdy's friends that no report recommending his retirement could pass the board as at present constituted. Men who are pushing the investigation met this argument with the assertion that a report from the investigating committee hearing out the disclosures before the Armstrong Committee would come with such overwhelming force as to be irresistible. They point to the situation that arose in the Equitable Life when the report of Supt. Hendricks was made public last Summer as substantiating this conclusion.

Influential policy holders down town are considering the formation of a policy holders' committee to meet this situation should it arise. A plan outlined yesterday by a prominent financier who is a large policy holder in the Mutual but not a member of its Board of Trustees was that a committee should be formed of men whose names would carry weight throughout the country to solicit proxies for use in the next election of Trustees in case the McCurdy faction in the board succeeded in overthrowing an adverse report by the investigating committee.

William H. Truesdale and John Auchincloss, the members of the Mutual's investigating committee, were in consultation yesterday regarding the selection of a third member to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Effingham Morris of Philadelphia. Mr. Truesdale said:

"We have informally consulted several members of the Board of Trustees, but have not reached any conclusion as yet. We may have a name to announce to-morrow. The investigating committee will not take any action as regards counsel until it has filled the vacancy in its membership."

Among the names under consideration is that of Stuyvesant Fish, President of the Illinois Central Railroad. Mr. Fish is known to be strongly in favor of the investigation. He will return to-day from a Western trip.

THE MAYOR STARTS NEW CITY LIGHT PLANT

Municipal Ownership Experiment Formally Begun Yesterday.

THE NEW BRIDGE ALL AGLOW

When Mayor McClellan in the presence of Bridge Commissioner Best, Street Cleaning Commissioner Woodbury, Deputy Controller Phillips, Chief Engineer O. F. Nichols, K. L. Martin, Engineer in Charge; O. M. Kelly, Assistant Engineer; George W. Pratt and Oscar W. Horne, Consulting Engineer pulled down a few copper switches in the municipal electric experimental station at Tompkins and Delancey Streets at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon all the arc and incandescent lamps on the Williamsburg Bridge burst forth aglow. This is the electric generating plant through which the city hopes to make an annual saving of $12,000 in lighting the 124 arcs and 136 incandescent globes which stretch from one end of the bridge to the other. The plant cost $90,000 and is owned by the city.

The new plant was designed by H. de B. Parsons, and Ralph J. F. Gerstel erected the plant, which consists of two buildings and a smokestack 225 feet high. It is the first electric light works in the country to get its steam power as the result of the burning of garbage. The building which contains the furnaces and boilers, is in charge of the Street Cleaning Department, and the electric generating plant is under the Bridge Department and operated by Engineer Martin and a corps of assistants.

The three generators have a capacity of 150 kilowatts each and the three cross power condensers exert 150 horse power each. The engines are of the Ideal pattern with Burke electric generators. The capacity of the boilers is 400 horse power each.
